CHRIST'S DIVINITY—HUMANITY

(A) SCRIPTURAL TESTIMONY concerning his divinity.

701—(1) His Own Words.

Lk 22:69 But from now on, the Son of Man will be seated at the right hand of the mighty God."

Lk 22:70 They all asked, "Are you then the Son of God?" He replied, "You are right in saying I am."

Jn 10:30 I and the Father are one."

*Jn 10:37 Do not believe me unless I do what my Father does.

Jn 10:38 But if I do it, even though you do not believe me, believe the miracles, that you may know and understand that the Father is in me, and I in the Father."

Jn 12:45 When he looks at me, he sees the one who sent me.

Jn 14:7 If you really knew me, you would know my Father as well. From now on, you do know him and have seen him."

Jn 14:8 Philip said, "Lord, show us the Father and that will be enough for us."

Jn 14:9 Jesus answered: "Don't you know me, Philip, even after I have been among you such a long time? Anyone who has seen me has seen the Father. How can you say, 'Show us the Father'?

Jn 14:10 Don't you believe that I am in the Father, and that the Father is in me? The words I say to you are not just my own. Rather, it is the Father, living in me, who is doing his work.

Jn 16:15 All that belongs to the Father is mine. That is why I said the Spirit will take from what is mine and make it known to you.

See Christ Eternal, 709.

702—(2) Testimony of the Apostles.

Mt 16:16 Simon Peter answered, "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Jn 1:1 In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

Jn 1:2 He was with God in the beginning.

Ro 1:4 and who through the Spirit of holiness was declared with power to be the Son of God by his resurrection from the dead: Jesus Christ our Lord.

Ro 9:5 Theirs are the patriarchs, and from them is traced the human ancestry of Christ, who is God over all, forever praised! Amen. (Col 1:15)

Col 2:9 For in Christ all the fullness of the Deity lives in bodily form,

1Ti 3:16 Beyond all question, the mystery of godliness is great: He appeared in a body, was vindicated by the Spirit, was seen by angels, was preached among the nations, was believed on in the world, was taken up in glory. (1Ti 6:15)

Heb 1:3 The Son is the radiance of God's glory and the exact representation of his being, sustaining all things by his powerful word. After he had provided purification for sins, he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty in heaven. (Rev 19:16)

See Preeminence of Christ, 716; Christ Worshiped, 3922.

Mt 17:5 While he was still speaking, a bright cloud enveloped them, and a voice from the cloud said, "This is my Son, whom I love; with him I am well pleased. Listen to him!" (Jn 5:32, 37)

Jn 8:18 I am one who testifies for myself; my other witness is the Father, who sent me."

1Jn 5:9 We accept man's testimony, but God's testimony is greater because it is the testimony of God, which he has given about his Son.

Mk 1:24 "What do you want with us, Jesus of Nazareth? Have you come to destroy us? I know who you are—the Holy One of God!"

Mk 3:11 Whenever the evil spirits saw him, they fell down before him and cried out, "You are the Son of God."

Lk 4:41 Moreover, demons came out of many people, shouting, "You are the Son of God!" But he rebuked them and would not allow them to speak, because they knew he was the Christ.

Ac 19:15 One day the evil spirit answered them, "Jesus I know, and I know about Paul, but who are you?"

See Immutability, 2480.

710—(2) His Authority.

Mt 7:29 because he taught as one who had authority, and not as their teachers of the law.

Mt 28:18 Then Jesus came to them and said, "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me.

Mk 1:27 The people were all so amazed that they asked each other, "What is this? A new teaching—and with authority! He even gives orders to evil spirits and they obey him."

Jn 5:27 And he has given him authority to judge because he is the Son of Man.

711—(3) His Foreknowledge (N.M.).

712—(a) General References to.

Jn 6:64 Yet there are some of you who do not believe." For Jesus had known from the beginning which of them did not believe and who would betray him.

Jn 13:1 It was just before the Passover Feast. Jesus knew that the time had come for him to leave this world and go to the Father. Having loved his own who were in the world, he now showed them the full extent of his love.

Jn 13:11 For he knew who was going to betray him, and that was why he said not every one was clean.

Jn 18:4 Jesus, knowing all that was going to happen to him, went out and asked them, "Who is it you want?"

Jn 19:28 Later, knowing that all was now completed, and so that the Scripture would be fulfilled, Jesus said, "I am thirsty."

713—(b) Predicts his own Sufferings.

Mk 8:31 He then began to teach them that the Son of Man must suffer many things and be rejected by the elders, chief priests and teachers of the law, and that he must be killed and after three days rise again.

Lk 9:22 And he said, "The Son of Man must suffer many things and be rejected by the elders, chief priests and teachers of the law, and he must be killed and on the third day be raised to life."

Lk 12:50 But I have a baptism to undergo, and how distressed I am until it is completed!

Lk 22:37 It is written: 'And he was numbered with the transgressors'; and I tell you that this must be fulfilled in me. Yes, what is written about me is reaching its fulfillment." (Lk 24:7, 26, 46)

Jn 3:14 Just as Moses lifted up the snake in the desert, so the Son of Man must be lifted up, 714—(c) Foretells his Departure.

Jn 7:33 Jesus said, "I am with you for only a short time, and then I go to the one who sent me.

Jn 13:33 "My children, I will be with you only a little longer. You will look for me, and just as I told the Jews, so I tell you now: Where I am going, you cannot come.

Jn 14:28 "You heard me say, 'I am going away and I am coming back to you.' If you loved me, you would be glad that I am going to the Father, for the Father is greater than I.

Jn 16:5 "Now I am going to him who sent me, yet none of you asks me, 'Where are you going?' (Jn 16:10, 16, 28)

Jn 17:11 I will remain in the world no longer, but they are still in the world, and I am coming to you. Holy Father, protect them by the power of your name—the name you gave me—so that they may be one as we are one.

715—(4) His Lordship.

Lk 6:5 Then Jesus said to them, "The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath."

Ac 2:36 "Therefore let all Israel be assured of this: God has made this Jesus, whom you crucified, both Lord and Christ." (Ac 5:31; Ro 10:9; 1Co 1:9)

1Co 8:6 yet for us there is but one God, the Father, from whom all things came and for whom we live; and there is but one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom all things came and through whom we live.

1Co 12:3 Therefore I tell you that no one who is speaking by the Spirit of God says, "Jesus be cursed," and no one can say, "Jesus is Lord," except by the Holy Spirit. (Eph 4:5)

716—(5) His Preeminence. (Mt 3:11)

Jn 3:31 "The one who comes from above is above all; the one who is from the earth belongs to the earth, and speaks as one from the earth. The one who comes from heaven is above all. (Jn 13:13; Ac 2:36)

Ro 14:9 For this very reason, Christ died and returned to life so that he might be the Lord of both the dead and the living.

Col 1:18 And he is the head of the body, the church; he is the beginning and the firstborn from among the dead, so that in everything he might have the supremacy.

Heb 1:4 So he became as much superior to the angels as the name he has inherited is superior to theirs.

Lk 8:13 Those on the rock are the ones who receive the word with joy when they hear it, but they have no root. They believe for a while, but in the time of testing they fall away.

Emptiness of Life

Lk 11:24 "When an evil spirit comes out of a man, it goes through arid places seeking rest and does not find it. Then it says, 'I will return to the house I left.'

Lk 11:25 When it arrives, it finds the house swept clean and put in order.

Lk 11:26 Then it goes and takes seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they go in and live there. And the final condition of that man is worse than the first."

Lack of Spiritual Insight

Jn 6:63 The Spirit gives life; the flesh counts for nothing. The words I have spoken to you are spirit and they are life.

Jn 6:64 Yet there are some of you who do not believe." For Jesus had known from the beginning which of them did not believe and who would betray him.

Jn 6:66 From this time many of his disciples turned back and no longer followed him. (1Ti 5:15)

Love of the World

2Ti 4:10 for Demas, because he loved this world, has deserted me and has gone to Thessalonica. Crescens has gone to Galatia, and Titus to Dalmatia.

(D) SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT
(Selected Reading, Heb 5:11-14; 6:1-16)

995—(E) SPIRITUAL GROWTH (1), commanded.

In Fruitfulness

2Co 9:10 Now he who supplies seed to the sower and bread for food will also supply and increase your store of seed and will enlarge the harvest of your righteousness.

Into Christ

Eph 4:15 Instead, speaking the truth in love, we will in all things grow up into him who is the Head, that is, Christ. (Col 1:10)

In Love

1Th 3:12 May the Lord make your love increase and overflow for each other and for everyone else, just as ours does for you. (1Th 4:10)

To Perfection

Heb 6:1 Therefore let us leave the elementary teachings about Christ and go on to maturity, not laying again the foundation of repentance from acts that lead to death, and of faith in God,

Through the Word

1Pe 2:2 Like newborn babies, crave pure spiritual milk, so that by it you may grow up in your salvation,

By Accretion

2Pe 1:5 For this very reason, make every effort to add to your faith goodness; and to goodness, knowledge;

2Pe 1:6 and to knowledge, self-control; and to self-control, perseverance; and to perseverance, godliness;

In Grace and Knowledge

2Pe 3:18 But grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever! Amen.

See Divine Perfection, 2730.

996—(F) SPIRITUAL GROWTH (2), example of.

The Boy Samuel

1Sa 2:26 And the boy Samuel continued to grow in stature and in favor with the LORD and with men.

John the Baptist

Lk 1:80 And the child grew and became strong in spirit; and he lived in the desert until he appeared publicly to Israel.

The Boy Christ

Lk 2:40 And the child grew and became strong; he was filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him.

Lk 2:52 And Jesus grew in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men.

Paul

Ac 9:22 Yet Saul grew more and more powerful and baffled the Jews living in Damascus by proving that Jesus is the Christ.

The Thessalonians

2Th 1:3 We ought always to thank God for you, brothers, and rightly so, because your faith is growing more and more, and the love every one of you has for each other is increasing.

997—(G) SPIRITUAL MATURITY, how Secured.

By Putting away Childish Things

1Co 13:11 When I was a child, I talked like a child, I thought like a child, I reasoned like a child. When I became a man, I put childish ways behind me.

By Cultivating the Understanding

1Co 14:20 Brothers, stop thinking like children. In regard to evil be infants, but in your thinking be adults.

By Striving after the Christ Ideal

Eph 4:13 until we all reach unity in the faith and in the knowledge of the Son of God and become mature, attaining to the whole measure of the fullness of Christ. (Eph 4:15)

By Partaking of the Deeper Truths of the Gospel

Heb 5:14 But solid food is for the mature, who by constant use have trained themselves to distinguish good from evil.

By Overcoming Temptation

1Jn 2:14 I write to you, fathers, because you have known him who is from the beginning. I write to you, young men, because you are strong, and the word of God lives in you, and you have overcome the evil one.

See Spiritual Strength, 359.

998—(H) SPIRITUAL IMMATURITY

Inability to Receive Strong Doctrine

1Co 3:1 Brothers, I could not address you as spiritual but as worldly—mere infants in Christ.

1Co 3:2 I gave you milk, not solid food, for you were not yet ready for it. Indeed, you are still not ready. (1Co 14:20)

Need for Teaching

Gal 4:1 What I am saying is that as long as the heir is a child, he is no different from a slave, although he owns the whole estate.

Gal 4:2 He is subject to guardians and trustees until the time set by his father.

Gal 4:3 So also, when we were children, we were in slavery under the basic principles of the world.

Instability of Faith

Eph 4:14 Then we will no longer be infants, tossed back and forth by the waves, and blown here and there by every wind of teaching and by the cunning and craftiness of men in their deceitful scheming.

Continuance in Primary Principles

Heb 5:12 In fact, though by this time you ought to be teachers, you need someone to teach you the elementary truths of God's word all over again. You need milk, not solid food! (1Pe 2:2)

(I) SPIRITUAL PROGRESS

999—(1) A Characteristic of the Righteous.

Job 17:9 Nevertheless, the righteous will hold to their ways, and those with clean hands will grow stronger.

Ps 84:7 They go from strength to strength, till each appears before God in Zion.

Ps 92:12 The righteous will flourish like a palm tree, they will grow like a cedar of Lebanon;

Pr 4:18 The path of the righteous is like the first gleam of dawn, shining ever brighter till the full light of day. (2Co 3:18)

1Ti 4:15 Be diligent in these matters; give yourself wholly to them, so that everyone may see your progress.

1000—(2) The Full Life.

2Sa 22:37 You broaden the path beneath me, so that my ankles do not turn.

1Ki 4:29 God gave Solomon wisdom and very great insight, and a breadth of understanding as measureless as the sand on the seashore.

1Ch 4:10 Jabez cried out to the God of Israel, "Oh, that you would bless me and enlarge my territory! Let your hand be with me, and keep me from harm so that I will be free from pain." And God granted his request. (Ps 18:36; 118:5)

Isa 54:2 "Enlarge the place of your tent, stretch your tent curtains wide, do not hold back; lengthen your cords, strengthen your stakes.

Jn 10:10 The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy; I have come that they may have life, and have it to the full. (2Co 6:11)

Eph 3:17 so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith. And I pray that you, being rooted and established in love,

Eph 3:18 may have power, together with all the saints, to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Christ,

Eph 3:19 and to know this love that surpasses knowledge—that you may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God.

Isa 11:3 and he will delight in the fear of the LORD. He will not judge by what he sees with his eyes, or decide by what he hears with his ears;

1Co 2:14 The man without the Spirit does not accept the things that come from the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually discerned.

Perilous if Persisted in

Heb 2:3 how shall we escape if we ignore such a great salvation? This salvation, which was first announced by the Lord, was confirmed to us by those who heard him.

Heb 12:25 See to it that you do not refuse him who speaks. If they did not escape when they refused him who warned them on earth, how much less will we, if we turn away from him who warns us from heaven?

Jehoshaphat's Subjects

2Ch 20:33 The high places, however, were not removed, and the people still had not set their hearts on the God of their fathers.

EMPTINESS—FULLNESS

1120—(A) EMPTINESS OR VANITY of the Worldly Life. (Ps 39:11; 62:9)

Ecc 1:2 "Meaningless! Meaningless!" says the Teacher. "Utterly meaningless! Everything is meaningless."

Ecc 2:1 I thought in my heart, "Come now, I will test you with pleasure to find out what is good." But that also proved to be meaningless.

Ecc 4:16 There was no end to all the people who were before them. But those who came later were not pleased with the successor. This too is meaningless, a chasing after the wind.

Ecc 11:10 So then, banish anxiety from your heart and cast off the troubles of your body, for youth and vigor are meaningless.

Eph 4:17 So I tell you this, and insist on it in the Lord, that you must no longer live as the Gentiles do, in the futility of their thinking.

1121—(B) MEN UNSATISFIED, with Temporal Things.

Opportunities for Seeing and Hearing

Ecc 1:8 All things are wearisome, more than one can say. The eye never has enough of seeing, nor the ear its fill of hearing.

Aimless Toil

Ecc 4:8 There was a man all alone; he had neither son nor brother. There was no end to his toil, yet his eyes were not content with his wealth. "For whom am I toiling," he asked, "and why am I depriving myself of enjoyment?" This too is meaningless— a miserable business!

Accumulation of Wealth

Ecc 5:10 Whoever loves money never has money enough; whoever loves wealth is never satisfied with his income. This too is meaningless.

Gratification of Appetite

Ecc 6:7 All man's efforts are for his mouth, yet his appetite is never satisfied. (Isa 29:8)

Pursuit of Worldly Objects

Isa 55:2 Why spend money on what is not bread, and your labor on what does not satisfy? Listen, listen to me, and eat what is good, and your soul will delight in the richest of fare. (Isa 65:13)

Prodigality

*Lk 15:14 After he had spent everything, there was a severe famine in that whole country, and he began to be in need. (Jn 4:13; Rev 18:14)

1122—(C) PERIL OF AN EMPTY HEART

Mt 12:43 "When an evil spirit comes out of a man, it goes through arid places seeking rest and does not find it.

Mt 12:44 Then it says, 'I will return to the house I left.' When it arrives, it finds the house unoccupied, swept clean and put in order.

Mt 12:45 Then it goes and takes with it seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they go in and live there. And the final condition of that man is worse than the first. That is how it will be with this wicked generation."

1123—(D) SPIRITUAL FULLNESS, Satisfies the Deepest Needs.

The Overflowing Cup

Ps 23:5 You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies. You anoint my head with oil; my cup overflows.

Fullness of Blessing

Mal 3:10 Bring the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house. Test me in this," says the LORD Almighty, "and see if I will not throw open the floodgates of heaven and pour out so much blessing that you will not have room enough for it. (Mt 5:6)

Fullness of Joy

Jn 15:11 I have told you this so that my joy may be in you and that your joy may be complete. (Ro 15:29)

Fullness of God

Eph 3:19 and to know this love that surpasses knowledge—that you may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God.

Fullness of the Spirit

Eph 5:18 Do not get drunk on wine, which leads to debauchery. Instead, be filled with the Spirit.

Fullness of Wisdom

Col 1:9 For this reason, since the day we heard about you, we have not stopped praying for you and asking God to fill you with the knowledge of his will through all spiritual wisdom and understanding.

Rev 1:6 and has made us to be a kingdom and priests to serve his God and Father—to him be glory and power for ever and ever! Amen. (Rev 2:27)

Victory over Satan

Rev 20:4 I saw thrones on which were seated those who had been given authority to judge. And I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded because of their testimony for Jesus and because of the word of God. They had not worshiped the beast or his image and had not received his mark on their foreheads or their hands. They came to life and reigned with Christ a thousand years. (Rev 22:5)

Heb 9:27 Just as man is destined to die once, and after that to face judgment,

2Pe 2:9 if this is so, then the Lord knows how to rescue godly men from trials and to hold the unrighteous for the day of judgment, while continuing their punishment.

1Jn 4:17 In this way, love is made complete among us so that we will have confidence on the day of judgment, because in this world we are like him.

Jude 14 Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied about these men: "See, the Lord is coming with thousands upon thousands of his holy ones

Lk 12:48 But the one who does not know and does things deserving punishment will be beaten with few blows. From everyone who has been given much, much will be demanded; and from the one who has been entrusted with much, much more will be asked.

Jn 3:19 This is the verdict: Light has come into the world, but men loved darkness instead of light because their deeds were evil.

Jn 9:41 Jesus said, "If you were blind, you would not be guilty of sin; but now that you claim you can see, your guilt remains.

Mt 16:27 For the Son of Man is going to come in his Father's glory with his angels, and then he will reward each person according to what he has done. (Ro 2:6)

2Co 5:10 For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that each one may receive what is due him for the things done while in the body, whether good or bad.

1Pe 1:17 Since you call on a Father who judges each man's work impartially, live your lives as strangers here in reverent fear. (Rev 2:23)

Rev 20:12 And I saw the dead, great and small, standing before the throne, and books were opened. Another book was opened, which is the book of life. The dead were judged according to what they had done as recorded in the books.

Ps 96:13 they will sing before the LORD, for he comes, he comes to judge the earth. He will judge the world in righteousness and the peoples in his truth.

Mt 13:43 Then the righteous will shine like the sun in the kingdom of their Father. He who has ears, let him hear.

Lk 9:30 Two men, Moses and Elijah,

Lk 9:31 appeared in glorious splendor, talking with Jesus. They spoke about his departure, which he was about to bring to fulfillment at Jerusalem.

Ro 8:17 Now if we are children, then we are heirs—heirs of God and co-heirs with Christ, if indeed we share in his sufferings in order that we may also share in his glory.

Php 3:21 who, by the power that enables him to bring everything under his control, will transform our lowly bodies so that they will be like his glorious body.

Col 3:4 When Christ, who is your life, appears, then you also will appear with him in glory. (1Pe 5:1; Rev 7:9; 14:1)

Rev 22:5 There will be no more night. They will not need the light of a lamp or the light of the sun, for the Lord God will give them light. And they will reign for ever and ever.

See Redeemed, 2976; Saints Exalted, 1165.

1362—(4) The Glory will be Eternal.

Ps 73:24 You guide me with your counsel, and afterward you will take me into glory.

Ro 8:18 I consider that our present sufferings are not worth comparing with the glory that will be revealed in us.

2Co 4:17 For our light and momentary troubles are achieving for us an eternal glory that far outweighs them all. (Eph 1:18)

2Ti 2:10 Therefore I endure everything for the sake of the elect, that they too may obtain the salvation that is in Christ Jesus, with eternal glory.

1Pe 5:1 To the elders among you, I appeal as a fellow elder, a witness of Christ's sufferings and one who also will share in the glory to be revealed:

1363—(5) Joy in Christ's Presence.

Lk 23:43 Jesus answered him, "I tell you the truth, today you will be with me in paradise."

Jn 12:26 Whoever serves me must follow me; and where I am, my servant also will be. My Father will honor the one who serves me.

Jn 14:3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come back and take you to be with me that you also may be where I am.

Jn 17:24 "Father, I want those you have given me to be with me where I am, and to see my glory, the glory you have given me because you loved me before the creation of the world.

2Co 5:8 We are confident, I say, and would prefer to be away from the body and at home with the Lord.

Php 1:23 I am torn between the two: I desire to depart and be with Christ, which is better by far;

1Th 4:17 After that, we who are still alive and are left will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And so we will be with the Lord forever.

(G) THE REWARDS OF THE FAITHFUL.

The Soul-winners

Da 12:3 Those who are wise will shine like the brightness of the heavens, and those who lead many to righteousness, like the stars for ever and ever.

Humble Servants

Mt 10:42 And if anyone gives even a cup of cold water to one of these little ones because he is my disciple, I tell you the truth, he will certainly not lose his reward."

The Faithful Stewards

Mt 25:23 "His master replied, 'Well done, good and faithful servant! You have been faithful with a few things; I will put you in charge of many things. Come and share your master's happiness!' (Mt 25:34; Mk 9:41)

The Benevolent

Lk 6:35 But love your enemies, do good to them, and lend to them without expecting to get anything back. Then your reward will be great, and you will be sons of the Most High, because he is kind to the ungrateful and wicked. (Jn 4:36)

The Good of All Nations

Ro 2:10 but glory, honor and peace for everyone who does good: first for the Jew, then for the Gentile. (1Co 3:8)

All Ranks and Stations

Eph 6:8 because you know that the Lord will reward everyone for whatever good he does, whether he is slave or free. (Col 3:24)

1365—(2) For Suffering Endured.

Mt 5:11 "Blessed are you when people insult you, persecute you and falsely say all kinds of evil against you because of me.

Mt 5:12 Rejoice and be glad, because great is your reward in heaven, for in the same way they persecuted the prophets who were before you. (Ro 8:17)

2Ti 2:12 if we endure, we will also reign with him. If we disown him, he will also disown us;

Heb 10:34 You sympathized with those in prison and joyfully accepted the confiscation of your property, because you knew that you yourselves had better and lasting possessions.

Heb 11:26 He regarded disgrace for the sake of Christ as of greater value than the treasures of Egypt, because he was looking ahead to his reward.

Rev 20:4 I saw thrones on which were seated those who had been given authority to judge. And I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded because of their testimony for Jesus and because of the word of God. They had not worshiped the beast or his image and had not received his mark on their foreheads or their hands. They came to life and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

2Th 1:7 and give relief to you who are troubled, and to us as well. This will happen when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven in blazing fire with his powerful angels.

Heb 4:9 There remains, then, a Sabbath-rest for the people of God; (Rev 6:11)

Rev 14:13 Then I heard a voice from heaven say, "Write: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from now on." "Yes," says the Spirit, "they will rest from their labor, for their deeds will follow them."

1367—(4) Spiritual Crowns.

The Incorruptible Crown

1Co 9:25 Everyone who competes in the games goes into strict training. They do it to get a crown that will not last; but we do it to get a crown that will last forever.

The Crown of Righteousness

2Ti 4:8 Now there is in store for me the crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will award to me on that day—and not only to me, but also to all who have longed for his appearing.

The Crown of Life

FUTURE STATE of the Wicked

(A) WORDS OF CHRIST concerning.

1368—(1) Described as Banishment from God.

Mt 7:23 Then I will tell them plainly, 'I never knew you. Away from me, you evildoers!'

Mt 8:12 But the subjects of the kingdom will be thrown outside, into the darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Mt 22:13 "Then the king told the attendants, 'Tie him hand and foot, and throw him outside, into the darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.'

Mt 25:46 "Then they will go away to eternal punishment, but the righteous to eternal life."

See Final Separation, 291.

1369—(2) Compares the Suffering of, to Fire.

Mt 5:22 But I tell you that anyone who is angry with his brother will be subject to judgment. Again, anyone who says to his brother, 'Raca,' is answerable to the Sanhedrin. But anyone who says, 'You fool!' will be in danger of the fire of hell.

Mt 13:41 The Son of Man will send out his angels, and they will weed out of his kingdom everything that causes sin and all who do evil.

Mt 13:42 They will throw them into the fiery furnace, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Mt 25:41 "Then he will say to those on his left, 'Depart from me, you who are cursed, into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels.

Mk 9:43 If your hand causes you to sin, cut it off. It is better for you to enter life maimed than with two hands to go into hell, where the fire never goes out.

Mk 9:45 And if your foot causes you to sin, cut it off. It is better for you to enter life crippled than to have two feet and be thrown into hell.

Mk 9:47 And if your eye causes you to sin, pluck it out. It is better for you to enter the kingdom of God with one eye than to have two eyes and be thrown into hell, Mk 9:48 where " 'their worm does not die, and the fire is not quenched.'

Lk 16:22 "The time came when the beggar died and the angels carried him to Abraham's side. The rich man also died and was buried.

Lk 16:23 In hell, where he was in torment, he looked up and saw Abraham far away, with Lazarus by his side.

Lk 16:24 So he called to him, 'Father Abraham, have pity on me and send Lazarus to dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, because I am in agony in this fire.'

1370—(3) Other References of Christ to.

Mt 10:28 Do not be afraid of those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather, be afraid of the One who can destroy both soul and body in hell.

Mt 23:33 "You snakes! You brood of vipers! How will you escape being condemned to hell?

Mt 24:51 He will cut him to pieces and assign him a place with the hypocrites, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Jn 5:28 "Do not be amazed at this, for a time is coming when all who are in their graves will hear his voice

Jn 5:29 and come out—those who have done good will rise to live, and those who have done evil will rise to be condemned.

1371—(B) WORDS OF THE APOSTLES concerning (M. Future of Wicked (4)).

Ro 2:8 But for those who are self-seeking and who reject the truth and follow evil, there will be wrath and anger.

1Co 3:17 If anyone destroys God's temple, God will destroy him; for God's temple is sacred, and you are that temple.

2Th 1:9 They will be punished with everlasting destruction and shut out from the presence of the Lord and from the majesty of his power

Heb 2:2 For if the message spoken by angels was binding, and every violation and disobedience received its just punishment,

Heb 2:3 how shall we escape if we ignore such a great salvation? This salvation, which was first announced by the Lord, was confirmed to us by those who heard him.

Heb 10:29 How much more severely do you think a man deserves to be punished who has trampled the Son of God under foot, who has treated as an unholy thing the blood of the covenant that sanctified him, and who has insulted the Spirit of grace?

2Pe 2:4 For if God did not spare angels when they sinned, but sent them to hell, putting them into gloomy dungeons to be held for judgment;

2Pe 2:5 if he did not spare the ancient world when he brought the flood on its ungodly people, but protected Noah, a preacher of righteousness, and seven others;

2Pe 2:9 if this is so, then the Lord knows how to rescue godly men from trials and to hold the unrighteous for the day of judgment, while continuing their punishment.

Jude 13 They are wild waves of the sea, foaming up their shame; wandering stars, for whom blackest darkness has been reserved forever.

Rev 11:8 Their bodies will lie in the street of the great city, which is figuratively called Sodom and Egypt, where also their Lord was crucified.

Rev 14:11 And the smoke of their torment rises for ever and ever. There is no rest day or night for those who worship the beast and his image, or for anyone who receives the mark of his name."

Rev 20:15 If anyone's name was not found written in the book of life, he was thrown into the lake of fire.

Rev 21:8 But the cowardly, the unbelieving, the vile, the murderers, the sexually immoral, those who practice magic arts, the idolaters and all liars—their place will be in the fiery lake of burning sulfur. This is the second death."

Mal 4:1 "Surely the day is coming; it will burn like a furnace. All the arrogant and every evildoer will be stubble, and that day that is coming will set them on fire," says the LORD Almighty. "Not a root or a branch will be left to them.

Mt 3:12 His winnowing fork is in his hand, and he will clear his threshing floor, gathering his wheat into the barn and burning up the chaff with unquenchable fire."

Jn 3:36 Whoever believes in the Son has eternal life, but whoever rejects the Son will not see life, for God's wrath remains on him."

Ac 1:25 to take over this apostolic ministry, which Judas left to go where he belongs."

Salutations Hinder

2Ki 4:29 Elisha said to Gehazi, "Tuck your cloak into your belt, take my staff in your hand and run. If you meet anyone, do not greet him, and if anyone greets you, do not answer. Lay my staff on the boy's face."

The Urgency of the Work Demands

2Ch 24:5 He called together the priests and Levites and said to them, "Go to the towns of Judah and collect the money due annually from all Israel, to repair the temple of your God. Do it now." But the Levites did not act at once.

The Rashness of Delaying God's Messengers

2Ch 35:21 But Neco sent messengers to him, saying, "What quarrel is there between you and me, O king of Judah? It is not you I am attacking at this time, but the house with which I am at war. God has told me to hurry; so stop opposing God, who is with me, or he will destroy you." (Ps 119:60)

Hastening to the Place of Prayer

Zec 8:21 and the inhabitants of one city will go to another and say, 'Let us go at once to entreat the LORD and seek the LORD Almighty. I myself am going.'

Haste in Delivering the Message

Haste in Giving the Invitation

2Sa 15:14 Then David said to all his officials who were with him in Jerusalem, "Come! We must flee, or none of us will escape from Absalom. We must leave immediately, or he will move quickly to overtake us and bring ruin upon us and put the city to the sword."

Lk 9:61 Still another said, "I will follow you, Lord; but first let me go back and say good-by to my family."

Personal Convenience

KNOWLEDGE—IGNORANCE

(A) KNOWLEDGE

(Selected Readings, Pr 3:13-24)

2020—(1) May become a Hindrance instead of a Help to Men.

Desire for, a Source of Temptation

Ge 3:5 "For God knows that when you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil."

Ge 3:6 When the woman saw that the fruit of the tree was good for food and pleasing to the eye, and also desirable for gaining wisdom, she took some and ate it. She also gave some to her husband, who was with her, and he ate it.

Tends to Presumption

Ge 3:22 And the LORD God said, "The man has now become like one of us, knowing good and evil. He must not be allowed to reach out his hand and take also from the tree of life and eat, and live forever."

Ge 3:23 So the LORD God banished him from the Garden of Eden to work the ground from which he had been taken.

Adds to the Burden of Life

Ecc 1:18 For with much wisdom comes much sorrow; the more knowledge, the more grief.

Pursuit of, Exhausting

*Ecc 12:12 Be warned, my son, of anything in addition to them. Of making many books there is no end, and much study wearies the body.

Promotes Pride

1Co 8:1 Now about food sacrificed to idols: We know that we all possess knowledge. Knowledge puffs up, but love builds up.

Pr 2:3 and if you call out for insight and cry aloud for understanding,

Pr 2:4 and if you look for it as for silver and search for it as for hidden treasure,

Pr 2:5 then you will understand the fear of the LORD and find the knowledge of God.

Pr 3:13 Blessed is the man who finds wisdom, the man who gains understanding,

Pr 4:5 Get wisdom, get understanding; do not forget my words or swerve from them.

Pr 15:14 The discerning heart seeks knowledge, but the mouth of a fool feeds on folly.

Pr 23:23 Buy the truth and do not sell it; get wisdom, discipline and understanding.

A Cause for Exultation

Jer 9:24 but let him who boasts boast about this: that he understands and knows me, that I am the LORD, who exercises kindness, justice and righteousness on earth, for in these I delight," declares the LORD. (Jer 31:34)

Obtained by Acquaintance with God

Hos 6:3 Let us acknowledge the LORD; let us press on to acknowledge him. As surely as the sun rises, he will appear; he will come to us like the winter rains, like the spring rains that water the earth."

Obedience, the Condition of Receiving

Jn 7:16 Jesus answered, "My teaching is not my own. It comes from him who sent me.

Jn 7:17 If anyone chooses to do God's will, he will find out whether my teaching comes from God or whether I speak on my own.

Liberates the Soul from all Error

*Jn 8:31 To the Jews who had believed him, Jesus said, "If you hold to my teaching, you are really my disciples.

Jn 8:32 Then you will know the truth, and the truth will set you free."

Leads to Eternal Life

Ro 8:28 And we know that in all things God works for the good of those who love him, who have been called according to his purpose.

2Co 5:1 Now we know that if the earthly tent we live in is destroyed, we have a building from God, an eternal house in heaven, not built by human hands.

2Ti 1:12 That is why I am suffering as I am. Yet I am not ashamed, because I know whom I have believed, and am convinced that he is able to guard what I have entrusted to him for that day.

1Jn 3:2 Dear friends, now we are children of God, and what we will be has not yet been made known. But we know that when he appears, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

1Jn 3:14 We know that we have passed from death to life, because we love our brothers. Anyone who does not love remains in death. (1Jn 3:24)

Lead the Sheep astray

Hired Workers Forsake the Sheep

Jn 10:12 The hired hand is not the shepherd who owns the sheep. So when he sees the wolf coming, he abandons the sheep and runs away. Then the wolf attacks the flock and scatters it.

MIND, SINFUL—SPIRITUAL

2351—(A) SINFUL MIND, general references to.

Ro 1:28 Furthermore, since they did not think it worthwhile to retain the knowledge of God, he gave them over to a depraved mind, to do what ought not to be done.

Ro 8:7 the sinful mind is hostile to God. It does not submit to God's law, nor can it do so.

Eph 4:17 So I tell you this, and insist on it in the Lord, that you must no longer live as the Gentiles do, in the futility of their thinking. (Col 1:21)

Col 2:18 Do not let anyone who delights in false humility and the worship of angels disqualify you for the prize. Such a person goes into great detail about what he has seen, and his unspiritual mind puffs him up with idle notions.

Tit 1:15 To the pure, all things are pure, but to those who are corrupted and do not believe, nothing is pure. In fact, both their minds and consciences are corrupted.

Pr 15:26 The LORD detests the thoughts of the wicked, but those of the pure are pleasing to him.

Pr 23:7 for he is the kind of man who is always thinking about the cost. "Eat and drink," he says to you, but his heart is not with you.

Pr 24:9 The schemes of folly are sin, and men detest a mocker. (Isa 66:18)

Jer 4:14 O Jerusalem, wash the evil from your heart and be saved. How long will you harbor wicked thoughts?

Mt 9:4 Knowing their thoughts, Jesus said, "Why do you entertain evil thoughts in your hearts?

Mt 15:19 For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murder, adultery, sexual immorality, theft, false testimony, slander."

2353—(C) EVIL IMAGINATION

Ge 6:5 The LORD saw how great man's wickedness on the earth had become, and that every inclination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil all the time. (Ge 8:21)

Ge 11:6 The LORD said, "If as one people speaking the same language they have begun to do this, then nothing they plan to do will be impossible for them. (Dt 31:21)

Ps 38:12 Those who seek my life set their traps, those who would harm me talk of my ruin; all day long they plot deception.

Pr 6:18 a heart that devises wicked schemes, feet that are quick to rush into evil, (Jer 23:17)

Eze 8:12 He said to me, "Son of man, have you seen what the elders of the house of Israel are doing in the darkness, each at the shrine of his own idol? They say, 'The LORD does not see us; the LORD has forsaken the land.'"

Ro 1:21 For although they knew God, they neither glorified him as God nor gave thanks to him, but their thinking became futile and their foolish hearts were darkened.

Php 2:5 Your attitude should be the same as that of Christ Jesus:

Pr 12:5 The plans of the righteous are just, but the advice of the wicked is deceitful. (Pr 21:5)

Ro 12:3 For by the grace given me I say to every one of you: Do not think of yourself more highly than you ought, but rather think of yourself with sober judgment, in accordance with the measure of faith God has given you.

Php 4:8 Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is noble, whatever is right, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is admirable—if anything is excellent or praiseworthy—think about such things.

2474—(D) CHOIRS

Regularly Employed

1Ch 9:33 Those who were musicians, heads of Levite families, stayed in the rooms of the temple and were exempt from other duties because they were responsible for the work day and night.

Assisted by an Orchestra

Vested Choir

1Ch 15:27 Now David was clothed in a robe of fine linen, as were all the Levites who were carrying the ark, and as were the singers, and Kenaniah, who was in charge of the singing of the choirs. David also wore a linen ephod.

A Great Chorus

1Ch 25:5 All these were sons of Heman the king's seer. They were given him through the promises of God to exalt him. God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

1Ch 25:6 All these men were under the supervision of their fathers for the music of the temple of the LORD, with cymbals, lyres and harps, for the ministry at the house of God. Asaph, Jeduthun and Heman were under the supervision of the king.

1Ch 25:7 Along with their relatives—all of them trained and skilled in music for the LORD—they numbered 288.

A Militant Choir, songs lead to victory.

2Ch 20:21 After consulting the people, Jehoshaphat appointed men to sing to the LORD and to praise him for the splendor of his holiness as they went out at the head of the army, saying: "Give thanks to the LORD, for his love endures forever." (2Ch 23:13; 35:15; Ezr 2:65; Ne 12:42; Ecc 2:8)

PERFECTION—IMPERFECTION

(A) PERFECTION

2728—(1) Some Essential Elements of.

Benevolence

Mt 19:21 Jesus answered, "If you want to be perfect, go, sell your possessions and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in heaven. Then come, follow me."

Love

Col 3:14 And over all these virtues put on love, which binds them all together in perfect unity.

Good Works

Jas 2:22 You see that his faith and his actions were working together, and his faith was made complete by what he did.

Control of the Tongue

Jas 3:2 We all stumble in many ways. If anyone is never at fault in what he says, he is a perfect man, able to keep his whole body in check.

Obedience

1Jn 2:5 But if anyone obeys his word, God's love is truly made complete in him. This is how we know we are in him: (1Jn 4:12)

2729—(2) The Duty of Striving after.

Ge 17:1 When Abram was ninety-nine years old, the LORD appeared to him and said, "I am God Almighty; walk before me and be blameless. (Dt 18:13; 1Ki 8:61)

Mt 5:48 Be perfect, therefore, as your heavenly Father is perfect.

2Co 13:11 Finally, brothers, good-by. Aim for perfection, listen to my appeal, be of one mind, live in peace. And the God of love and peace will be with you.

Eph 4:13 until we all reach unity in the faith and in the knowledge of the Son of God and become mature, attaining to the whole measure of the fullness of Christ. (Php 3:15)

Col 1:28 We proclaim him, admonishing and teaching everyone with all wisdom, so that we may present everyone perfect in Christ. (2Ti 3:17)

Heb 6:1 Therefore let us leave the elementary teachings about Christ and go on to maturity, not laying again the foundation of repentance from acts that lead to death, and of faith in God, (Heb 13:21)

Jas 1:4 Perseverance must finish its work so that you may be mature and complete, not lacking anything. (1Pe 5:10)

See Spiritual Growth (1), 995.

2730—(B) PERFECTION, DIVINE, of God.

Dt 32:4 He is the Rock, his works are perfect, and all his ways are just. A faithful God who does no wrong, upright and just is he. (2Sa 22:31)

Ps 18:30 As for God, his way is perfect; the word of the LORD is flawless. He is a shield for all who take refuge in him.

Ecc 3:14 I know that everything God does will endure forever; nothing can be added to it and nothing taken from it. God does it so that men will revere him.

Mt 5:48 Be perfect, therefore, as your heavenly Father is perfect.

Jn 19:4 Once more Pilate came out and said to the Jews, "Look, I am bringing him out to you to let you know that I find no basis for a charge against him."

Heb 2:10 In bringing many sons to glory, it was fitting that God, for whom and through whom everything exists, should make the author of their salvation perfect through suffering.

Heb 5:9 and, once made perfect, he became the source of eternal salvation for all who obey him

Heb 7:28 For the law appoints as high priests men who are weak; but the oath, which came after the law, appointed the Son, who has been made perfect forever.

2732—(D) CHRIST'S SINLESSNESS, general references to.

2Co 5:21 God made him who had no sin to be sin for us, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God. (Heb 1:9)

Heb 4:15 For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but we have one who has been tempted in every way, just as we are—yet was without sin.

Heb 7:26 Such a high priest meets our need—one who is holy, blameless, pure, set apart from sinners, exalted above the heavens. (Heb 9:14)

1Pe 1:19 but with the precious blood of Christ, a lamb without blemish or defect.

Ac 12:3 When he saw that this pleased the Jews, he proceeded to seize Peter also. This happened during the Feast of Unleavened Bread.

Ac 24:27 When two years had passed, Felix was succeeded by Porcius Festus, but because Felix wanted to grant a favor to the Jews, he left Paul in prison.

Ac 25:9 Festus, wishing to do the Jews a favor, said to Paul, "Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem and stand trial before me there on these charges?" (Eph 6:6)

La 2:9 Her gates have sunk into the ground; their bars he has broken and destroyed. Her king and her princes are exiled among the nations, the law is no more, and her prophets no longer find visions from the LORD.

Eze 7:26 Calamity upon calamity will come, and rumor upon rumor. They will try to get a vision from the prophet; the teaching of the law by the priest will be lost, as will the counsel of the elders.

Am 8:11 "The days are coming," declares the Sovereign LORD, "when I will send a famine through the land— not a famine of food or a thirst for water, but a famine of hearing the words of the LORD. (Lk 15:14; Eph 2:12; 1Ti 6:5; Rev 3:17)

PRIESTHOOD

2863—(1) Of Christ.

Human as well as Divine

Heb 2:17 For this reason he had to be made like his brothers in every way, in order that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in service to God, and that he might make atonement for the sins of the people. (Heb 3:1)

Sympathetic

Heb 4:14 Therefore, since we have a great high priest who has gone through the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold firmly to the faith we profess.

Heb 4:15 For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but we have one who has been tempted in every way, just as we are—yet was without sin.

Divinely Appointed

Heb 5:5 So Christ also did not take upon himself the glory of becoming a high priest. But God said to him, "You are my Son; today I have become your Father."

Eternal

Heb 6:20 where Jesus, who went before us, has entered on our behalf. He has become a high priest forever, in the order of Melchizedek.

Sinless

Heb 7:26 Such a high priest meets our need—one who is holy, blameless, pure, set apart from sinners, exalted above the heavens.

Exalted

Heb 8:1 The point of what we are saying is this: We do have such a high priest, who sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven, (Heb 9:11; 10:21)

Ps 73:12 This is what the wicked are like— always carefree, they increase in wealth.

Jer 12:1 You are always righteous, O LORD, when I bring a case before you. Yet I would speak with you about your justice: Why does the way of the wicked prosper? Why do all the faithless live at ease?

Dt 6:12 be careful that you do not forget the LORD, who brought you out of Egypt, out of the land of slavery.

(D) RASHNESS

2919—(1) Warnings against.

Pr 19:2 It is not good to have zeal without knowledge, nor to be hasty and miss the way.

Pr 21:5 The plans of the diligent lead to profit as surely as haste leads to poverty.

Pr 29:20 Do you see a man who speaks in haste? There is more hope for a fool than for him.

Ecc 5:2 Do not be quick with your mouth, do not be hasty in your heart to utter anything before God. God is in heaven and you are on earth, so let your words be few.

Preparing for Many Years of Enjoyment

Lk 12:19 And I'll say to myself, "You have plenty of good things laid up for many years. Take life easy; eat, drink and be merry."'

Reckoning on Future Opportunities for Reform

Ac 24:25 As Paul discoursed on righteousness, self-control and the judgment to come, Felix was afraid and said, "That's enough for now! You may leave. When I find it convenient, I will send for you."

Indulging in Dreams of Future Gain

Jas 4:13 Now listen, you who say, "Today or tomorrow we will go to this or that city, spend a year there, carry on business and make money."

Lk 12:35 "Be dressed ready for service and keep your lamps burning,

Lk 12:36 like men waiting for their master to return from a wedding banquet, so that when he comes and knocks they can immediately open the door for him.

Rev 19:7 Let us rejoice and be glad and give him glory! For the wedding of the Lamb has come, and his bride has made herself ready.

No Oil until the vessels were gathered.

2Ki 4:3 Elisha said, "Go around and ask all your neighbors for empty jars. Don't ask for just a few.

The Sinners' Portion

Ecc 2:26 To the man who pleases him, God gives wisdom, knowledge and happiness, but to the sinner he gives the task of gathering and storing up wealth to hand it over to the one who pleases God. This too is meaningless, a chasing after the wind. (Ecc 4:6)

Indicates a Distrust of Providence

1Sa 15:22 But Samuel replied: "Does the LORD delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as much as in obeying the voice of the LORD? To obey is better than sacrifice, and to heed is better than the fat of rams. (Ps 40:6)

Ps 52:7 "Here now is the man who did not make God his stronghold but trusted in his great wealth and grew strong by destroying others!" (Pr 11:28)

Pr 18:11 The wealth of the rich is their fortified city; they imagine it an unscalable wall.

Mk 10:24 The disciples were amazed at his words. But Jesus said again, "Children, how hard it is to enter the kingdom of God!

Pr 25:6 Do not exalt yourself in the king's presence, and do not claim a place among great men;

Pr 25:7 it is better for him to say to you, "Come up here," than for him to humiliate you before a nobleman. What you have seen with your eyes

Men after the Flood

Ge 11:4 Then they said, "Come, let us build ourselves a city, with a tower that reaches to the heavens, so that we may make a name for ourselves and not be scattered over the face of the whole earth."

Absalom

2Sa 15:1 In the course of time, Absalom provided himself with a chariot and horses and with fifty men to run ahead of him.

2Sa 15:2 He would get up early and stand by the side of the road leading to the city gate. Whenever anyone came with a complaint to be placed before the king for a decision, Absalom would call out to him, "What town are you from?" He would answer, "Your servant is from one of the tribes of Israel."

2Sa 15:4 And Absalom would add, "If only I were appointed judge in the land! Then everyone who has a complaint or case could come to me and I would see that he gets justice."

Adonijah

1Ki 1:5 Now Adonijah, whose mother was Haggith, put himself forward and said, "I will be king." So he got chariots and horses ready, with fifty men to run ahead of him. (2Ki 14:10; Ps 49:11; Isa 14:13; 22:16; Hab 2:5)

3196—SELF-DECEPTION, the natural results of.

Self-esteem

Ps 36:2 For in his own eyes he flatters himself too much to detect or hate his sin.

Spiritual Bondage

Isa 44:20 He feeds on ashes, a deluded heart misleads him; he cannot save himself, or say, "Is not this thing in my right hand a lie?"

Conceit

Gal 6:3 If anyone thinks he is something when he is nothing, he deceives himself.

Careless Hearing

Jas 1:22 Do not merely listen to the word, and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says.

An Unbridled Tongue

Jas 1:26 If anyone considers himself religious and yet does not keep a tight rein on his tongue, he deceives himself and his religion is worthless.

Sanctimony

1Jn 1:8 If we claim to be without sin, we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us.

Spiritual Poverty

Rev 3:17 You say, 'I am rich; I have acquired wealth and do not need a thing.' But you do not realize that you are wretched, pitiful, poor, blind and naked.

See False Trusts, 3183; Self-Righteousness, 3219, 3220.

3197—SELF-EXAMINATION, profitable.

La 3:40 Let us examine our ways and test them, and let us return to the LORD.

Mt 7:5 You hypocrite, first take the plank out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to remove the speck from your brother's eye.

1Co 11:28 A man ought to examine himself before he eats of the bread and drinks of the cup.

2Co 13:5 Examine yourselves to see whether you are in the faith; test yourselves. Do you not realize that Christ Jesus is in you—unless, of course, you fail the test? (Gal 6:4)

SELF-INDULGENCE—SELF-DENIAL

(A) SELF-INDULGENCE

3198—(1) The Power of Appetite.

Nu 11:5 We remember the fish we ate in Egypt at no cost—also the cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions and garlic.

Pr 16:26 The laborer's appetite works for him; his hunger drives him on. (Pr 18:20; 23:2)

Pr 23:35 "They hit me," you will say, "but I'm not hurt! They beat me, but I don't feel it! When will I wake up so I can find another drink?"

Ecc 6:7 All man's efforts are for his mouth, yet his appetite is never satisfied.

Isa 29:8 as when a hungry man dreams that he is eating, but he awakens, and his hunger remains; as when a thirsty man dreams that he is drinking, but he awakens faint, with his thirst unquenched. So will it be with the hordes of all the nations that fight against Mount Zion.

Isa 56:12 "Come," each one cries, "let me get wine! Let us drink our fill of beer! And tomorrow will be like today, or even far better."

See Self-denial (3), 3207.

3199—(2) Gluttony.

Nu 11:32 All that day and night and all the next day the people went out and gathered quail. No one gathered less than ten homers. Then they spread them out all around the camp.

Dt 21:20 They shall say to the elders, "This son of ours is stubborn and rebellious. He will not obey us. He is a profligate and a drunkard."

Pr 23:1 When you sit to dine with a ruler, note well what is before you,

Pr 23:2 and put a knife to your throat if you are given to gluttony.

Pr 23:3 Do not crave his delicacies, for that food is deceptive.

Pr 23:21 for drunkards and gluttons become poor, and drowsiness clothes them in rags.

Php 3:19 Their destiny is destruction, their god is their stomach, and their glory is in their shame. Their mind is on earthly things.

See Food (7), 1304.

(B) WORLDLY PLEASURE

3200—(1) Results of a Pleasure-seeking Life.

Poverty

Pr 21:17 He who loves pleasure will become poor; whoever loves wine and oil will never be rich. (Isa 22:13)

False Security

Isa 47:8 "Now then, listen, you wanton creature, lounging in your security and saying to yourself, 'I am, and there is none besides me. I will never be a widow or suffer the loss of children.'

Isa 47:9 Both of these will overtake you in a moment, on a single day: loss of children and widowhood. They will come upon you in full measure, in spite of your many sorceries and all your potent spells.

Spiritual Barrenness

Lk 8:14 The seed that fell among thorns stands for those who hear, but as they go on their way they are choked by life's worries, riches and pleasures, and they do not mature.

Presumption

Lk 12:19 And I'll say to myself, "You have plenty of good things laid up for many years. Take life easy; eat, drink and be merry."'

Spiritual Death

1Ti 5:6 But the widow who lives for pleasure is dead even while she lives. (2Ti 3:4; Tit 3:3; Jas 5:5)

Desire for Incessant Revelry

2Pe 2:13 They will be paid back with harm for the harm they have done. Their idea of pleasure is to carouse in broad daylight. They are blots and blemishes, reveling in their pleasures while they feast with you.

See Dancing (1), 912; Revelry, 3408.

3201—(2) Sought as the Chief Aim of Life.

Ecc 2:1 I thought in my heart, "Come now, I will test you with pleasure to find out what is good." But that also proved to be meaningless. (Ecc 2:24)

Ecc 5:18 Then I realized that it is good and proper for a man to eat and drink, and to find satisfaction in his toilsome labor under the sun during the few days of life God has given him—for this is his lot.

Ecc 8:15 So I commend the enjoyment of life, because nothing is better for a man under the sun than to eat and drink and be glad. Then joy will accompany him in his work all the days of the life God has given him under the sun. (Ecc 9:7)

Isa 22:13 But see, there is joy and revelry, slaughtering of cattle and killing of sheep, eating of meat and drinking of wine! "Let us eat and drink," you say, "for tomorrow we die!" (Am 6:4)

Ac 17:18 A group of Epicurean and Stoic philosophers began to dispute with him. Some of them asked, "What is this babbler trying to say?" Others remarked, "He seems to be advocating foreign gods." They said this because Paul was preaching the good news about Jesus and the resurrection. (1Co 15:32)

3202—(C) LUXURIOUS LIVING, examples of.

1Ki 4:22 Solomon's daily provisions were thirty cors of fine flour and sixty cors of meal, 1Ki 4:23 ten head of stall-fed cattle, twenty of pasture-fed cattle and a hundred sheep and goats, as well as deer, gazelles, roebucks and choice fowl.

1Ki 10:22 The king had a fleet of trading ships at sea along with the ships of Hiram. Once every three years it returned, carrying gold, silver and ivory, and apes and baboons.

Est 1:5 When these days were over, the king gave a banquet, lasting seven days, in the enclosed garden of the king's palace, for all the people from the least to the greatest, who were in the citadel of Susa.

Est 1:6 The garden had hangings of white and blue linen, fastened with cords of white linen and purple material to silver rings on marble pillars. There were couches of gold and silver on a mosaic pavement of porphyry, marble, mother-of-pearl and other costly stones.

Est 1:7 Wine was served in goblets of gold, each one different from the other, and the royal wine was abundant, in keeping with the king's liberality.

Job 14:4 Who can bring what is pure from the impure? No one!

Ps 130:3 If you, O LORD, kept a record of sins, O Lord, who could stand?

Pr 20:9 Who can say, "I have kept my heart pure; I am clean and without sin"?

Ecc 7:20 There is not a righteous man on earth who does what is right and never sins.

Eze 14:14 even if these three men—Noah, Daniel and Job—were in it, they could save only themselves by their righteousness, declares the Sovereign LORD.

Ro 3:19 Now we know that whatever the law says, it says to those who are under the law, so that every mouth may be silenced and the whole world held accountable to God.

Lack of Social Position

Jdg 6:15 "But Lord," Gideon asked, "how can I save Israel? My clan is the weakest in Manasseh, and I am the least in my family."

Difficulties of the Undertaking

Pr 22:13 The sluggard says, "There is a lion outside!" or, "I will be murdered in the streets!"

Personal Weakness

Jer 1:6 "Ah, Sovereign LORD," I said, "I do not know how to speak; I am only a child."

Jer 1:7 But the LORD said to me, "Do not say, 'I am only a child.' You must go to everyone I send you to and say what ever I command you.

The Hardness of the Master

Mt 25:24 "Then the man who had received the one talent came. 'Master,' he said, 'I knew that you are a hard man, harvesting where you have not sown and gathering where you have not scattered seed.

Mt 25:25 So I was afraid and went out and hid your talent in the ground. See, here is what belongs to you.'

No Need Discovered

Mt 25:44 "They also will answer, 'Lord, when did we see you hungry or thirsty or a stranger or needing clothes or sick or in prison, and did not help you?'

Pr 30:12 those who are pure in their own eyes and yet are not cleansed of their filth;

Jer 2:35 you say, 'I am innocent; he is not angry with me.' But I will pass judgment on you because you say, 'I have not sinned.'

Jn 8:9 At this, those who heard began to go away one at a time, the older ones first, until only Jesus was left, with the woman still standing there.

Ro 2:1 You, therefore, have no excuse, you who pass judgment on someone else, for at whatever point you judge the other, you are condemning yourself, because you who pass judgment do the same things.

1Jn 3:20 whenever our hearts condemn us. For God is greater than our hearts, and he knows everything.

A Blood Relationship

Ac 17:26 From one man he made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and he determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live.

Mt 10:22 All men will hate you because of me, but he who stands firm to the end will be saved. (Mk 13:13)

Heb 12:7 Endure hardship as discipline; God is treating you as sons. For what son is not disciplined by his father?

Jas 1:12 Blessed is the man who perseveres under trial, because when he has stood the test, he will receive the crown of life that God has promised to those who love him.

Jas 5:11 As you know, we consider blessed those who have persevered. You have heard of Job's perseverance and have seen what the Lord finally brought about. The Lord is full of compassion and mercy.

1Pe 2:19 For it is commendable if a man bears up under the pain of unjust suffering because he is conscious of God.
See Hold Fast, 1186.

3441—(4) In Persevering to the End.

Jer 2:36 Why do you go about so much, changing your ways? You will be disappointed by Egypt as you were by Assyria.

Hos 6:4 "What can I do with you, Ephraim? What can I do with you, Judah? Your love is like the morning mist, like the early dew that disappears.

Eph 4:14 Then we will no longer be infants, tossed back and forth by the waves, and blown here and there by every wind of teaching and by the cunning and craftiness of men in their deceitful scheming.

Heb 13:9 Do not be carried away by all kinds of strange teachings. It is good for our hearts to be strengthened by grace, not by ceremonial foods, which are of no value to those who eat them.

Jas 1:6 But when he asks, he must believe and not doubt, because he who doubts is like a wave of the sea, blown and tossed by the wind.

2Ki 17:41 Even while these people were worshiping the LORD, they were serving their idols. To this day their children and grandchildren continue to do as their fathers did.

Tit 2:10 and not to steal from them, but to show that they can be fully trusted, so that in every way they will make the teaching about God our Savior attractive.

STEWARDSHIP—OWNERSHIP

(A) STEWARDSHIP of Life.

3451—Truths to be Remembered in Relation to.

The Diversity of Gifts

Mt 25:14 "Again, it will be like a man going on a journey, who called his servants and entrusted his property to them.

Mt 25:15 To one he gave five talents of money, to another two talents, and to another one talent, each according to his ability. Then he went on his journey.

Men are Stewards, not Owners

Lk 19:13 So he called ten of his servants and gave them ten minas. 'Put this money to work,' he said, 'until I come back.'

Faithfulness Required

1Co 4:2 Now it is required that those who have been given a trust must prove faithful.

Life Precious

1Co 6:20 you were bought at a price. Therefore honor God with your body. (Eph 6:7)

A Sacred Treasure to be Kept

1Ti 6:20 Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to your care. Turn away from godless chatter and the opposing ideas of what is falsely called knowledge, (2Ti 1:14)

Ministering as Stewards

1Pe 4:10 Each one should use whatever gift he has received to serve others, faithfully administering God's grace in its various forms.

See Riches (1), 2805.

3452—(B) ACCOUNTABILITY connected with stewardship.

Mt 12:36 But I tell you that men will have to give account on the day of judgment for every careless word they have spoken.

Mt 18:23 "Therefore, the kingdom of heaven is like a king who wanted to settle accounts with his servants. (Mt 21:34; 25:19)

Lk 12:20 "But God said to him, 'You fool! This very night your life will be demanded from you. Then who will get what you have prepared for yourself?'

Lk 12:48 But the one who does not know and does things deserving punishment will be beaten with few blows. From everyone who has been given much, much will be demanded; and from the one who has been entrusted with much, much more will be asked.

Lk 19:15 "He was made king, however, and returned home. Then he sent for the servants to whom he had given the money, in order to find out what they had gained with it.

Ro 14:12 So then, each of us will give an account of himself to God.

1Pe 4:4 They think it strange that you do not plunge with them into the same flood of dissipation, and they heap abuse on you.

1Pe 4:5 But they will have to give account to him who is ready to judge the living and the dead.

See Opportunity (2), 2657.

(C) RESPONSIBILITY of Stewardship.

3453—(1) Is Personal.

Dt 24:16 Fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor children put to death for their fathers; each is to die for his own sin.

Job 19:4 If it is true that I have gone astray, my error remains my concern alone.

Pr 9:12 If you are wise, your wisdom will reward you; if you are a mocker, you alone will suffer."

Jer 31:30 Instead, everyone will die for his own sin; whoever eats sour grapes—his own teeth will be set on edge.

Eze 18:20 The soul who sins is the one who will die. The son will not share the guilt of the father, nor will the father share the guilt of the son. The righteousness of the righteous man will be credited to him, and the wickedness of the wicked will be charged against him. (Ro 14:4; Gal 6:5)

See Opportunity, 2656, 2657.

SURRENDERED LIFE, THE

(A) CHARACTERISTICS OF

3503—(1) Death to Sin.

Ro 6:2 By no means! We died to sin; how can we live in it any longer? (Ro 6:7)

Ro 6:11 In the same way, count yourselves dead to sin but alive to God in Christ Jesus. (Gal 2:20)

Gal 5:24 Those who belong to Christ Jesus have crucified the sinful nature with its passions and desires. (Col 2:20)

Col 3:3 For you died, and your life is now hidden with Christ in God. (2Ti 2:11)

1Pe 2:24 He himself bore our sins in his body on the tree, so that we might die to sins and live for righteousness; by his wounds you have been healed.

3504—(2) Fellowship with Christ's Death.

Ro 6:6 For we know that our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves to sin—

Ro 8:36 As it is written: "For your sake we face death all day long; we are considered as sheep to be slaughtered."

2Co 4:11 For we who are alive are always being given over to death for Jesus' sake, so that his life may be revealed in our mortal body.

Gal 2:20 I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me.

Col 2:20 Since you died with Christ to the basic principles of this world, why, as though you still belonged to it, do you submit to its rules: (Col 3:3)

2Ti 2:11 Here is a trustworthy saying: If we died with him, we will also live with him;

lethek	(5 ephahs)	3 bushels	110 liters
ephah	(10 omers)	3/5 bushel	22 liters

		Liquid Measure
bath	(1 ephah)	6 gallons	22 liters
hin	(1/6 bath)	4 quarts	4 liters
log	(1/72 bath)	1/3 quart	0.3 liter

The figures of the table are calculated on the basis of a shekel equaling 11.5 grams, a cubit equaling 18 inches and an ephah equaling 22 liters. The quart referred to is either a dry quart (slightly larger than a liter) or a liquid quart (slightly smaller than a liter), whichever is applicable. The ton referred to in the footnotes is the American ton of 2,000 pounds.

This table is based upon the best available information, but it is not intended to be mathematically precise; like the measurement equivalents in the footnotes, it merely gives approximate amounts and distances. Weights and measures differed somewhat at various times and places in the ancient world. There is uncertainty particularly about the ephah and the bath; further discoveries may give more light on these units of capacity.

TEMPLES, SPIRITUAL, believers as.

3582—(1) General References to.

1Co 3:16 Don't you know that you yourselves are God's temple and that God's Spirit lives in you?

1Co 6:19 Do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you, whom you have received from God? You are not your own;

2Co 6:16 What agreement is there between the temple of God and idols? For we are the temple of the living God. As God has said: "I will live with them and walk among them, and I will be their God, and they will be my people."

Eph 2:20 built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, with Christ Jesus himself as the chief cornerstone.

Eph 2:21 In him the whole building is joined together and rises to become a holy temple in the Lord.

Eph 2:22 And in him you too are being built together to become a dwelling in which God lives by his Spirit. (Heb 3:6)

1Pe 2:5 you also, like living stones, are being built into a spiritual house to be a holy priesthood, offering spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.

3583—(2) Christ Dwelling in.

Revealed in the Coming of the Holy Spirit

Jn 14:20 On that day you will realize that I am in my Father, and you are in me, and I am in you.

Demonstrates to the World Christ's Mission

Jn 17:23 I in them and you in me. May they be brought to complete unity to let the world know that you sent me and have loved them even as you have loved me. (Ro 8:10)

The Old Life dies that the New may Live

Gal 2:20 I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me.

Obtained by Faith

Eph 3:17 so that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith. And I pray that you, being rooted and established in love,

Eph 3:18 may have power, together with all the saints, to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Christ,

Eph 3:19 and to know this love that surpasses knowledge—that you may be filled to the measure of all the fullness of God.

A Glorious Mystery

Col 1:27 To them God has chosen to make known among the Gentiles the glorious riches of this mystery, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory.

Obedience Essential to 1Jn 3:24 Those who obey his commands live in him, and he in them. And this is how we know that he lives in us: We know it by the Spirit he gave us.

Possible to All

Rev 3:20 Here I am! I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in and eat with him, and he with me.

TEMPTATION

(A) MISCELLANEOUS TOPICS relating to.

3584—(1) Satan the Chief Agent in.

Ge 3:1 Now the serpent was more crafty than any of the wild animals the LORD God had made. He said to the woman, "Did God really say, 'You must not eat from any tree in the garden'?"

1Ch 21:1 Satan rose up against Israel and incited David to take a census of Israel.

Mt 4:3 The tempter came to him and said, "If you are the Son of God, tell these stones to become bread."

2Co 2:11 in order that Satan might not outwit us. For we are not unaware of his schemes.

2Co 11:3 But I am afraid that just as Eve was deceived by the serpent's cunning, your minds may somehow be led astray from your sincere and pure devotion to Christ.

1Th 3:5 For this reason, when I could stand it no longer, I sent to find out about your faith. I was afraid that in some way the tempter might have tempted you and our efforts might have been useless. (1Ti 6:9; Jas 1:14; 2Pe 2:18)

3585—(2) Voluntary entering into, Ge 3:6; 13:12; Mt 26:41; Lk 22:40.

See Attractions of Sin, 3351.

3586—(3) Encouragement to those in the Midst of.

1Co 10:13 No temptation has seized you except what is common to man. And God is faithful; he will not let you be tempted beyond what you can bear. But when you are tempted, he will also provide a way out so that you can stand up under it.

Heb 2:18 Because he himself suffered when he was tempted, he is able to help those who are being tempted.

Jas 1:2 Consider it pure joy, my brothers, whenever you face trials of many kinds,

Jas 1:3 because you know that the testing of your faith develops perseverance.

Jas 1:12 Blessed is the man who perseveres under trial, because when he has stood the test, he will receive the crown of life that God has promised to those who love him.

2Pe 2:9 if this is so, then the Lord knows how to rescue godly men from trials and to hold the unrighteous for the day of judgment, while continuing their punishment.

Rev 3:10 Since you have kept my command to endure patiently, I will also keep you from the hour of trial that is going to come upon the whole world to test those who live on the earth.

See God's Promises (10), 2887.

3587—(B) TEMPTATION OF CHRIST, Mt 4:1; Lk 4:2; 22:28; Heb 2:18; 4:15.

3588—(C) YIELDING TO TEMPTATION, the allurements which lead to.

The Lure of Forbidden Fruit

Ge 3:6 When the woman saw that the fruit of the tree was good for food and pleasing to the eye, and also desirable for gaining wisdom, she took some and ate it. She also gave some to her husband, who was with her, and he ate it.

The Lure of Fertile Fields

Ge 13:10 Lot looked up and saw that the whole plain of the Jordan was well watered, like the garden of the LORD, like the land of Egypt, toward Zoar. (This was before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah.)

Ge 13:11 So Lot chose for himself the whole plain of the Jordan and set out toward the east. The two men parted company:

Ge 13:13 Now the men of Sodom were wicked and were sinning greatly against the LORD.

The Lure of Appetite

Ge 25:29 Once when Jacob was cooking some stew, Esau came in from the open country, famished.

Ge 25:30 He said to Jacob, "Quick, let me have some of that red stew! I'm famished!" (That is why he was also called Edom.)

Ge 25:33 But Jacob said, "Swear to me first." So he swore an oath to him, selling his birthright to Jacob.

The Lure of Silver and Gold

Jos 7:21 When I saw in the plunder a beautiful robe from Babylonia, two hundred shekels of silver and a wedge of gold weighing fifty shekels, I coveted them and took them. They are hidden in the ground inside my tent, with the silver underneath." (Jdg 14:17; 16:17; 1Sa 3:3:12)

The Lure of Women

1Ki 11:1 King Solomon, however, loved many foreign women besides Pharaoh's daughter—Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Sidonians and Hittites.

1Ki 11:4 As Solomon grew old, his wives turned his heart after other gods, and his heart was not fully devoted to the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father had been.

The Lure of Ambition

Mk 10:35 Then James and John, the sons of Zebedee, came to him. "Teacher," they said, "we want you to do for us whatever we ask."

Mk 10:36 "What do you want me to do for you?" he asked.

Mk 10:37 They replied, "Let one of us sit at your right and the other at your left in your glory." (2Pe 2:20)

(D) RESISTING TEMPTATION

3589—(1) Examples of.

Abraham, by Refusing a Reward for service rendered.

Ge 14:23 that I will accept nothing belonging to you, not even a thread or the thong of a sandal, so that you will never be able to say, 'I made Abram rich.' (1Ki 13:8)

Elisha, by Refusing Payment for Healing

2Ki 5:16 The prophet answered, "As surely as the LORD lives, whom I serve, I will not accept a thing." And even though Naaman urged him, he refused.

Job, by rejecting Evil Counsel

Job 2:9 His wife said to him, "Are you still holding on to your integrity? Curse God and die!"

Job 2:10 He replied, "You are talking like a foolish woman. Shall we accept good from God, and not trouble?" In all this, Job did not sin in what he said.

The Recabites and Daniel, by Refusing Wine

Jer 35:5 Then I set bowls full of wine and some cups before the men of the Recabite family and said to them, "Drink some wine."

Jer 35:6 But they replied, "We do not drink wine, because our forefather Jonadab son of Recab gave us this command: 'Neither you nor your descendants must ever drink wine.

Da 1:8 But Daniel resolved not to defile himself with the royal food and wine, and he asked the chief official for permission not to defile himself this way.

Christ, by refusing Worldly Honor

Lk 4:5 The devil led him up to a high place and showed him in an instant all the kingdoms of the world.

Lk 4:6 And he said to him, "I will give you all their authority and splendor, for it has been given to me, and I can give it to anyone I want to.

Lk 4:7 So if you worship me, it will all be yours."

Lk 4:8 Jesus answered, "It is written: 'Worship the Lord your God and serve him only.'" (Jn 6:15)

Peter, by Refusing a Bribe

Ac 8:20 Peter answered: "May your money perish with you, because you thought you could buy the gift of God with money!

3590—(2) The Duty of Resisting.

Pr 1:10 My son, if sinners entice you, do not give in to them.

Pr 4:14 Do not set foot on the path of the wicked or walk in the way of evil men. (Lk 21:34)

Ro 6:13 Do not offer the parts of your body to sin, as instruments of wickedness, but rather offer yourselves to God, as those who have been brought from death to life; and offer the parts of your body to him as instruments of righteousness.

Eph 6:13 Therefore put on the full armor of God, so that when the day of evil comes, you may be able to stand your ground, and after you have done everything, to stand.

2Pe 3:17 Therefore, dear friends, since you already know this, be on your guard so that you may not be carried away by the error of lawless men and fall from your secure position.

TIME, THE RIGHT USE OF

3626—(1) How Secured.

By Realizing the Brevity of Life

Ps 90:12 Teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain a heart of wisdom.

By Youthful Piety

Ecc 12:1 Remember your Creator in the days of your youth, before the days of trouble come and the years approach when you will say, "I find no pleasure in them"—

By Subordinating Earthly Duties to Heavenly

1Co 7:29 What I mean, brothers, is that the time is short. From now on those who have wives should live as if they had none;

1Co 7:31 those who use the things of the world, as if not engrossed in them. For this world in its present form is passing away.

By Serious Living

Eph 5:15 Be very careful, then, how you live—not as unwise but as wise,

Eph 5:16 making the most of every opportunity, because the days are evil.

By a Consistent Example before the World

Col 4:5 Be wise in the way you act toward outsiders; make the most of every opportunity.

Ps 37:36 but he soon passed away and was no more; though I looked for him, he could not be found.

Life

Ps 90:10 The length of our days is seventy years— or eighty, if we have the strength; yet their span is but trouble and sorrow, for they quickly pass, and we fly away.

Material Things

Ps 102:25 In the beginning you laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of your hands.

Ps 102:26 They will perish, but you remain; they will all wear out like a garment. Like clothing you will change them and they will be discarded.

Pleasure

Lk 12:19 And I'll say to myself, "You have plenty of good things laid up for many years. Take life easy; eat, drink and be merry."'

Lk 12:20 "But God said to him, 'You fool! This very night your life will be demanded from you. Then who will get what you have prepared for yourself?"

Knowledge

1Co 13:8 Love never fails. But where there are prophecies, they will cease; where there are tongues, they will be stilled; where there is knowledge, it will pass away.

Glory

1Pe 1:24 For, "All men are like grass, and all their glory is like the flowers of the field; the grass withers and the flowers fall,

Mk 16:9 When Jesus rose early on the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had driven seven demons.

Lk 8:30 Jesus asked him, "What is your name?" "Legion," he replied, because many demons had gone into him.

Lk 11:26 Then it goes and takes seven other spirits more wicked than itself, and they go in and live there. And the final condition of that man is worse than the first."

Php 1:17 The former preach Christ out of selfish ambition, not sincerely, supposing that they can stir up trouble for me while I am in chains.

Php 1:27 Whatever happens, conduct yourselves in a manner worthy of the gospel of Christ. Then, whether I come and see you or only hear about you in my absence, I will know that you stand firm in one spirit, contending as one man for the faith of the gospel

Tit 1:13 This testimony is true. Therefore, rebuke them sharply, so that they will be sound in the faith

4039—HEALING POWER of Christ and the Apostles.

Mk 6:56 And wherever he went—into villages, towns or countryside— they placed the sick in the marketplaces. They begged him to let them touch even the edge of his cloak, and all who touched him were healed.

Lk 6:19 and the people all tried to touch him, because power was coming from him and healing them all.

Lk 8:46 But Jesus said, "Someone touched me; I know that power has gone out from me."

Ac 5:15 As a result, people brought the sick into the streets and laid them on beds and mats so that at least Peter's shadow might fall on some of them as he passed by.

Ac 19:11 God did extraordinary miracles through Paul,

Ac 19:12 so that even handkerchiefs and aprons that had touched him were taken to the sick, and their illnesses were cured and the evil spirits left them.

4040—HEAVENLY ORIGIN, CHRIST'S.

Jn 3:31 "The one who comes from above is above all; the one who is from the earth belongs to the earth, and speaks as one from the earth. The one who comes from heaven is above all.

Jn 6:38 For I have come down from heaven not to do my will but to do the will of him who sent me.

Jn 8:23 But he continued, "You are from below; I am from above. You are of this world; I am not of this world.

Jn 8:42 Jesus said to them, "If God were your Father, you would love me, for I came from God and now am here. I have not come on my own; but he sent me.

Jn 16:30 Now we can see that you know all things and that you do not even need to have anyone ask you questions. This makes us believe that you came from God."

4054—LAW INSUFFICIENT, Ro 3:19; 8:3; Gal 2:19; Eph 2:15; Heb 7:19.

4055—LAW, PURPOSE OF.

Ro 3:20 Therefore no one will be declared righteous in his sight by observing the law; rather, through the law we become conscious of sin.

Ro 5:20 The law was added so that the trespass might increase. But where sin increased, grace increased all the more,

Ro 7:7 What shall we say, then? Is the law sin? Certainly not! Indeed I would not have known what sin was except through the law. For I would not have known what coveting really was if the law had not said, "Do not covet."

Gal 3:19 What, then, was the purpose of the law? It was added because of transgressions until the Seed to whom the promise referred had come. The law was put into effect through angels by a mediator.

Gal 3:24 So the law was put in charge to lead us to Christ that we might be justified by faith.

1Ti 1:9 We also know that law is made not for the righteous but for lawbreakers and rebels, the ungodly and sinful, the unholy and irreligious; for those who kill their fathers or mothers, for murderers,

Lk 9:24 For whoever wants to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for me will save it.

Jn 12:24 I tell you the truth, unless a kernel of wheat falls to the ground and dies, it remains only a single seed. But if it dies, it produces many seeds.

Ro 6:4 We were therefore buried with him through baptism into death in order that, just as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, we too may live a new life.

1Co 15:36 How foolish! What you sow does not come to life unless it dies.

2Co 4:11 For we who are alive are always being given over to death for Jesus' sake, so that his life may be revealed in our mortal body.

2Co 4:12 So then, death is at work in us, but life is at work in you.

Gal 2:20 I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me.

2Co 5:15 And he died for all, that those who live should no longer live for themselves but for him who died for them and was raised again.

Ro 6:6 For we know that our old self was crucified with him so that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves to sin—

Ro 8:13 For if you live according to the sinful nature, you will die; but if by the Spirit you put to death the misdeeds of the body, you will live, 2Th 2:8 And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord Jesus will overthrow with the breath of his mouth and destroy by the splendor of his coming.

SEVEN EDITIONS of the DIVINE LAW–4219

This drawing illustrates God's method of gradual revelation and publication of his law.

It was first written on nature, next on man's conscience, then the fundamental principles on the tablets of stone.

In due time Jesus appeared as the perfect embodiment of the truth, which he illustrated in his own sinless life. Later came the entire Scriptures, the larger and completed written edition.

It was God's purpose that his law should also be written in the hearts of his people, with its precepts able to be "read" in their outward lives.

HISTORY of the interval between the Old and New Testaments is often regarded as of little importance since no divinely inspired prophets spoke during this period. The period is sometimes called "The Silent Centuries."

Yet knowledge of the leading events, as well as of the literature of the times, is of great value because they furnish a background for the advent and life of Jesus.

For two hundred years after the Captivity the province of Judea remained under Persian rule.

The conquest of Alexander the Great in 330 B.C. not only brought the Jews under Grecian domination, but also introduced the Greek language and ideas throughout the ancient world.

After the death of Alexander, his kingdom was divided, and a struggle began between the Ptolemies of Egypt and the monarchs of Syria, resulting first in Egyptian, then in Syrian, rule over Judea.

The latter was a dark period in Jewish history, especially during the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Syrian king, who committed many outrages against the Jews, sought to establish idolatry in Jerusalem, and defiled the temple.

His wickedness led to the Maccabean revolt, 166 B.C., in which the priest Matthias and his sons defeated the Syrians in a series of battles, which secured the independence of the province of Judea.

This was the foundation of the Hasmonean dynasty, which reigned from 166-63 B.C.

Tobit
Judith
Additions to Esther Wisdom of Solomon
Ecclesiasticus
Baruch
The Letter of Jeremiah
Song of the Three Holy Children
Susanna
Bel and the Dragon
The Prayer of Manasseh
1 & 2 Maccabees

The word Apocrypha means hidden, or secret.

ORIGIN. The term Apocrypha is generally applied to a collection of books, ranging from eleven to sixteen in number, which appeared between the Old and New Testaments.

They have come down to us in more or less close connection with the canonical books of the Bible.

They have had an unusual history. Ecclesiastical opinion in various periods has differed widely as to the value of the literature. The Jews of the Dispersion in Egypt had a high regard for these books and included them in the Greek translation of the Old Testament, called the Septuagint (see 4220), but they were rejected from the Hebrew canon by the Jews of Palestine.

The Roman Catholic Church in the Council of Trent, A.D. 1546, declared eleven of the books to be canonical, and these appear in modern Catholic editions of the Scriptures.

The View of the Protestant Church

It is commonly agreed that some of these books contain material of literary merit and historical value. Their canonicity, however, has been rejected, and they have been gradually omitted from most modern editions of Protestant Bibles for the following reasons:

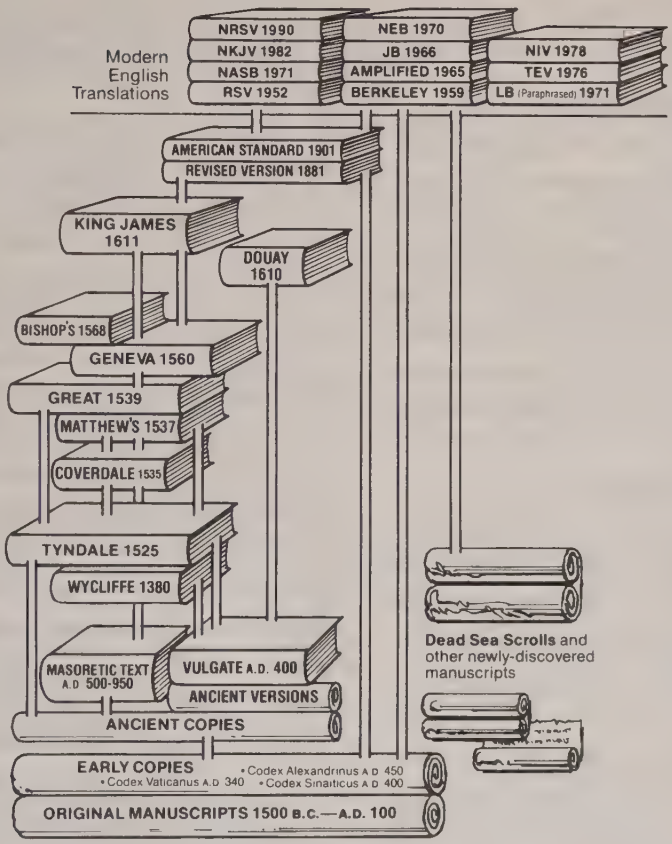
1. They were never quoted by Jesus, and it is doubtful if they were alluded to by the apostles.
2. Most of the early Fathers regarded them as uninspired.
3. They did not appear in the ancient Hebrew canon.
4. The inferior quality of most of the writings, as compared with the canonical books, stamps them as unworthy of a place in the sacred Scriptures.

Character of the Books

Authorities differ as to the classification of these books.

The Letter of Jeremiah is often incorporated in the Book of Baruch, and 3 and 4 Maccabees are often omitted.

HISTORICAL—1 and 2 Maccabees and 1 Esdras.



TRADITIONAL—Additions to Esther, Susanna, ong of the Three Holy Children, Bel and the Dragon, udith, and Tobit.

PROPHETIC—Baruch and the Prayer of Manas-sh.

APOCALYPTIC—2 Esdras and 4 Esdras in the atin Vulgate.

INSTRUCTIVE—Ecclesiasticus and the Wisdom f Solomon (in a style like the Proverbs).

Origin and Growth of the English Bible

The above drawing shows the gradual development f the English Bible as well as the foundations on hich each successive version rests.

Since we are living in an age of printing, it is hard or us to realize that when the books of the Bible were riginally written, there was no easy or inexpensive way to make copies. Each copy had to be made slowly and laboriously by hand. It was inevitable that many ancient books would be lost. This largely accounts for the fact that all original manuscripts of the Bible have perished.

The question arises, What is the literary foundation of the Bible?

(1) Early Copies

These were possibly made from the original manuscripts. Three principal ones are:

(a) The Codex Sinaiticus, a codex (early bound book) of the Greek Bible, belonging to the fourth century. Purchased from the Soviet Republic of Russia in 1933 by Great Britain and now in the British Museum.

(b) The Codex Alexandrinus, probably written in the fifth century, now in the British Museum. Contains the whole Greek Bible with the exception of forty lost leaves.

(c) The Codex Vaticanus, in the Vatican library at Rome, originally contained the whole Bible but parts are now lost. Written probably about the middle of the fourth century.

(2) The Ancient Versions and Texts

(a) The Septuagint. A translation of the Old Testament Hebrew Scriptures into Greek, made at Alexandria about 250 B.C.

(b) The Samaritan Pentateuch. Not strictly speaking a version, but the Hebrew text perpetuated in Samaritan characters.

(c) Peshitta or Syriac. The whole Bible, date uncertain (first or second century?), a translation into the common language of certain parts of Syria.

(d) The Vulgate. The entire Bible translated into Latin, by Jerome at Bethlehem. Completed about A.D. 400. For a thousand years this was the standard Bible in the Roman Catholic Church.

(e) The Masoretic Text. An authoritative edition of the Hebrew Scriptures (OT) developed by Jewish scholars from c. A.D. 500–950, in which vowel points were first introduced into the consonantal (consonants only) Hebrew text.

Early English Versions

During the Dark Ages very little Bible translation was attempted. A few minor translations were made of parts of the Bible, but generally the Word of God was locked up in the Latin language, which was unknown to the common people.

John Wycliffe (1320–1384), a great English scholar and Bible student, conceived the plan of translating the whole Bible into common English. He first translated the New Testament about 1380. Exactly how much more he did before his death is uncertain. His friends completed the work after his death. From the drawing it can be seen that his work rests primarily on the Latin Vulgate.

William Tyndale was the next of the great English translators. He was an early and courageous reformer and was determined that the English common people should have the Bible in their own language. Because persecution made it impossible for him to do his work in England, he crossed over to the Continent, where his New Testament translation was issued in 1525 and the Pentateuch in 1530.

By referring to the drawing it can be seen that his version does not rest entirely upon the Latin Vulgate. Tyndale was a capable Greek scholar and had access to the Greek text of Erasmus and other helps which Wycliffe did not possess. He also had a fine command of English, which left its impression on all later versions. Although he was martyred before he completed the Old Testament, it is generally thought that he translated the material which appeared later in the Matthew's Version.

Miles Coverdale. A friend of Tyndale, he prepared and published a Bible dedicated to Henry VIII in 1535. Coverdale's New Testament is largely based on Tyndale's. He explicitly disclaimed originality, but used the Latin and other versions, as well as Tyndale's, as helps.

Matthew's Bible. 1537. About the same time as the second edition of the Coverdale Bible another translation appeared. Its authorship is somewhat uncertain, but though it bears the name of Matthew it is generally credited to John Rogers, a friend and companion of Tyndale. This scholar, it is thought, had come into possession of Tyndale's unpublished translation of the historical books of the Bible. It contains Tyndale's translations in their latest forms but also reflects Coverdale's work.

The Great Bible. 1539. It will be noted, by consulting the drawing, that this translation is based on the Matthew's, Coverdale, and Tyndale Bibles. The first edition was prepared by Miles Coverdale and was ordered to be displayed in every English church. It was a large volume and was chained to the reading desk in the churches, where the people flocked to hear the reading of the Word of God.

The Geneva Bible. 1560. Made at Geneva by scholars who fled from England during the persecution by Queen Mary, it was a revision of the Great Bible, collated with other English translations. A very scholarly version, handy in size, and for many years a popular Bible in England.

The Bishops' Bible. 1568. Prepared under the direction of the Archbishop of Canterbury during the reign of Elizabeth. Mainly a revision of the Great Bible, although somewhat dependent upon the Geneva version. It was used chiefly by the clergy and was not popular with the common people.

The Douay Bible. A Roman Catholic version made from the Latin Vulgate. The New Testament was published at Rheims, 1582; the Old Testament at Douay, 1609–1610. It contains controversial notes and, until recently, was the generally accepted English version of the Catholic Church.

The King James, or Authorized, Version. 1611. The translation generally used by English-speaking people for over three hundred years; made by forty-seven scholars under the authorization of King James I of England. The Bishops' Bible was the basis of this version, but the Hebrew and Greek texts were studied and other English translations consulted in order to obtain the best renderings.

The Revised Version. 1881–1885. Made by a group of English and American scholars. It can be seen by glancing at the drawing that the Revised Version, while it was supposed to be a revision of the Authorized Version, has one distinct advantage over all its predecessors. It reaches down to the most ancient copies of the original Scriptures. Some of these ancient texts were not available at the time of the translation of the Authorized Version.

The American Standard Version. 1900–1901. This version incorporates into the Revised Version, the renderings preferred by the American members of the Revision Committee of 1881–1885.

English Versions Since 1901

As shown on the chart, at least ten modern English translations of the Bible have appeared since 1901. The twentieth century has seen numerous archaeological discoveries in the Holy Land, as well as the discovery in 1947 of the Dead Sea Scrolls, which included ancient Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek manuscripts and fragments. Some of these are more than 1000 years older than any previously known Old Testament manuscripts. Bible scholars are therefore able to study and compare more and better materials in trying to determine exactly what the inspired writers wrote. In addition to going back to ancient copies of the original Scriptures and to the Dead Sea Scrolls, modern translators for the most part have followed the text arrangement of the King James Version, the English Revised Version, and the American Standard Version.

The Revised Standard Version. 1952. In 1928 the copyright for the American Standard Version was acquired by the International Council of Religious Education, who authorized a revision by a committee of thirty-two Bible scholars. The New Testament was published in 1946 and the complete Bible in 1952. It is now owned by the Division of Education of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America. The Revised Standard Version Bible Committee is a continuing body, which is both ecumenical and international, with active Protestant and Catholic members from Great Britain, Canada, and the United States. Additional revisions were made in the New Testament in 1971.

The Berkeley Version. 1959. The New Testament was originally translated into modern English from the Greek by Gerrit Verkuyl in 1945. A staff of 20 translators, including professors from various Christian colleges and seminaries, worked on the Old Testament under the direction of Dr. Verkuyl. Footnotes are given on many difficult passages.

The Amplified Bible. 1965. This modern English version was commissioned by the Lockman Foundation. An editorial committee of Hebrew and Greek scholars gave particular attention to the original language texts. In addition to footnotes, it has bracketed explanatory words following many difficult phrases.

The Jerusalem Bible. 1966. This Roman Catholic work was produced originally in French at the Dominican Biblical School in Jerusalem in 1956 and was known as "La Bible de Jerusalem." The English version was translated from the original Hebrew and Greek texts, but follows the French version on most matters of interpretation. The divine name Yahweh is used, and the Apocrypha is included.

New English Bible. 1970. A joint committee of Bible scholars from leading denominations in England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, assisted by the university presses of Oxford and Cambridge, worked some twenty-two years making this translation from the Hebrew and Greek texts. The New Testament was published in 1961, and the full Bible edition includes the Apocrypha. It is printed in paragraphed single-column format, with verse numbers on the outside margin of the pages.

New American Standard Bible. 1971. This revision of the American Standard Version was, like the Amplified Bible, commissioned by the Lockman Foundation. A group of Bible scholars worked for ten years, translating from the best original texts and endeavoring to render the grammar and terminology of the American Standard Version in more contemporary English. The New Testament was published in 1963.

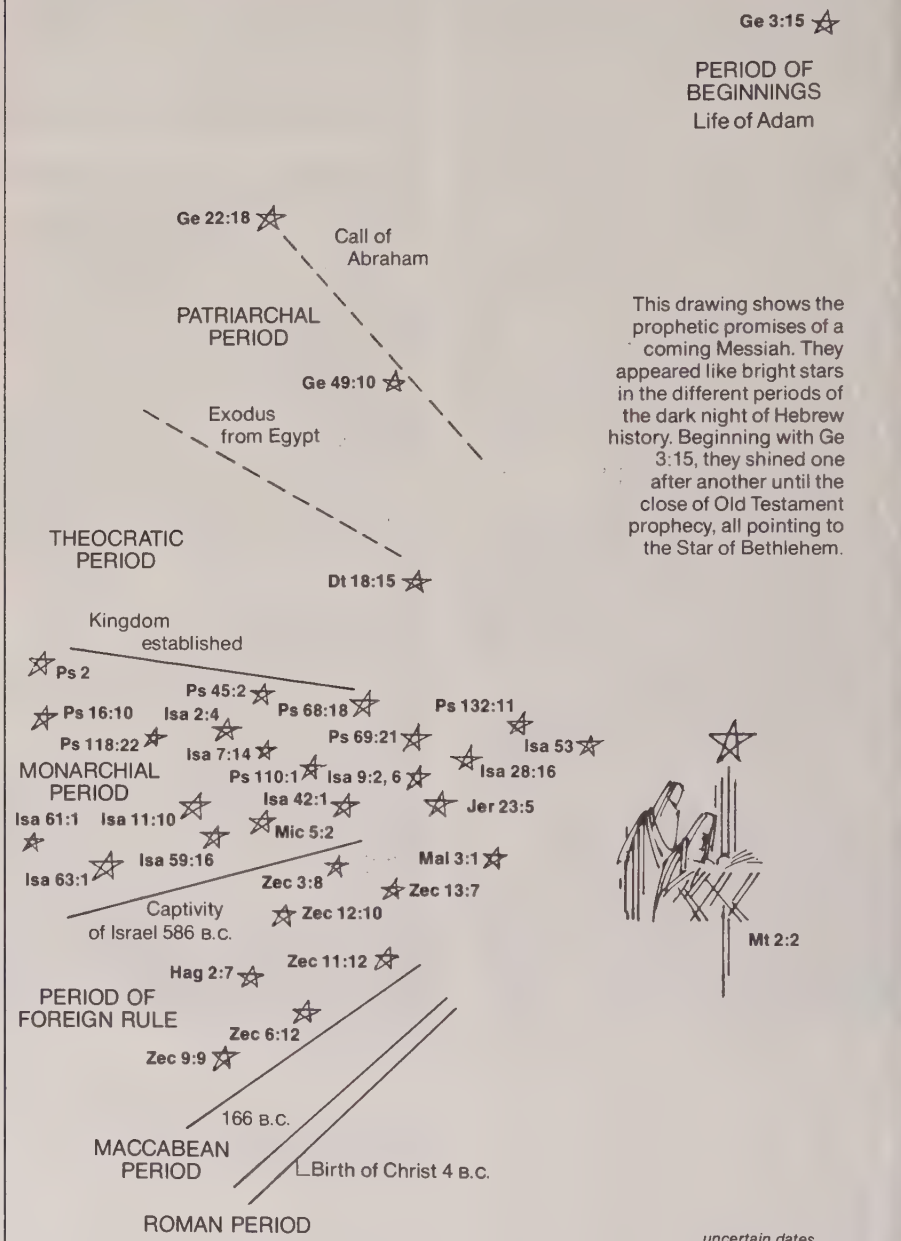
The Living Bible. 1971. This paraphrase by Kenneth N. Taylor seeks to express in the simplest modern English what the writers of the Scriptures meant.

Today's English Version (Good News Bible). 1976. The New Testament, entitled "Good News for Modern Man," was published in 1966 by the American Bible Society. A translation committee of Bible scholars was appointed to work with the United Bible Societies to make a similar translation of the Old Testament. Their objective was to provide a faithful translation into natural, clear, and simple contemporary English. American and British editions of the complete Bible were published in 1976.

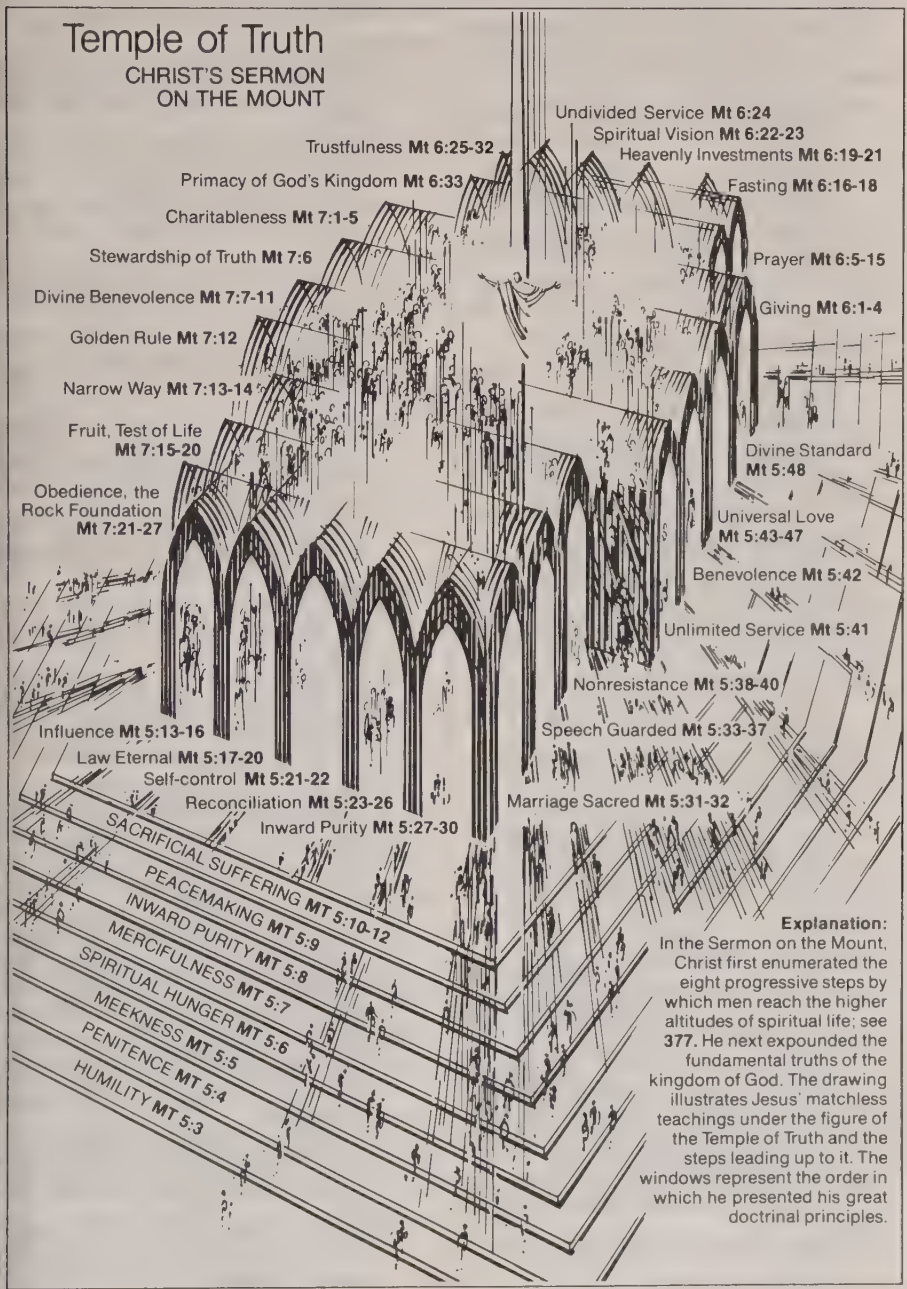
New International Version. 1978. Under sponsorship of the New York International Bible Society (now the International Bible Society), a Committee on Bible Translation was formed to oversee a completely new translation from the best original texts. The Committee enlisted the help of Bible scholars from the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand, and from various denominations in order to avoid sectarian bias. The translation of each book was assigned to a team of scholars, and several committees carefully checked accuracy, clarity, and literary style. The translators were united in their commitment to the authority and infallibility of the Bible as God's written Word.

New King James Version. 1982. The New Testament of the New King James Version was published in 1979. One hundred and nineteen Bible scholars worked on this project, which was sponsored by the International Trust for Bible Studies and Thomas Nelson Publishers. They sought both to preserve and to improve the 1611 version.

The New Revised Standard Version. 1990. This is the result of fifteen years of work contributed by a committee of thirty scholars representing various denominations. The motto of translators was to be "As literal as possible, as free as necessary." Some editions include also the Apocryphal/Deuterocanonical books accepted by Roman Catholics and Eastern Orthodox Churches. The Committee states in the Preface, "We have resisted the temptation to introduce terms and phrases that merely reflect current moods, and have tried to put the message of the Scriptures in simple, enduring words and expressions that are worthy to stand in the great tradition of the King James Bible and its predecessors."



This drawing shows the prophetic promises of a coming Messiah. They appeared like bright stars in the different periods of the dark night of Hebrew history. Beginning with Ge 3:15, they shined one after another until the close of Old Testament prophecy, all pointing to the Star of Bethlehem.



Explanation: In the Sermon on the Mount, Christ first enumerated the eight progressive steps by which men reach the higher altitudes of spiritual life; see 377. He next expounded the fundamental truths of the kingdom of God. The drawing illustrates Jesus' matchless teachings under the figure of the Temple of Truth and the steps leading up to it. The windows represent the order in which he presented his great doctrinal principles.

PERIOD OF ROMAN SUPREMACY

NEW TESTAMENT HISTORY

In the year 63 B.C. Pompey, the Roman general, captured Jerusalem, and from this time the provinces of Palestine were tributary to Rome. The local government was entrusted part of the time to princes who had political influence at Rome and at other periods to procurators appointed by the emperors.

The diagram below gives the names of the provinces, the rulers and approximate dates of their rule, and a few outstanding events.

From 37–4 B.C. Herod the Great was king of Judah. In the time of Augustus his realm was enlarged to include considerable territory east of the Jordan. At the time of Christ's birth he was the ruler of all Palestine. He probably died the same year that Christ was born, and his province was divided between his sons.

Analyses of the Books of the Bible

The following pages present a brief but comprehensive analysis of each book of the Old and New Testaments.

The authorship, historical occasion of the writing, main theme, and other points of special interest are brought out.

The aim has been to strike, whenever possible, the keynote of the book and to open up its deeper spiritual meaning.

4223—The Book of Genesis

AUTHOR. Moses, commonly accepted.

THE BOOK OF ORIGINS

A record of the origin of: our universe, the human race, sin, redemption, family life, corruption of society, the nations, the different languages, the Hebrew race, etc.

The early chapters of the book have been continually under the fire of modern criticism, but the facts they present, when rightly interpreted and understood, have never been disproved.

It is not the purpose of the author of Genesis to give an elaborate account of the Creation. Only a single chapter is devoted to the subject (just a bare outline containing a few fundamental facts), while thirty-eight chapters are given to the history of the chosen people.

MAIN THEME. Man's sin, and the initial steps taken for his redemption by a divine covenant made with a chosen race, whose early history is portrayed here.

MAIN THEME. The history of Israel during the times of the fourteen judges.
The book portrays a series of relapses into idolatry by God's people, followed by invasions of the Promised Land and oppression by their enemies.
The narrative centers around the personalities of the judges, who were raised up to be deliverers of Israel. The dark side of the picture is especially emphasized in the record.
A study of the dates seems to show that the people maintained outward loyalty to the Lord a larger part of the time than a casual reading of the book might indicate.

MAIN SUBJECT. The history of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, from the latter part of the reign of Ahaziah in Israel, and Jehoram in Judah, up to the time of the captivities.

As far as the history of Israel is concerned, it is a dark picture of degenerate rulers and sinful people, ending in slavery.

The kingdom of Judah was also on the downgrade, but judgment was not visited on her as quickly because of the influence of a number of good kings who reigned during this period; see analysis of 2 Chronicles, 4236.

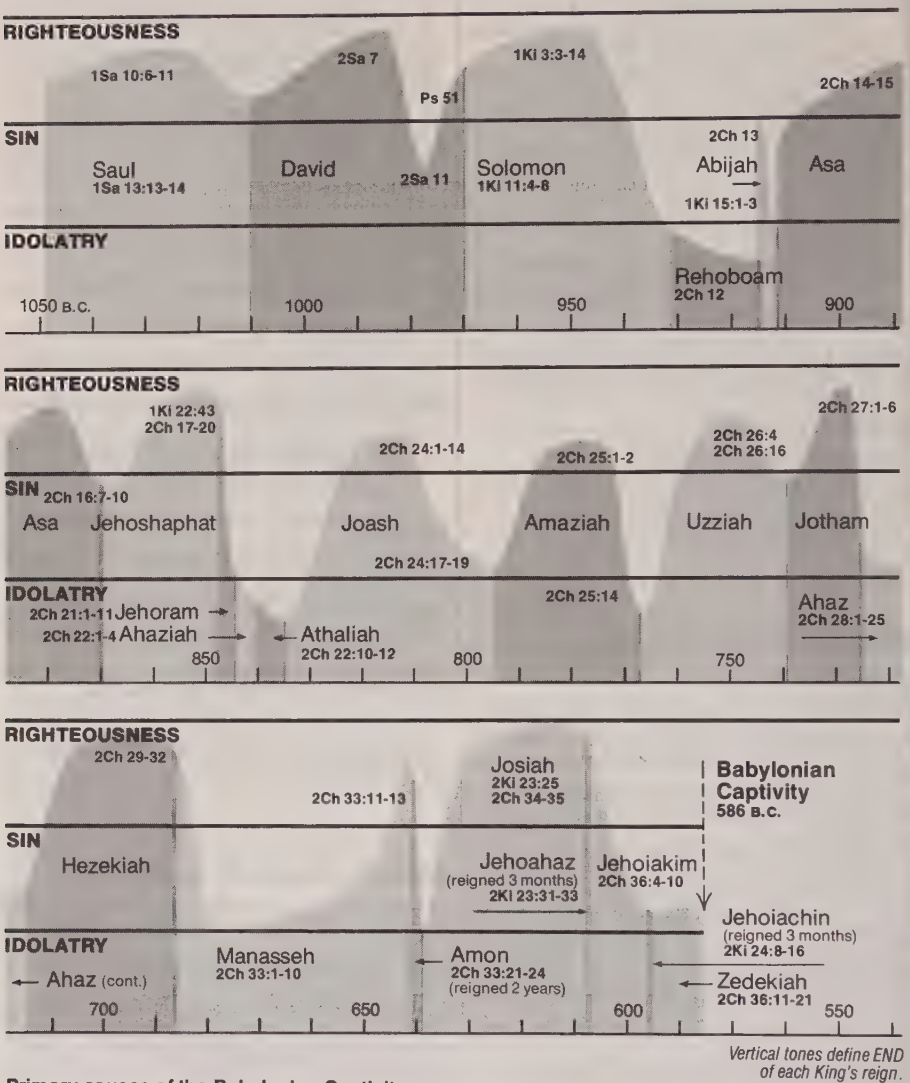
4235a–PRIMARY CAUSES of the BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY



Vertical tones define END of each King's reign.

Primary causes of the Babylonian Captivity

The diagram portrays the moral heights and depths in the lives of the kings of Judah, and these patterns were followed by their people—leading to the downfall of the kingdom.

Kings such as David, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Joash, Jotham, Hezekiah, and Josiah were spiritual giants in spite of their defects.

Because of these rulers, the nation was saved from destruction for a long period.

But a large majority of the kings, as shown in the drawing, did not live on the high plane of righteousness but descended into gross sins and idolatry, which brought on them divine judgments and ended in the captivity in Babylon.

4239—The Book of Esther

AUTHOR. Unknown.

CANONICITY. The right of the book to a place in the Scripture canon has been greatly disputed. The name of God does not appear in it, while a heathen king is referred to over one hundred and fifty times. There is no allusion to prayer or spiritual service of any kind, with the possible exception of fasting.

MESSAGE. Without doubt, it occupies its place in God's Word because of its hidden teaching of an overshadowing providence in connection with God's people and the certainty of retribution overtaking their enemies.

4241—The Book of Psalms

One hundred and fifty spiritual songs and poems used by the church in all ages in worship and devotional exercises. It was used as the hymn book of the second temple.
The predominant themes are prayer and praise, but the Psalms cover a great variety of religious experiences.
They are quoted more frequently in the New Testament than any other book, except Isaiah.
They are often called the psalms of David because he was the author of a large number of them.

SPIRITUAL LESSON

Solomon was a guidepost, rather than an example. He pointed the way to wisdom, but in the latter part of his life he did not walk in it. His son, Rehoboam, followed his example, rather than his counsel, and became a foolish and evil ruler.

4243—The Book of Ecclesiastes

NAME. Borrowed from the Septuagint (see 4220). In the Hebrew Bible it is called Koheleth. The meaning of this word is somewhat disputed, but it is usually rendered in English versions as "preacher," or one who addresses an assembly.

AUTHOR. Uncertain, but is commonly thought to be Solomon, 1:1–2.

Judging from the bare outline of his life found in the Bible, many of the experiences related here seem to correspond to those he may have had.

KEY TEXT, 12:13.

KEY WORDS. Meaningless, and under the sun. Each expression occurs more than twenty-five times.

CONTENTS

The book contains the reflections and experiences of a philosopher whose mind was in conflict over the problems of life.

After speaking of the disillusionments that had come to him, he presents the view of the Epicurean materialist—that there is nothing better than the carnal enjoyment of the pleasures of life.

As this idea reappears throughout the book, it is quite evident that the writer was struggling with it, while at the same time he was uttering profound truths concerning man's duty and obligations to God.

At last he seems to emerge from his speculations and doubts to reach the noble conclusion in 12:13, "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

4244—The Song of Songs

AUTHOR. Solomon, according to tradition.

This book has been severely criticized because of its sensuous language.

Its right to a place in the Bible has been defended by many godly people in all ages. Many have regarded it as a spiritual allegory, representing the holy affections existing between God and his chosen people or Christ and his church.

IT IS AN ORIENTAL POEM, the ardent expressions of which can only be properly interpreted by a mature spiritual mind.

GENERALLY REGARDED AS THE GREATEST of the Old Testament prophets.

(1) Because he is preeminently the prophet of redemption.

(2) Many of the passages in his book are among the finest in literature.

Some modern scholars have studied this poetic prophecy as a botanist studies flowers, dissecting and analyzing them.

By the use of this method the beauty and unity of the book, like that of the rose, is almost forgotten as the different parts are pulled to pieces for examination.

SECTION I. Largely a Narrative of Personal Biography and Local History. It contains an account of thrilling events and divine interpositions unsurpassed in the Old Testament. It refers to six moral conflicts in which Daniel and his companions participated.

Providence wins. The lions' mouths shut, 6:1–28.

SECTION II. Visions and Prophecies relating to the controlling hand of God moving the scenes in the panorama of history, chaps. 7–12.

INTERPRETATION. The Book of Daniel is a companion to the Book of Revelation; both contain much imagery that is mysterious.

The attempt to fit the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation into the facts and events of human history has produced an endless conflict of opinions.

The true interpretation of the details of the visions is not always clear.

Two facts are generally acknowledged by most scholars:

(1) The prophecies represent a partly veiled revelation of future events in secular and sacred history.

(2) The visions point to the ultimate triumph of God's kingdom over all satanic and world powers.

In chapter seven many commentators see the four beasts as representing the four great empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome (vv. 1–7), followed by a vision of the coming Messiah.

In chapter eight another period of Medo-Persian and Grecian history appears under the figure of a beast.

Chapter nine contains Daniel's prayer and a veiled prophecy of the time of the coming of the Messiah.

Chapters ten to twelve contain additional far-reaching predictions and revelations of future events.

4250—The Book of Hosea

AUTHOR. Hosea, the son of Beeri, 1:1. A contemporary of Isaiah and Micah. His message was addressed to the northern kingdom.

SPECIAL FITNESS FOR HIS TASK

(1) He is thought to have been a native of the north, and was familiar with the evil conditions existing in Israel. This gave a special weight to his message.
(2) Apparently he married a wife who proved to be unfaithful. This is doubted by some scholars, but if true would have enabled him to vividly portray God's attitude toward Israel, his "adulterous spouse," 1:2–3; 2:1–5. But the style of the book is highly figurative, and it may be that this account of his experience with his wife was allegorical.

SPIRITUAL MESSAGE. Apostasy from God is spiritual adultery.

(b) Israel, the unchaste wife, 2:2.

SYNOPSIS

SECTION I. Israel's Apostasy symbolized by the experience of the prophet in his marriage, chaps. 1–3.

Called to go as a missionary to Nineveh and warn the enemies of his country, he went with great reluctance. See 1909.

This narrative has been ridiculed as a myth by unbelievers, and is regarded by some scholars as a legend, or parable.

The Jews accepted it as historical; see Josephus, Antiq. IX. 10:2.

Jesus Christ vouched for its truth, Mt 12:39–41; Lk 11:29–30.

4256—The Book of Nahum

AUTHOR. Little known about him. Name means "compassionate," or "full of comfort."

DATE. Some time before the fall of Nineveh.

MAIN THEME. The destruction of Nineveh.

HISTORICAL SETTING. This book is regarded by some scholars as a sequel to Jonah.

It would appear that the Assyrians, after their repentance at the preaching of Jonah, soon relapsed into gross idolatry.

They plundered other nations, and their capital became like a lions' den full of prey, 2:11–12.

THE PURPOSE of the book was to pronounce divine vengeance upon the bloody city and to console Judah with promises of future deliverance, 3:1; 1:13–15.

SYNOPSIS

Chap. 1, a vision of the majesty and invincible power of Jehovah, who will break the yoke of the Assyrians and deliver Judah.

Chap. 2, a dramatic description of the siege of Nineveh.

Chap. 3, a woe pronounced upon the bloody city, and her complete ruin foretold.

Note. Some expositors have seen in 2:4 an allusion to the modern automobile, but this is a farfetched interpretation.

4257—The Book of Habakkuk

AUTHOR. Some have inferred from his psalm prayer (chapter 3) and from the instruction to the "director of music" that he was a singer in the temple; but this is purely conjectural.

DATE. Uncertain. The prophet evidently lived in the Babylonian (Chaldean) period. Many scholars fix the time of the prophecy during the reign of Jehoiakim.

MAIN THEME. The mysteries of providence.

KEY TEXT, 1:3.

SYNOPSIS

The book opens with the prophet in perplexity over the mystery of unpunished evil in the world.

The first two chapters are mainly composed of a dialogue between Habakkuk and Jehovah.

(1) The prophet complains to God that he sees sinful violence on every hand, yet no punishment is inflicted on the evildoers, 1:1–4.
(2) He receives a reply revealing the divine plan of using the Babylonians (Chaldeans) as a swift and terrible instrument of judgment on the wicked nations, 1:5–11.
(3) Still the moral problem is unanswered in the mind of the prophet. How can a holy God use these wicked heathen to destroy people more righteous than they? Are wrong and violence to continue forever? 1:12–17.
(4) The prophet ascends his rampart to look over the world. He receives the Lord's reply, is told the purpose of God is soon to be fulfilled, and is encouraged to wait for it, 2:1–3. Then follows the sentence that has been a watchword in the Christian church, 2:4

(5) Content with the new light received, the prophet utters a series of five woes against the dishonesty (2:6); the covetousness (2:9); the bloody building enterprises (2:12); the debauchery (2:15); and the idolatry (2:18–20) of the great world power.
(6) Finally he utters a sublime prayer (or psalm of praise), speaking of the majesty and glory of Jehovah and declaring his unwavering trust in the divine plans, 3:1–19.

otable Passages
2:4, the Morning Star of the reformation, Ro 1:17; eb 10:38.
2:14, the triumph of missions.
2:15, the woe to the drunkard-maker.
3:17–18, an all-conquering faith.

258—The Book of Zephaniah

UTHOR. Evidently a direct descendant of King lezekiah, 1:1.
He prophesied during the reign of Josiah, king of udah, 1:1.
It is thought he uttered his prophecy near the beginning of Josiah's reign, before the religious revival hich swept over the kingdom at that period. See 2Ki 2–23.
Tradition says that Zephaniah was associated with uldah the prophetess and Jeremiah in the initiation f the reformation of the kingdom.
IAIN THEME. The searching judgments of God.
EY TEXT, 1:12.
ONTENTS. The book is exceedingly somber in its one, and is filled with threats and denunciations. But he sun breaks through the clouds in the last chapter, nd the prophet foretells the coming of a glad day, hen the Jews will become a praise among all the eople of the earth.

(5) A universal judgment foretold, from which only a godly remnant escapes, 3:8–13.
(6) The future glory of Israel, when Jehovah will deliver his people, and cause them to become famous throughout the earth, 3:14–20.

259—The Book of Haggai

UTHOR. The "Prophet of the Temple" was reuted to have been born during the seventy years' aptivity in Babylon, and to have returned to Jerusaem with Zerubbabel. He was a colleague of Zechari, Ezr 5:1; 6:14.
IAIN THEME. Sharp rebukes for neglecting to rebuild the temple, coupled with encouraging exhortations and promises to those undertaking the work.
KEY TEXT, 2:4.
HISTORICAL OCCASION. The remnant that had returned from Captivity were selfishly preoccupied with their own affairs, and were more concerned in beautifying their own dwellings than in rebuilding the Lord's house. The work had ceased for years, 1:4.
THE MESSAGE
(1) A cutting reproof, showing that God had withheld his natural blessings, because his temple was left in ruins, 1:3–11.
(2) Words of encouragement as the work of rebuilding the temple was resumed, 1:12–15.
(3) Inspiring promises to the older people who had seen Solomon's temple and were discouraged at the inferiority of the structure they were able to build, 2:3. They were told of a coming manifestation of divine power and the appearing of the Messiah, when the glory of the Lord would fill the house, 2:7–9.
(4) A reminder of their unworthiness to erect a house for the Lord of Hosts, 2:10–14.

4260—The Book of Zechariah

AUTHOR. The son of Berekiah, 1:1.
Little is definitely known concerning this prophet. He was a contemporary of Haggai and joined him in arousing the Jews to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, Ezr 6:14.
Evidently he was a young man at the time of his prophecy, 2:4.
In the Septuagint version (see 4220) several psalms are credited to Zechariah and Haggai.
DATE. Two months after Haggai's prophecy (compare Hag 1:1 and Zec 1:1).
STYLE. Highly figurative.
THE PROPHET OF THE LONG VISION
Like Haggai, he saw the sinful condition and religious indifference of his people, and uttered stirring exhortations which aided in the rebuilding of the temple.
But his prophecy had a broader scope—he looked down the ages and saw the coming of the Messiah King and the dawning of a brighter day for Zion.

(3) The fountain of cleansing, 13:1.

4261—The Book of Malachi

AUTHOR. Nothing is known of the prophet's life except what is found in this book. He was probably a contemporary of Nehemiah; the conditions described in the prophecy best correspond to that time.

STYLE. Forceful and unusual. The Lord is represented as having a dialogue with his people.

"But you ask" is contrasted with "says the LORD Almighty" through the first three chapters.

THEME. A graphic picture of the closing period of Old Testament history, showing that great reforms were needed to prepare the way for the coming Messiah.

4263—The Gospel of Mark

AUTHOR. Mark, the son of Mary of Jerusalem, Ac 2:12.

Referred to as John Mark, in Ac 12:25.

A relative of Barnabas, Col 4:10.

Associated with Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey, Ac 12:25; 13:5.

Temporarily alienated from Paul, Ac 13:13; 15:37–39.

Afterward restored to his friendship, 2Ti 4:11.

Ancient tradition certifies that Mark was a companion of Peter. The book is called Peter's gospel by some ancient writers.

It is generally conceded that Peter may have furnished or suggested much of the material found in the book.

TO WHOM ADDRESSED. It is thought that the writer had Gentile Christians in mind in his preparation of the book.

That it was not especially adapted to Jewish readers seems clear from the fact that it contains few references to Old Testament prophecy. Furthermore, the explanation of Jewish words and customs would indicate that the author had Gentiles in mind when he wrote. See 3:17; 5:41; 7:1–4, 11, 34.

MAIN THEME. Christ, the tireless servant of God and man.

The life of Jesus is portrayed as full of good deeds.

His prayer time was interrupted, 1:35–37. He sometimes had no time to eat, 3:20. Because he yielded to perpetual calls for service, his friends said he was unbalanced, 3:21. He was pursued when he sought rest, 6:31–34.

KEY WORD. Immediately, repeated throughout the book.

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES. It is the shortest of the four Gospels.

The style is vivid and picturesque. Much of the subject matter is found also in Matthew and Luke, but it is not simply repetition, for it contains many details not found in either of the others.

The Gospel of Mark opens, like that of John, with a declaration of the divinity of Jesus Christ; but, unlike John, it does not enlarge upon the doctrine.

A careful study of the book, however, reveals the fact that the aim of the author is to let the wonderful works of Jesus, rather than frequent statements of the writer, testify to his deity.

Many personal touches are found in this gospel, such as: "was with the wild animals," 1:13; "he gave them the name Boanerges," 3:17; Jesus "was indignant," 10:14; "the disciples were astonished," 10:32; the "crowd listened to him with delight," 12:37; etc.

Although emphasizing Christ's divine power, the author often alludes to his human feelings: his disappointment, 3:5; his weariness, 4:38; his wonder, 6:6; his sighs, 7:34; 8:12; his affection, 10:21.

Matthew looks back and deals largely with the prophecies for the sake of Jewish readers, and also gives much space to the discourses of our Lord.

Mark is more condensed; has little to say concerning prophecy; gives only a brief report of the discourses, but stresses the mighty works of Jesus.

The nineteen miracles recorded in this short book demonstrate the supernatural power of the Lord.

Eight prove his power over disease, 1:31, 41; 2:3–12; 3:1–5; 5:25; 7:32; 8:23; 10:46.

Five show his power over nature, 4:39; 6:41, 49; 8:8–9; 11:13–14.

Four demonstrate his authority over demons, 1:25; 5:1–13; 7:25–30; 9:26.

Two show his conquest over death, 5:42; 16:9.

SYNOPSIS. The book may be divided into six parts.

PART I. The Introductory and Preliminary Events leading up to the public ministry of Christ, 1:1–13.

In this first chapter Mark plunges abruptly into his subject.

He opens with the announcement that Jesus is the Son of God, v. 1.

He then dwells on the five preparatory steps for his work,

(1) The coming of his forerunner, vv. 2–8.
(2) His baptism with water, v. 9.
(3) His empowering with the Holy Spirit, v. 10.
(4) The divine witness to his sonship, v. 11.
(5) His conflict with his arch enemy, vv. 12–13.

PART II. The Early Galilean Ministry, 1:14–7:23.

PART III. The Tour to Tyre and Sidon, 7:24–30.

PART IV. Christ's Teaching and Work in Northern Galilee, 7:31–9:50.

PART V. The Closing Ministry in Perea, and the journey toward Jerusalem, 10:1–52.

PART VI. The Events of Passion Week, 11:1–16:8.

4264—The Gospel of Luke

AUTHOR. Luke, the beloved physician, see Col 4:14. Also the author of Acts; both books are addressed to the same person.

Luke was a close friend and traveling companion of Paul, as is shown in his personal allusions recording the journeys of the apostle. See in the Book of Acts where the author changes the pronouns to "we" and "us," indicating that he himself was present at these times, Ac 16:10; 20:6; 27:1; 28:16.

Many scholars see something of Paul's doctrine in Luke's gospel. The exact date of the writing of the gospel is unknown. But if it were written after Luke came under Paul's influence, it would be quite natural that the latter would give some coloring to the narrative.

TO WHOM ADDRESSED. To Theophilus, whose identity is unknown. Internal evidence indicates the book was written especially for Gentiles. This is inferred from the fact that the writer takes pains to explain Jewish customs and sometimes substitutes Greek names for Hebrew.

PURPOSE. To give a connected and orderly narrative of the life of Christ as seen by eyewitnesses, 1:1–4.

KEY TEXT, 1:4.

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES

(1) It is a gospel of the universal grace of God, 2:32; 3:6; 24:47.

(2) It is the gospel of "the Son of Man." It emphasizes Christ's sympathetic attitude toward the poor, the lowly, and the outcasts. The poor disciples, 6:20; the sinful woman, 7:37; Mary Magdalene, 8:2; the Samaritans, 10:33; tax collectors and sinners, 15:1; the deserted beggar, 16:20–21; the lepers, 17:12; the dying thief, 23:43, etc.

(3) It is a devotional gospel; it especially emphasizes prayer.

- (a) It contains three parables on prayer not found in the other gospels. The friend at midnight, 11:5–8; the unjust judge, 18:1–8; the Pharisee and tax collector, 18:9–14.
- (b) It contains Christ's prayers—at his baptism, 3:21; in the wilderness, 5:16; before choosing the disciples, 6:12; at the Transfiguration, 9: 29; before giving the Lord's Prayer, 11:1; for Peter, 22:32; in the Garden of Gethsemane, 22:44; on the cross, 23:46; etc.

(4) Its early chapters have a note of joy and praise.

Some of the great Christian hymns are taken from this gospel. "The Ave Maria," the words of the angel to Mary, 1:28–33; "The Magnificat," Mary's song, 1:46–55; "The Benedictus," Zechariah, 1:68–79; "The Gloria in Excelsis," of the heavenly angels, 2:13–14; "The Nunc Dimittis," the rejoicing of Simeon, 2:29–32.

(5) It highly honors womanhood. Women appear prominently in Luke's narrative.

In chapter one, Mary, Elizabeth; Mary and her sister Martha in chapter ten; the daughters of Jerusalem, 23:27. Several widows are mentioned, 2:37; 4:26; 7:12; 18:3; 21:2.

(6) The biography of Christ is more complete in Luke than in either of the other gospels. About one half the material in this book is not in the others. Many of the most important utterances of our Lord and striking incidents of his life are recorded in this gospel.

Examples: The miraculous catch of fish, 5:6; raising the widow's son, 7:11–15; the ten lepers, 17:12; Malchus healed, 22:51.

For the parables which occur only in Luke, see 2679.

Other incidents and sayings recorded only by Luke: Christ weeping over Jerusalem, 19:41; reference to the conversation of Moses and Elijah on the Mount of Transfiguration, 9:30–31; the bloody sweat, 22:44; Christ before Herod, 23:8; Christ's words to the women of Jerusalem, 23:28; the penitent thief, 23:40; the walk to Emmaus, 24:13–31.

(5) Events connected with the Resurrection and the Ascension, 24:1–51.

4265—The Gospel of John

AUTHOR. The apostle John, see 1902.

DATE. Uncertain, probably late in the first century.

MAIN PURPOSE. To inspire faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God.

KEY TEXT, 20:31.

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES

(1) It is considered by many to be the deepest and most spiritual book in the Bible.

(2) In it Christ gives a more complete revelation of himself, and of God, than in any of the synoptic gospels.

- (a) Of his person and attributes. See the "I am"s of Christ, 4166.
- (b) Of his divinity, 1:1; 10:30–38; 12:45; 14:7–9; 16:15.
- (c) Of the work of the Holy Spirit. See 4165.5
- (d) Of his own divine commission. For example, in the fifth chapter he declares that he is sent from God six times consecutively—in verses 23, 24, 30, 36, 37, 38.

(e) Of the fatherhood of God. Christ speaks of God as "the Father" over one hundred times.

God is the spiritual father, 4:23; he is the life-giving Father, 5:21; the message is the Father's, 7:16; the Father is greater than all, 10:29; the works are the Father's, 14:10; God is the indwelling Father, 14:23; the eternal Father, 17:5; the holy Father, 17:11; the righteous Father, 17:25, etc.

(3) Perhaps the most notable of all the distinctives of this gospel is the fact that over one half of the space in the book is given to the events of Christ's life and his sayings during his last days.

(4) Discourses and conversations found only in John—the talk with Nicodemus, 3:1–21; with the woman of Samaria, 4:1–26; the discourse to the Jews at the Feast of Tabernacles, 7:14–39; 8:3–58; the parable of the good shepherd, chap. 10; the series of private instructions to the disciples, his comforting words and intercessory prayer, chaps. 14–17; his meeting with the disciples at the Sea of Galilee, chap. 21, etc.

(5) John records eight miracles of Christ (besides his own resurrection) to prove his divinity. Six of these are found only in this gospel:

The water made into wine, 2:1–11; healing the official's son, 4:46–54; healing the man at the pool, 5:1–9; the man born blind, 9:1–7; the raising of Lazarus, 11; the second catch of fish, 21:1–6.

(6) Two great currents of thought flow through the book that are profitable to follow.

(a) Faith, 3:16–18; 5:24; 6:29, 40; 7:38; 8:24; 10: 37–38; 11:25–27; 12:46; 14:12.

(b) Eternal life, 3:15, 16, 36; 4:14; 5:24; 6:27, 51; 11:26; 12:50; 17:3; 20:31.

SYNOPSIS. The book may be divided into five parts.

(1) The Prologue. The eternal Word incarnate, 1:1–18.

(2) The Manifestation of Christ's divinity to the world accompanied by a six-fold testimony. That of John the Baptist, the Holy Spirit, the disciples, Christ's mighty works, that of the Father, and the Scriptures, 1:19–12:50.

(3) The private revelation and instruction to the disciples, chaps. 13–17.

(4) His humiliation and triumph over death, chaps. 18–20.

(5) The epilogue, 21:1–23.

See 4303, 4308.

4266—The Acts of the Apostles

(See 4309.)

AUTHOR. Luke, the beloved physician (see 2216). The book is in some sense a sequel to the gospel of Luke and is addressed to the same person, Theophilus, 1:1.

MAIN THEME. The history of the development of the early church, from the ascension of Christ to Paul's imprisonment at Rome, and the opening of his ministry there. Many Bible students see in the book the formal beginning of the age of the Holy Spirit. The departing Christ makes the announcement of a great campaign of worldwide missions, through human agency under the power of the Spirit, 1:8.

THE BOOK MAY BE DIVIDED INTO TWO PARTS, the period of home missions and the period of foreign missions.

(1) Preliminary events leading to worldwide missions.

(b) The conversion of Paul, who becomes the great missionary and the leading figure in the church during this period, 9:1–30.

(c) The broadening of Peter's views by his vision at Joppa, resulting in his ministry among the Gentiles at Caesarea, 10:1–43.

(d) The outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the Gentiles at Caesarea and the vindication of Peter's ministry there, 10:44–11:18.

(e) The sanction of the work at Antioch by Barnabas, the representative of the church at Jerusalem, 11:22–24.

(f) The bringing of Paul from Tarsus to Antioch by Barnabas and the cooperation of the two men in establishing the church in the place where the disciples were first called Christians, 11:25–26.

(3) Paul's first missionary journey. Missionaries, Paul, Barnabas, and John Mark, 13:4–14:26.

Places visited and outstanding events:

The island of Cyprus where the proconsul was converted and Saul's name changed to Paul in the record, 13:4–12.

Perga in Pamphylia, where John Mark deserted the group, 13:13.

Antioch in Pisidia, Paul's great sermon in the synagogue, 13:14–41.

Opposition by the Jews and work among the Gentiles, 13:44–49.

Driven from the city by the Jews, the missionaries go to Iconium. Here they work for some time, but persecution arises and they flee to Lystra and Derbe, 14:6.

The healing of the lame man at Lystra results in the people proposing to worship Paul and Barnabas, but the Jews stir up opposition and Paul is stoned.

Undaunted, the two heroes escape to Derbe, where they preach the gospel and teach many, 14:8–20.

From this point the missionaries retrace their steps, revisiting and organizing the churches, and return to Antioch in Syria, where they make a report of their journey, 14:21–28.

Visitation of the churches of Syria and Cilicia, 15:41; at Lystra, Timothy joins the missionaries, and various cities of Asia Minor are visited and the churches strengthened, 15:41–16:5.

The Spirit guides them to Troas, where they are called into Europe by the Macedonian vision, 16:7–10.

At Philippi Paul and Silas are imprisoned, and the jailer converted, 16:12–34, and a church is established.

The next important event is the founding of a church at Thessalonica, where persecution arises and they depart for Berea, 17:1–10. Here the missionaries find some faithful students of the Word who become ready converts, 17:11–12.

A storm of persecution breaks out again, and Paul goes on to Athens, leaving Silas and Timothy to establish the church, 17:13–15.

At Athens Paul finds a city filled with idols, and preaches a sermon on Mars' Hill, but makes only a few converts to the faith, 17:15–34.

At Corinth Paul is soon joined by Silas and Timothy, and a church is founded. The work is carried on in the midst of persecution for eighteen months, 18:1–17.

After a considerable time Paul bids the brothers farewell, and sets sail for Syria, making a brief stop at Ephesus and closes his journey at Antioch, 18:18–22.

Paul returns to Ephesus and finds a company of imperfectly instructed disciples and leads them into the larger life of the Spirit, 19:1–7.

He continues in the work at Ephesus for two years, 19:8–10. The Lord shows his approval of the work by bestowing on Paul the gift of healing, 19:11–12. Sinners are convicted and many burned their evil books, 19:11–20.

Then there arises an uproar among the craftsmen, fearing that Paul's teaching will destroy their business of idol making, 19:23–41.

Paul leaves Ephesus, and after visiting the churches of Macedonia, comes to Greece, 20:1–2. He spends three months in Greece, then returns to Macedonia and comes to Troas and preaches, 20:3–12.

From Troas he goes to Miletus and sends for the Ephesian elders to come to him.

At Miletus he delivers his farewell address to the elders, 20:17–38.

267—The Letter to the Romans

UTHOR. The apostle Paul.
DDRESSED TO. Roman Christians, 1:7.
EY TEXT, 1:16; 5:1.
The letter may be divided into two main sections: art I. Doctrinal, chaps. 1–11. Part II. Practical, naps. 12–16.
AIN THEME of Part I. The Plan of Salvation. ustification by faith and sanctification through the oly Spirit. Part II. Mainly Exhortations concern- g Christian duties.
MASTERFUL ARGUMENT. In Part I, the apos- e proceeds to prove that the entire human race is rrounded by three insurmountable walls.
(1) The wall of universal guilt, chaps. 1–3.
(2) The wall of sinful tendencies and fleshly lusts, 7:15–24.
(3) The wall of the sovereign election of God, 9:7–18.

In the midst of his argument showing the fearful situation of the natural man, he points out the doors of divine mercy provided for in the plan of salvation, by which all men can escape the impending judgments of God if they will.

An attempt is made in the following drawing to illustrate the points of the apostle's argument by a diagram of the walls of separation and the doors of escape.

EY CHAIN, showing the current of thought, 1:16; :22–23, 28; 4:3; 5:1, 18; 9:31–32; 10:3–4, 6–9.

(7) In chapter seven, Paul is evidently speaking of the struggle with sinful tendencies and fleshly desires. Whether he refers to his experience before or after conversion is a question about which Bible students differ. All agree that he vividly portrays the strife that goes on in the human heart, 7:7–24.
(8) The culmination of the divine plan of salvation is pictured in chapter eight. It is a new spiritual life of liberty and righteousness through faith in Christ. This is one of the great spiritual chapters of the Bible, in which the Holy Spirit is referred to nineteen times.
(9) Parenthesis. Paul's deep concern for his own people, 9:1–5.
(10) The mystery of divine election and God's dealings with Israel.

4268–The First Letter to the Corinthians

AUTHOR. The apostle Paul. See 2697.

HISTORICAL OCCASION. The church at Corinth was founded by Paul on his second missionary journey. It had become infected with the evils that surrounded it in a licentious city.

The Greeks were proud of their learning and philosophy, but at the same time were grossly immoral.

They were especially fond of oratory.

It is apparent that Apollos, an eloquent Christian Jew, had come to Corinth and captured the imaginations of the Greek Christians, Ac 18:24–28.

This fact led to the drawing of comparisons between him, with his silver tongue, and other religious leaders—especially to the discredit of Paul, whose physical appearance seems not to have been impressive (see 2Co 10:10).

This probably is the clue to the schisms in the church, 1Co 1:11–13. It was the desire of Paul to purify the church from party spirit and immorality, which was the primary cause of the writing of the letter.

THE LETTER MAY BE DIVIDED INTO TWO PARTS

PART I. Main Theme. The cleansing of the church from false conceptions of the ministry, intellectual pride, social evils, and other disorders, chaps. 1–11

KEY CHAIN showing the false conceptions of the ministry, 1:12–17; 3:4–7, 21–22; 4:6–7.

(4) The strife over leaders is a mark of immaturity and carnality, 3:1–8.
(5) The true view of the ministry. Ministers should be regarded:
  (a) As dispensers of the truth, 3:1–2.
  (b) As gardeners, 3:6–8.
  (c) As colaborers with God, 3:9.
  (d) As character builders, 3:10.
  (e) As trustworthy servants, 4:1–2.
  (f) As sufferers for Christ's sake, 4:9–13.
  (g) As examples, 4:16–17.

THE MAGNA CHARTA OF THE CHURCH. This letter has been so called by some writers. The main argument is in favor of Christian liberty in opposition to the teachings of the Judaizers. (2) By appealing to the former spiritual experience of the Galatians, 3:1–5.
(3) By showing that Abraham was justified by faith, 3:6–9.

(6) By indicating the purpose of the law as a guide to prepare the way for Christ, 3:19–25.

4274—The First Letter to the Thessalonians

AUTHOR. The apostle Paul. See 2697.

DATE. Time and place is uncertain. It is generally thought that this was the earliest of Paul's letters and was probably written from Corinth, A.D. 49–54.

THE CHURCH. Founded by Paul on his second missionary journey. He met with violent opposition in his work, but he succeeded in winning some Jews and numerous Greeks, which enabled him to establish a faithful church. See Ac 17:1–10.

HISTORICAL OCCASION. Paul had sent Timothy to encourage and strengthen the church. On his return, the report he gave apparently inspired the apostle to write the letter, 3:6.

MAIN THEMES. This is one of the most personal of all of Paul's letters. It is not as doctrinal or polemical as some of the others.

The body of the letter consists chiefly of commendations, personal reminiscences, counsel, and exhortations.

The central truth, strongly emphasized, is the future hope of the coming of Christ.

4275—The Second Letter to the Thessalonians

A Sequel to 1 Thessalonians

AUTHOR. The apostle Paul. See 2697.

DATE. Probably written from Corinth shortly after the first letter.

HISTORICAL OCCASION. It is apparent that certain expressions in Paul's first letter to this church had been misinterpreted. When he had referred to the uncertainty of the time of Christ's coming, his words had been understood as teaching that the day of the Lord was at hand.

This resulted in undue excitement. The converts were unsettled and alarmed, 2:2. They were holding wrong views about the nearness of the Lord's coming, which upset their lives.

Some have thought, from the wording of verses 2 and 3 of chapter 2, that the church had received a forged letter which had added to the problem; but this is purely conjectural. There is little doubt that Paul's letter was written to help settle down this confused and anxious church.

4277—The Second Letter to Timothy

AUTHOR. The apostle Paul. See 2697.

PLACE AND DATE. Probably written from Rome A.D. 65–67. It contains the last recorded words of the apostle.

PURPOSE

(1) General, to encourage and instruct a young pastor in his ministerial work.

(2) Special, to request Timothy, his son in the gospel, to hurry to Rome in order that he might have the comfort of his companionship, 1:4; 4:9, 21.

HISTORICAL OCCASION. It is generally believed that Paul suffered two imprisonments at Rome, and that it was during the second that this letter was written. Earlier he had had a certain degree of liberty and lived in his own rented house, Ac 28:30.

At that time he had been accessible to his friends, but now he is in close confinement and Onesiphorus even had difficulty finding him, 1:17. He had been deserted by many of his former associates, 1:15, and was expecting very soon to be executed, 4:6. A pathetic strain of loneliness runs through the letter, and it is not surprising that Paul was anxious to see his beloved Timothy.

PECULIARITIES OF THE LETTER.

Both letters to Timothy contain urgent exhortations. Quite possibly Timothy was not healthy (see 1Ti 5:23).

Perhaps he was also timid, 2Ti 1:6–7. The word "ashamed" appears prominently in the epistle.

He was urged not to be ashamed of his testimony, his prisoner friend, 1:8, or his workmanship, 2:15.

He was exhorted to regard himself as a soldier in the midst of a hard campaign, 2:3–4.

THE LETTER MAY BE DIVIDED INTO FOUR PARTS, the chapters furnishing the natural divisions.

4278—The Letter to Titus

AUTHOR. The apostle Paul. See 2697.

FACTS CONCERNING TITUS. He was a Gentile, Gal 2:3; a beloved friend and helper of Paul, 2Co 2:13; 7:6, 13; 8:23. A messenger of the church at Corinth, 2Co 8:16–18. He was thoroughly trustworthy and unselfish, 2Co 12:18. A companion of Paul and Barnabas on a journey to Jerusalem, Gal 2:1. He was left in Crete by Paul to oversee the churches, Tit 1:5. He was in Rome with Paul during the latter's imprisonment, 2Ti 4:10. He seems to have been healthier than Timothy and probably more mature.

MAIN THEME. Counsel and exhortations relating to ministerial duties and doctrines, with special emphasis on maintaining good works.

KEY TEXTS, 1:5; 3:8.

MAIN THOUGHT. The emphasis on good works is seen in 1:16; 2:7, 14; 3:1, 8, 14. This is sufficient answer to those who claim that there is a conflict of doctrine between Paul's letters and that of James.

The character of the Cretans was such that Paul thought it necessary to advise their minister to insist upon consistent Christian living. Nevertheless this letter does not teach salvation by works, 3:5.

Saved by grace, 3:4–7.

4279—The Letter to Philemon

A private letter of intercession written by Paul probably from Rome, and sent to Philemon at Colosse, Col 4:7–9.

FACTS CONCERNING PHILEMON. He was apparently a member of the church at Colosse, which seems to have met in his house, v. 2.

His benevolence (vv. 5–7) and Paul's request for him to prepare a lodging (v. 22) indicate that he was a man of some means.

As Paul had never been in Colosse (Col 2:1), Philemon must have met him elsewhere, possibly in Ephesus, which was not far away.

He probably owed his conversion to the apostle, v. 19.

THE STORY OF ONESIMUS. He was a runaway slave of Philemon. It is implied that he robbed his master and fled to Rome, v. 18, where he came under the influence of Paul and was converted (cf. v. 10).

He became a devoted disciple of Christ, Col 4:9. Paul wanted to keep him in Rome as a helper (v. 13), but not having the consent of Philemon (v. 14), he felt it his duty to send the slave back to his master.

So the apostle writes this beautiful letter of intercession, pleading with Philemon to forgive and restore Onesimus to favor.

SYNOPSIS

(1) The cordial and commendatory greeting, vv. 1–7.

(2) The testimonial concerning the changed character of Onesimus, vv. 10–11.

(3) The tender appeal for forgiveness of the returning slave, vv. 12–19.

(2) The duty of obedience to the law by converts: Onesimus must return to his master.

(3) Christian brotherhood obliterates all social and class distinctions.

4280—The Letter to the Hebrews

AUTHOR AND DATE. Uncertain.

The letter is anonymous and has been ascribed to Paul, Barnabas, Luke, Apollos, and various others.

PURPOSE. The letter was apparently written primarily to Hebrew Christians. These converts were in constant danger of relapsing into Judaism, or at least of attaching too much importance to ceremonial observances. The chief doctrinal purpose of the writer was to show the transcendent glory of the Christian age as compared to that of the Old Testament.

KEY WORD. Better, or superior. By following these words the reader will discover the main current of thought.

See 3500.

4281—The Letter of James

AUTHOR. Uncertain. There are three prominent persons named James in the New Testament. It is generally agreed that James, called by Paul "the Lord's brother," (Gal 1:19), was the writer of the letter. See 1844.

TO WHOM ADDRESSED. Apparently to the Jewish converts who lived outside the Holy Land; possibly also to the devout Jews of the Dispersion, 1:1.

MAIN THEME. Practical religion, manifesting itself in good works, contrasted with mere profession of faith.

KEY TEXTS, 1:27; 2:26.

IMAGINARY DOCTRINAL CONFLICT BETWEEN PAUL AND JAMES

Any supposed conflict in doctrine between this letter and that of Romans is purely imaginary.

Paul, harassed by Judaistic teachers in the churches, naturally laid great stress upon justification by faith apart from trust in ceremonial observances. Nevertheless, when writing to Titus, he made the importance of good works the main subject of his letter, thereby showing perfect harmony with the teachings of James. It is evident that the latter, when he seems to depreciate faith, is referring to mere intellectual assent to truth, and not to the "saving faith" spoken by Paul.

SYNOPSIS. This letter does not easily lend itself to analysis, but most of the material may be arranged under two headings, true and false religion.

4282—The First Letter of Peter

AUTHOR. The apostle Peter. See 2746.

It was not the earlier Simon Peter, impulsive and full of weaknesses, whom Christ called Simon, Mk 14:37; Lk 22:31; Jn 21:15–17. It was the Peter who Christ prophesied would become a rock, Jn 1:42—the same man who was disciplined by years of suffering and trial and strengthened by the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The letter evidently belongs to the latter period of his life.

DATE AND PLACE OF WRITING. Uncertain. The Babylon referred to in 5:13, may or may not have been the city on the Euphrates River. Many think it was Rome, figuratively called Babylon.

TO WHOM ADDRESSED. To the elect scattered throughout the Asia Minor. Probably to the whole body of Christians in that region, both Jew and Gentile. To the churches largely founded by Paul, Peter sends this spiritual message of encouragement, instruction, and admonition.

PURPOSE. In writing this letter, Peter obeyed two specific commands Jesus had given him.
(1) To encourage and strengthen the brothers, Lk 22: 32.
(2) To feed the flock of God, Jn 21:15–17.

4284—The First Letter of John

AUTHOR. The apostle John. See 1902.
PLACE AND DATE. Uncertain. Probably written from Ephesus near the end of the first century.
TO WHOM ADDRESSED. Apparently to the church at large, since it has no greetings, farewells, or other personal allusions; it therefore belongs to the general letters.

It calls believers by affectionate titles, as "dear children," 2:1, 18, 28; 3:7, 18; 4:4; 5:21; and "dear friends," 3:2, 21; 4:1, 7, 11.
PURPOSES. The writer mentions four reasons for writing this letter to believers: to add to their joy, 1:4; to keep them from sin, 2:1; to warn them about false teachers, 2:26; to strengthen their faith in Christ and assure them of eternal life, 5:13.
KEY WORDS. Fellowship, know, love.
CENTRAL THEME. God is life, light, and righteous love. His character calls for holy living and brotherly love by believers.
DISTINCTIVE CHARACTERISTICS. This may be entitled, "The Letter of Certainties." It opens with a positive statement of personal knowledge of Christ, 1:1–3.

It strongly emphasizes spiritual knowledge obtainable by believers. The word "know," or its equivalent, appears over thirty times.

Seven important instances where the words "we (or "you") know," appear.
Believers know:
(1) That a righteous life indicates regeneration, 2:29; 5: 18.
(2) That we shall be like Christ at his coming, 3:2.
(3) That Christ came to take away our sins, 3:5.
(4) That brotherly love indicates that we have passed from death to life, 3:14.

4286—The Third Letter of John

AUTHOR. The apostle John. See 1902.

ADDRESSED to Gaius, v. 1.

KEY THOUGHT. Christian hospitality.

KEY TEXT, v. 8.

SYNOPSIS. The subject matter centers around thre characters, Gaius, Diotrephes, and Demetrius, an some traveling evangelists.

I. Gaius, to whom the letter was written.

(1) Identity of. This cannot be positively deter mined. There are several persons by thi name mentioned in the New Testament. Th one spoken of by Paul in Ro 16:23 may be th same man to whom John writes, but it i uncertain.

(2) Characteristics of.

(a) Worthy of the affection of John, vv. 1–2

(b) A consistent Christian, walking in th truth, vv. 3–4.

(c) Given to hospitality, vv. 5–6.

I. Demetrius, in contrast to Diotrephes, a model Christian of excellent reputation, v. 12.
V. Christian evangelists.
   (a) Traveling Christian workers rendering gratuitous service for Christ's sake, v. 7.
   (b) Worthy of hearty welcome and hospitality, but bitterly opposed by the arrogant Diotrephes, vv. 8–11.
V. The closing salutation, vv. 13–14.

287—The Letter of Jude

UTHOR. Probably Jude, the brother of James. e 1964. If this is true he may have been a brother our Lord; cf. Mk 6:3; Gal 1:19.
The Lord's brothers did not believe in him at first, 7:5; but after the Resurrection they became his lowers, Ac 1:14. It is possible that Jude, because of s early unbelief, felt that he was not worthy to sign mself as brother of Jesus. So in writing the letter he lled himself simply a servant, v. 1.
AIN PURPOSE. The letter was evidently written pecially to warn the church against immoral achers and alarming heresies which were endanger- g the faith of believers.
EY TEXT, vv. 3–4.
YNOPSIS
1) The salutation, vv. 1–2.
2) The occasion of the letter and an exhortation concerning the defense of the faith, because of the invasion of immoral and heretical teachers, vv. 3–4.

   (a) The punishment of Israel for unbelief, v. 5.
   (b) The fate of the fallen angels and the corrupt Sodomites, vv. 6–7.
4) The characteristics of godless teachers described, and a woe pronounced upon them, vv. 8–13.
5) References to prophecies.
   (a) Of Enoch, who foretold the doom of ungodly men, vv. 14–16.

   (b) Love toward God and trust in Christ for eternal salvation, v. 21.
   (c) Activity in soul-winning, vv. 22–23.
7) The benediction, vv. 24–25.

UTHOR. The apostle John. See 1902.
LACE. Probably the island of Patmos, off the estern coast of Asia Minor, where John was banished "because of the Word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ."
DATE. Uncertain; according to traditional opinion about A.D. 96.
AUTHORITY. It is declared to be the revelation of Jesus Christ, 1:1.
METHODS OF INTERPRETATION. These have been exceedingly varied and often imaginative. Hundreds of volumes have been written on this book.
There have been four principal schools of thought dealing with the subject matter.
(1) The preterist. Believes that the prophecies of Revelation have already been fulfilled.
(2) The futurist. Holds that the book contains a forecast of universal history.
(3) The historicist. Sees the events of the book as symbolic portrayals of church history, from New Testament times to the end of the age.
(4) The eclectic, or idealist. Stresses the spiritual principles of the book and does not attempt to dogmatize on details of the more mysterious visions.
This school believes that there are three types of passages in the Apocalypse: those that are very clear in their spiritual teaching; those that are more mysterious, and yet contain an element of truth that is instructive; and those that are so veiled that it is futile from our present knowledge to give positive interpretations.
It is probable that some of the prophecies contain two elements, the near and the far. The former refer especially to events during John's time or shortly thereafter; the latter deal with events in coming ages.
PECULIAR FEATURES
(1) The Apocalypse is the only book in the Bible that contains a special promise to obedient readers (1:3) and at the same time pronounces a curse upon those who tamper with its contents, 22:18–19.
(2) Seven is the dominant number of the book.
Seven lampstands, churches, seals, angels, trumpets, thunders, bowls, spirits, stars, etc.; and seven "no mores." See 1359.
(3) The closing chapters of Revelation contain a striking contrast to the opening chapters of Genesis.
Genesis speaks of the creation of the sun, the entrance of sin into the world, the pronouncement of the curse, Satan's triumph, and the exclusion from the "tree of life."
Revelation tells of a place where there will be no need of the sun, where sin is banished, where the curse is gone, Satan is overthrown, and admission is given to the "tree of life."
PLAN OF STUDY
Although this book has often been neglected because of its mysterious character, there are many viewpoints from which it may be profitably studied without any attempt at dogmatic or arbitrary interpretation. If the book is written in code, we make no claim of having discovered a key that will unlock its mysteries.
We simply suggest the following subject as a profitable one to pursue.
SUGGESTED THEME. The moral and spiritual conflict of the ages.

all the powers of evil. The Lamb is mentioned about thirty times.

EPOCHAL EVENTS. There are many such events in the book; we suggest two, which should be kept in mind in studying the visions.

(1) The birth of the man child, regarded by many as the incarnation of Jesus Christ, chap. 12.

(2) The sounding of the seventh trumpet (11:15), which heralds his worldwide victory.

SYNOPSIS

The book may be divided into a series of visions, some of which are partly or wholly veiled; others are comparatively clear in their teachings. It is not always possible to tell just where one vision ends and another begins, but for convenience they may be studied under various numbers, according to one's viewpoint.

Chap. 1.

(1) Introduction and promise to obedient readers, vv. 1–3.

(2) Salutation of John and of the glorified Christ, vv. 4–8.

VISION I.

(1) Of the glorified Christ, 9–16.

(2) His command to write to the seven churches, v. 19.

(3) The message to the churches, chaps. 2–3.

Chap. 2.

(a) To Ephesus, the backslidden church, persistent in service, strong in discipline, but with love growing cold, vv. 1–7.

(b) To Smyrna, the poor but truly rich church, facing a period of persecution, vv. 8–11.

(c) To Pergamum, the church in an evil environment, steadfast, but infected with heresy, vv. 12–17.

(d) To Thyatira, the church of good works, but tolerating a false prophetess, vv. 18–29.

Chap. 3.

(e) To Sardis, the dying church, vv. 1–6.

(f) To Philadelphia, the weak, but faithful church, vv. 7–13.

(g) To Laodicea, the lukewarm, self-satisfied church, boasting of her wealth while being wretched, poor, and blind, vv. 14–22.

Recurrent thought, the promises to overcomers. See 374.

VISION II. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 4.

(1) The vision of God in heaven upon his throne, the Creator of the universe, receiving the worship of the living creatures and the twenty-four elders, vv. 1–11.

Chap. 5.

(2) The opening of the seven-sealed scroll by the Lamb, the singing of the new song, and the universal worship of the Lamb.
Suggested interpretation: only Christ can unlock the deepest divine mysteries.

Chap. 6.

(3) The opening of the six seals, (veiled), vv. 1–17. There have been many widely different interpretations; it is not worthwhile to add another. One clear lesson, vv. 9–11, that believers are tested by divine delay. See 3607.

VISION III. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 7. vv. 1–8, Suggested thought, God's protection of his chosen people.

VISION IV.

Chap. 7. Comforting assurances.

(a) The innumerable host of the redeemed, vv. 9–10.

(b) The means by which they appear in God's presence, vv. 13–15.

(c) Their activities and eternal joy, vv. 15–17.

VISION V. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 8. Momentous event, the opening of the seventh seal, causing silence in heaven. v. 1.

Possible explanation. All the music and the voices of the angels were stilled by the fact that, during the period of the seventh seal, Christ was to leave for his earthly mission.

This is not purely imaginary. The fullness of time was evidently approaching, 10:6. If this interpretation is correct, in 8:1 we are at the very sources of the divine plan of salvation and we will see the event focusing toward the birth of the man child in the 12th chapter.

In 8:3–4, the thought appears to be that the prayers of the saints are ascending to God for the coming of the messianic kingdom.

Chap. 9. Then follows a veiled portion of the vision, the sounding of the six trumpets, chaps. 8 and 9, apparently announcing impending judgments.

Chaps. 10 and 11.

VISION VI. Partly Veiled. Little more can be said than that the events seem to be moving forward toward the great consummation. This is indicated by the announcement of the mighty angel (10:5–7), that there will be no more delay, but that the good news spoken of by the prophets is about to be fulfilled.

Among so many different opinions it is risky to suggest an interpretation of the little scroll in chapter 10 and of the two witnesses in chapter 11. Since these immediately precede the vision of the birth of the man child in chapter 12, they may refer to the prophetic period prior to the coming of Christ.

Perhaps chapters 12–20 contain partly-veiled visions connected with the great messianic conflict.

VISION VII.

Chaps. 12 and 13. The great epochal event. The birth of the man child, Christ, and the simultaneous manifestation of the satanic powers arrayed to destroy him.

The justification for this viewpoint is that during Christ's earthly life the powers of darkness were in frenzied activity. Note the attempt of Herod to destroy the child Jesus, the numerous cases of demon possession, and the malignant opposition that resulted in Christ's crucifixion.

No detailed interpretation of the mysteries is given here, but attention is called to the spiritual weapons by which the victory was to be won, vv. 12:11. See 3611.

VISION VIII. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 14. vv. 1–13. Without strained interpretation, it is possible to regard this chapter as a prophetic mmary of the coming conflict between the Lamb nd his enemies.

If this view is accepted, in the first five verses the he hundred and forty-four thousand represent the ltstanding believers of the old dispensation; verses –7 would refer to the opening up of worldwide mis- onary activity (see 2379); verses 8–11 are the reliminary announcement of the final victory; and erses 12–13 refer to the blessedness of the believing ead.

ISION IX. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 14. The harvest and vintage of grapes, vv. 5–20.

ISION X. Partly Veiled.

Chap. 15.

(1) The early victors and their song, vv. 1–4. See 2477.

4289–Noah, the Ark Builder

HIS ORIGIN AND EARLY LIFE. Nothing is known of his early days. He first appears in Scripture when he is five hundred years old.

His great grandfather, Enoch, was a man of notable piety who, because of divine favor, escaped death by being translated, Ge 5:22–24; Heb 11:5.

His grandfather, Methuselah, was the longest-lived man, according to Genesis, 5:25–27. His father's name was Lamech, apparently a religious man, who gave his child a name that is thought to mean "rest," Ge 5:29.

THE CONDITION OF SOCIETY IN HIS TIME. He lived in a desperately corrupt age, when men had become so universally depraved that the Lord determined to destroy the race, Ge 6:1–7. In the midst of this moral darkness, Noah's life shone with righteousness, Ge 6:8–9.

HIS DIVINE COMMISSION. Because the earth was filled with violence, God revealed to Noah that there was to be a great flood which would destroy man from the face of the earth.

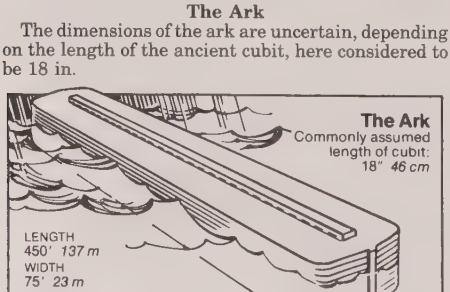
He was given a strange, and from a human standpoint, impossible task: to build an immense boat for preserving the lives of his own family and certain numbers of the animal kingdom. The greatness of the task is difficult to appreciate.

Noah was surrounded by godless unbelievers, who scoffed at his work. He became a laughingstock, yet he maintained his faith and toiled on, year after year, at a task which, to his neighbors, seemed to indicate he had gone mad.

Considering his surroundings, the magnitude of the work he was called on to perform, and the many years spent in hard work, he stands unsurpassed, if not unequaled, among all the characters of the Bible in persistent faith.

The Ark

The dimensions of the ark are uncertain, depending on the length of the ancient cubit, here considered to be 18 in.



For time spent in building, compare Ge 5:32 with 7:6.

Noah apparently warned and exhorted the people while he worked on the ark, 2Pe 2:5.

LAST DAYS BEFORE THE FLOOD. The assembling of the animals and the entrance of Noah and his family into the ark, Ge 7:1–16. The Lord closes the door of the ark, Ge 7:16.

EVENTS DURING AND AFTER THE FLOOD. The duration of the flood, Ge 7:24; recession of the waters, 8:3; the resting of the ark on land, 8:4; the birds sent out 8:6–12; leaving the ark, 8:15–18.

Noah builds an altar and offers a sacrifice, 8:20. He is honored by a divine covenant, 9:9–17. He plants a vineyard and yields to temptation, 9:21; he dies, 9:28–29.

4290–Abraham, the Spiritual Pilgrim

INTRODUCTION. The study of the life of Abraham is important because he was chosen of God to become the father of a new spiritual people. Seeds were planted in his heart from which were to spring wonderful results for all future believers.

He was a great spiritual leader.

HIS DIVINE CALL. While living with his father in Haran, he received a message from the Lord calling on him to separate himself from his old associations and go to a new country. He was promised divine favor, great posterity, and that he would become a blessing to all the families of the earth.

He obeyed the call and thereby became leader of that innumerable company of believers who have sought a city whose architect and builder is God, Ge 12:1–4; Heb 11:8–10.

4291—Jacob, the Deceiver, Transformed Into Israel, the Prince of God

No other Bible character represents more clearly than Jacob the conflict between the lower and higher natures.

Beginning on a descent, at times he reached great heights, only to sink again into the sordid struggle for gain. But he emerges at last on the plane of triumphant faith.

No devout reader who studies the history of this man's career can doubt that, in spite of all his weaknesses, he was a chosen instrument of God.

KEY THOUGHTS. Two key truths shed light on his life.

(1) The unhappiness produced by family trouble and polygamy.

This fact is illustrated throughout his life.

(2) The transforming power of fellowship with God.

This truth shines clearly through all the higher experiences of this chosen man.

V. His Conquest a Type.
The conquest by Joshua over the enemies of Israel may be regarded as a type of the battle a Christian has with the three basic forces of evil —the world, the flesh, and the devil, Eph 6:12.
(1) Joshua's victory was won by faith; so is that of the Christian, 1Jn 5:4.
(2) The fruits of the conquest were soon lost by Joshua's successors, by dishonorable surrender to their old enemies, Jdg 3:1–8. Too often the same thing occurs in the Christian life.
(3) Rest only comes to those who hold to what they have won, Heb 4:11.

4296—David, the Greatest of the Kings of Israel

I. His Place in History. He is one of the most prominent figures in the history of the world and certainly among Bible characters. He is the most famous ancestor of Christ. Jesus is not called the Son of Abraham or the Son of Jacob, but the Son of David.

II. His Real Character. His life was a mixture of good and evil. It was filled with noble deeds, high aspirations, and great accomplishments; yet it was stained with terrible sins.

No Bible character more fully illustrates the moral range of human nature. It is hard to conceive that the man who wrote the twenty-third Psalm could do what David did to Uriah. But the spirit of the times in which he lived must be considered, and the temptations connected with almost unlimited power.

In the early period of his life he is mentioned as a man after God's own heart, 1Sa 13:14. This was only true when he kept the divine commandments. It may be said to his credit that he never became an idolator and that he was loyal to the Lord in his testimony and worship.

The fact that most of his life was spiritual, if not always consistent, together with his great genius, accounts for the very high place he occupies in Scripture.

His Outstanding Characteristic was his versatility.
- (1) In his youth he was an athlete, 1Sa 17:34–36.
- (2) He was a fine musician, his reputation such that he played before the king, 1Sa 16:14–23.
- (3) His poetic skill was of the highest order. He wrote some of the greatest masterpieces of spiritual literature. No other poetry has been so constantly used by the church through the centuries as the psalms of David.
- (4) He was an able general and conducted his military campaigns with great success.
- (5) He has generally been considered the greatest king of Israel. He displayed unusual wisdom in the administration of government.

SYNOPSIS OF HIS CAREER. See also 4307f.

I. His Early Life.
- (1) Spent on his father's farm near Bethlehem; he was the youngest of eight sons, 1Sa 16:10–11.
- (2) As a shepherd he showed great courage in protecting the flock, 1Sa 17:34–36.
- (3) He was divinely chosen to succeed King Saul and was quietly anointed by the prophet Samuel, 1Sa 16:12–13.

II. His Service Under Saul.
- (1) He becomes the king's harpist, 1Sa 16:14–23.

  NOTE: The chronological order of events during this period is somewhat uncertain.
- (2) After remaining at court for a time he returns to the farm, 17:15.
- (3) He next appears as champion of Israel and kills the giant, Goliath, which results in a great victory for God's people, 1Sa 17:25–53.
- (4) This heroic feat wins the admiration of Jonathan, the king's son, but the praises the people give to David arouse the hatred of Saul, 1Sa 18:1–9.
- (5) Soon David is forced to flee for his life, chap. 19.

III. David as a Fugitive. This is a dark period in his career. Pursued by King Saul, David leads the perilous life of an outlaw. But there are some bright spots in the dark record:

The magnanimous intercession of Jonathan securing David's temporary restoration to the king's favor, 19:4–7.

The generosity of David in twice sparing Saul's life, 1Sa 24:1–15; 26:1–20.

IV. David as King.
- (1) After the death of Saul, the tribe of Judah anoints David as king and he reigns seven years in Hebron, 2Sa 5:1–5.
- (2) At the death of Ish-Bosheth, the son of Saul, David becomes king of all Israel, 2Sa 5:3.

Notable Events of His Later Years.
- (1) The capture of Jerusalem and the establishment of the capital there, 2Sa 5:7.
- (2) The bringing of the ark to Jerusalem, 2Sa 6:1–11; 1Ch 15:1–29.
- (3) The military victories and enlargement of the kingdom, 2Sa 8, 10.
- (4) His sin against Uriah the Hittite, 2Sa 11–12.
- (5) For his penitence, see Ps 51.
- (6) Absalom's rebellion against his father, 2Sa 15–18.
- (7) David's preparation for building the temple, 1Ch 22:5, 14; 29:2.

V. His Last Days.
- (1) He appoints his son, Solomon, as his successor, 1Ki 1:11–39.
- (2) Gives him a solemn charge, 1Ki 2:1–9.
- (3) His death, 1Ch 29:26–28.

297—Solomon, King of Israel, Man of Wisdom and Foolishness

See also 4307g.

I. His Parents. He was the son of David and Bathsheba, 2Sa 12:24–25.

He was both fortunate and unfortunate in his parents and home surroundings.

He was fortunate in having a father like David, a great genius, who on the whole was spiritually faithful.

He was unfortunate, in that there were some elements in his father's example that inevitably had a detrimental effect on the young man's life.

He was reared in a home where polygamy was practiced and there was much jealousy and strife.

II. Accession to the Throne. David, having many sons, had promised that Solomon would be his successor, and he was anointed king before his father's death, 1Ki 1:17–39.

III. Early Years of His Reign. Considering the age in which he lived, he began his reign well, but made a foolish mistake in choosing a pagan king's daughter for his wife, 1Ki 3:1.

This no doubt was an act of political expediency and was the first of his foreign alliances, all of which had much to do with his moral downfall.

IV. His Wisdom, was the special gift of God. Early in his reign he had a vision at Gibeon, in which the Lord appeared to him and told him to ask what he would have.

He confessed his weakness and ignorance and said, "Give your servant a discerning heart." Because of his wise choice his request was granted, and he was promised by the Lord that he would be the wisest of men and have great riches and honor. This promise was fulfilled for he excelled in wisdom all the great men of his times. He composed three thousand proverbs and a thousand and five songs.

His fame spread throughout the world, 1Ki 4:29–34.

V. His Policy and Enterprises. He carried out the plans of his father, David, consolidated the kingdom and engaged in many commercial ventures, while his wealth and fame grew.

His greatest enterprise was building the elaborate temple at Jerusalem, which took seven years, 1Ki 5–6. At its completion, Solomon offered a dedicatory prayer, 2Ch 6:12 to 7:3.

VI. His Later Years. He was honored by the visit of the Queen of Sheba, 1Ki 10:1–13.

As he increased in wealth and honor his love of pomp grew, and he maintained a luxurious and extravagant lifestyle beyond what the resources of his people warranted, 1Ki 10:14–29. This led to social discontent and prepared the way for the disruption of the kingdom. 1Ki 12:4–19.

VII. His Moral Downfall and Idolatry. At last he plunged into sensuality and was influenced by his many wives to introduce the worship of false gods into Jerusalem, 1Ki 11:1–8. He was sharply rebuked by the Lord for his apostasy, and the disruption of the kingdom in his son's time was foretold, 11:9–13.

VIII. The Question of His Repentance. Of the end of his life nothing definite is known. Whether he finally repented and returned to God has been debated by students of Scripture.

Those who believe that he wrote the substance of the Book of Ecclesiastes, see him there wandering in the labyrinth of human philosophy and seeming at last to emerge into the light of faith in divine providence.

His life furnishes a great warning. He is known as the wisest man, yet his wisdom did not teach him self-control. He taught well but failed to practice his own precepts. He describes the fool in the Book of Proverbs and thus draws a vivid picture of his own failings.

4298—Elijah, Prophet of Fire

I. Facts Concerning His Origin and Appearance. Nothing is known of his parents.

He is one of the most unique and dramatic characters of Bible history. Rugged in appearance and dress, he is a prototype of John the Baptist, 2Ki 1:8; Mt 3:4.

II. The Main Events of His Life present a series of thrilling pictorial scenes.

First Scene. His unheralded appearance before the idolatrous King Ahab to announce a prolonged drought, 1Ki 17:1.

Second Scene. In the wilderness in the Kerith Ravine, where he has gone by divine command to depend for his food upon supplies brought by ravens, 1Ki 17:2–6.

Here his faith is tested by the drying up of the brook, 1Ki 17:7.

Third Scene. At Zarephath. Outside the famine-stricken city, a widow is gathering sticks to cook her last meal.

The prophet is sent to her to be fed, 1Ki 17:8–9. On arrival he begs for a drink of water and a piece of bread, but she tells him that her supplies are reduced to a handful of flour and a little oil in a jug, 1Ki 17:12.

Then comes the divine, "Don't be afraid," and the promise of plentiful supplies to the end of the famine, 1Ki 17:13–14.

Fourth Scene. In the upper room at the widow's home at Zarephath. The strain of the famine has been too great for her son and he lies dead before the prophet. We see Elijah, by great struggle in prayer, bring the boy to life again, 17:17–24.

Fifth Scene. False prophets summoned. Elijah suddenly appears before King Ahab and commands him to summon the false prophets to Mount Carmel, 1Ki 18:17–19.

Sixth Scene. On Mount Carmel.
(1) The prophet calls the people to a decision concerning God, and challenges the prophets of Baal to a fiery test, 1Ki 18:20–24.
(2) The failure of the false prophets, vv. 26–29.
(3) After the prayer of Elijah the divine fire descends and consumes his sacrifice, vv. 30–38.
(4) The verdict of the people that the Lord is the true God. The destruction of the false prophets, vv. 39–40.

Seventh Scene. The end of the drought. Elijah's prayer for rain. The prophet runs before the king to the entrance of Jezreel, 18:41–46.

Eighth Scene. The prophet under a broom tree in the wilderness, having fled from the wrath of Queen Jezebel. Discouraged and exhausted, he wants to die, but he is fed by an angel, and journeys on to Mount Horeb, 19:1–8.

Ninth Scene. The prophet pours out his complaint to the Lord. He is given a new and better revelation of God's character and methods, 19:9–13. He is commanded to anoint two prospective kings and his own successor, 19:15–17.

Tenth Scene. On a farm at Abel Meholah. Elijah finds Elisha plowing and places his own cloak on him to indicate that this farmer is called to be his successor, 19:19–21.

Eleventh Scene. In the vineyard of Naboth. The prophet finds King Ahab taking possession of the inheritance for which he had murdered Naboth. He pronounces doom on the wicked king and his wife, 21:17–24.

Twelfth Scene. Two companies of soldiers are sent by the king of Samaria to capture the prophet and he calls down fire from heaven and destroys them, 2Ki 1:1–12; later he announces the doom of the idolatrous king, v. 16.

Thirteenth Scene. The last journey of Elijah. Accompanied by Elisha, he travels through the country until they reach the Jordan River, where Elijah strikes the waters with his cloak and the two pass over on dry ground. As they stand talking, Elisha makes his farewell request. Suddenly a chariot of fire separates the two friends, and Elijah is taken up by a whirlwind into heaven, 2Ki 2:1–11.

Postmortem Scene. On the mount of transfiguration Elijah reappears with Moses and talks with Christ, Mt 17:3.

4299—Elisha, the Prophet Who Received a Double Portion of the Spirit

I. There is a striking resemblance between the life of Elisha and that of Elijah. Not only do their names sound alike, but the main events of their lives are similar. They are twin figures in Hebrew history.

II. A Parallel Between the Two Prophets. Both
—Strike the waters of the Jordan River and pass over on dry ground, 2Ki 2:8; 2:14.
—Bring waters of refreshment in times of drought, 1Ki 18:41–45; 2Ki 3:9–20.
—Increase a widow's supply of food, 1Ki 17:10–16; 2Ki 4:1–7.
—Raise only sons to life, 1Ki 17:17–24; 2Ki 4:18–35.
—Perform miracles for persons outside the boundaries of Israel, 1Ki 17:9–16; 2Ki 5:1–15.
—Pronounce sentences on kings, 1Ki 21:19–22; 2Ki 8:7–10.
—Call down vengeance on unbelievers, 2Ki 1:9–12; 2:23–25.

In spite of the resemblances between the miracles performed by the two prophets, Elisha was not a mere echo of his fiery predecessor. There was a marked difference in the temperaments of the two men and in their general attitudes.

Elijah was a solitary figure like John the Baptist. His life was largely spent in an unavailing struggle against the evils of his times and he had periods of great depression.

Elisha was different. His gift of "a double portion of the Spirit" enabled him to lead a triumphant life as he mingled with other people. We have no record that he ever complained, fled from enemies, or lost courage. Even on his deathbed he seemed to be full of power and gave commands to a king.

For a summary of his life, see 1117.

His reception of a double portion of the Spirit is demonstrated by the fact that he lived a victorious life, and also that he performed a greater number of miracles than any other prophet except Moses. See 2367.

OUTSTANDING LESSON of his life, the power of divine grace.

4300—Daniel, Statesman Prophet

Nothing is known of his family, but he is thought to have been of noble descent, Da 1:3.

He was carried captive to Babylon during the reign of Jehoiakim, 1:2. He and three companions, because of their special qualifications, were selected to be trained for the king's service, 1:3–4.

There is a marked resemblance between Daniel's career and that of Joseph.

Both were carried captive in youth, were model young men, and served in a king's court. Both were unjustly persecuted, their hardships becoming stepping stones to honor, and through the interpretation of dreams were exalted to rulership. Both lived pure lives in the midst of corrupt surroundings, and both died in foreign lands.

Daniel, like Moses, was both a statesman and a prophet. As a seer he was given a telescopic vision which had a longer range than that of most of the prophets. He saw beyond the coming of Christ and beheld his enthronement as King of kings. He is particularly a prophet of the last days.

For the moral conflict in which he and his companions were engaged, see 4249.

The Gospel of John as a Picture Gallery. This Gospel presents a series of pictures, in each of which Christ is the central figure.

Author of the book, see 1902.

Key verse, 20:31, "But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that by believing you may have life in his name."

See 424.

Each of the 21 chapters contains a striking portrayal of some aspect of the character or work of the Savior.

The first two chapters contain companion material.

In ch. 1, he is The Son of God; his deity is portrayed. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God" (v. 1). "We have seen his glory, the glory of the One and Only, who came from the Father, full of grace and truth" (v. 14). See 701–718.

In ch. 2, he is The Son of Man. Here we have a scene illustrating his perfect humanity. He appears as a guest at the marriage in Cana of Galilee. He mingles with men in their social activities. See 3400; 719–723.

In ch. 3, he is The Divine Teacher, instructing a teacher of Israel. Nicodemus says, "We know you are a teacher who has come from God" (v. 2). See 3555.

In ch. 4, he is The Soul-winner. Here we see the steps by which he led the darkened soul of the Samaritan woman out into the light. See 3908.

In ch. 5, he is The Great Physician, bending in compassion over the sufferers at the pool. He shows his divine power by the instant cure of a hopeless case (vv. 1–9). See 1539.

In ch. 6, he is The Bread of Life (v. 48). Without him the souls of men perish from hunger. See 1308.

In ch. 7, he is The Water of Life (v. 37) satisfying the thirsty heart. See 3789.

In ch. 8, he is The Defender of the Weak. Here we have a scene showing his defense of a disgraced woman (vv. 3–11).

See also his defense of childhood, Mk 10:13–15.

See 1650.

4306a–THE CALENDAR OF THE CHRISTIAN ERA

The Romans, who were the dominating power when Jesus was born, generally dated all events from the foundation of Rome, Anno Urbis I.

In the sixth century the Pope had a new calendar prepared which dated all events from the birth of Jesus.

He commissioned a monk, named Dionysius, to do the work.

This calendar, when finished, was gradually adopted throughout Christendom.

Modern scholars have found that some of the dates of Roman history near the beginning of the Christian era cannot be reconciled with the calendar of Dionysius. For example, according to Roman records, Herod the Great, who ruled in Judea when Jesus was born, died in the year 750 Anno Urbis. Dionysius placed the birth of Jesus in the year 754 Anno Urbis, in apparent contradiction of well-established dates of Roman records.

Jesus was probably born in 749 or 750 Anno Urbis, that is four or five years earlier than the date given in our commonly accepted calendar.

So, in modern literature, scholars place his birth in 4 or 5 B.C.

May his days be few; may another take his place of leadership.	Judas's position to be taken by another	Ac 1:18–20 (With the reward he got for his wickedness, Judas bought a field; there he fell headlong, his body burst open and all his intestines spilled out. Everyone in Jerusalem heard about this, so they called that field in their language Akeldama, that is, Field of Blood.) (Ps 38:13–14)	Silent when accused	Mt 26:62–63 Then the high priest stood up and said to Jesus, "Are you not going to answer? What is this testimony that these men are bringing against you?" (Ps 109: 3–5)	Hated without cause	Jn 15:23–25 He who hates me hates my Father as well. If I had not done among them what no one else did, they would not be guilty of sin. But now they have seen these miracles, and yet they have hated both me and my Father. But this is to fulfill what is written in their Law: "They hated me without reason."
Isa 53:4–5 Surely he took up our infirmities and carried our sorrows, yet we considered him stricken by God, smitten by him, and afflicted. (Isa 53:6, 12)	Suffered vicariously	Mt 8:16–17 When evening came, many who were demon-possessed were brought to him, and he drove out the spirits with a word and healed all the sick. Isa 53:12 Therefore I will give him a portion among the great, and he will divide the spoils with the strong, because he poured out his life unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors. Let him deliver him, since he delights in him."	Mocked and insulted	Mt 27:39–40 Those who passed by hurled insults at him, shaking their heads and saying, "You who are going to destroy the temple and build it in three days, save yourself! Zec 12:10 And I will pour out on the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem a spirit of grace and supplication. Isa 53:9 He was assigned a grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death, though he had done no violence, nor was any deceit in his mouth.	To be buried with the rich	Mt 27:57–60 As evening approached, there came a rich man from Arimathea, named Joseph, who had himself become a disciple of Jesus. Going to Pilate, he asked for Jesus' body, and Pilate ordered that it be given to him. While he was blessing them, he left them and was taken up into heaven. (Ac 1:9)

KEY to the Tree of Jesus' Life And HARMONY OF THE GOSPELS–4308a

ORDER OF EVENTS

The accompanying drawing of the Tree of Jesus' Life presents a view of his matchless life and work.

We follow the chronological order, from his preexistence with the Father through all eternity.

Next come the prophetic announcements of his coming—the bright stars of prophecy which arose in the sky of Jewish history foretelling the appearance of a mighty Savior. (All of these do not appear on the Tree. See below.)

Then come the facts concerning his infancy and early life, including the silent years of obscurity.

Suddenly he emerges from his home in Nazareth and begins his public career.

The events of his ministry are arranged on the tree as nearly as possible in the order in which they appear in the New Testament. Opinions differ concerning the sequence of some events, but they are arranged here according to the best gospel harmonies.

A. The Preexistent Christ

1. Eternally the same ..... Heb 13:8
2. With no beginning ..... Heb 7:3
3. His activities eternal ..... Mic 5:2
4. Was before the creation of the world ..... Jn 1:1; 17:5
5. Was before Abraham ..... Jn 8:58

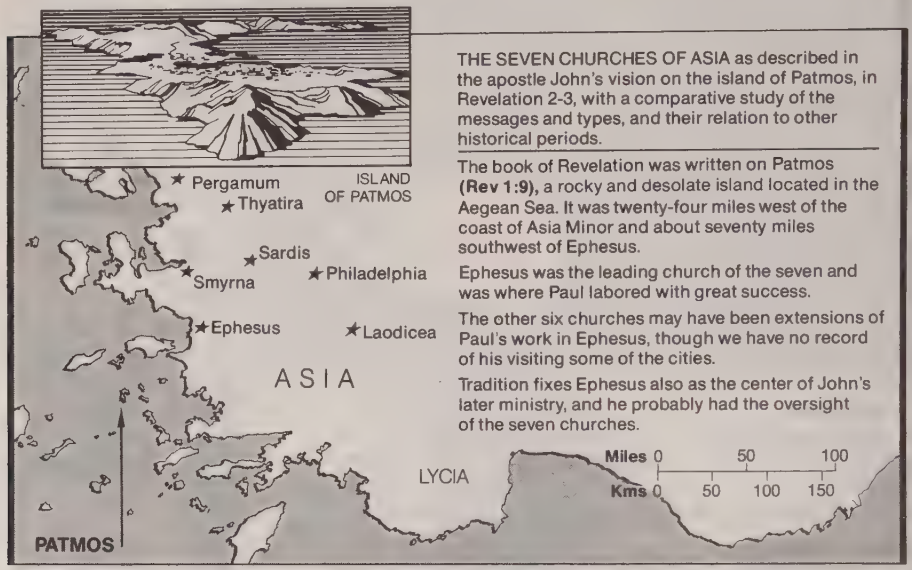
4308j–THE SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA



THE SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA as described in the apostle John's vision on the island of Patmos, in Revelation 2-3, with a comparative study of the messages and types, and their relation to other historical periods.

The book of Revelation was written on Patmos (Rev 1:9), a rocky and desolate island located in the Aegean Sea. It was twenty-four miles west of the coast of Asia Minor and about seventy miles southwest of Ephesus.

Ephesus was the leading church of the seven and was where Paul labored with great success.

The other six churches may have been extensions of Paul's work in Ephesus, though we have no record of his visiting some of the cities.

Tradition fixes Ephesus also as the center of John's later ministry, and he probably had the oversight of the seven churches.

Names of the Churches	Virtues Commended	Sins and Weaknesses Rebuked	Promises to Overcomers	TYPES (1) Of Historical Eras	TYPES (2) Of Conditions in Modern Churches
EPHESUS The orthodox church Rev 2:1–7	Good works, patience, sound doctrine, church discipline, hatred of evil 2:2, 3, 6	Loss of love, backsliding 2:4–5	Heavenly food 2:7	Late apostolic age	Active churches, overemphasizing orthodoxy, but lacking in spiritual fervor
SMYRNA The poor, rich church Rev 2:8–11	Spiritual endurance, heavenly treasure 2:9–10	No reproof	A crown of life 2:10	The early centuries of persecution	Missionary and other churches enduring persecution
PERGAMUM The church with bad environment Rev 2:12–17	Perseverance in evil environment 2:13	Tolerance of wrong doctrines and heretics 2:14–15	Hidden spiritual blessings, divine food, a new name 2:17	The age of Constantine, temporal prosperity	Churches supported by the government
THYATIRA The church of the evil prophetess Rev 2:18–29	Love, spiritual service, faith and patience 2:19	Lax discipline, tolerance of a corrupt prophetess 2:20–23	Spiritual authority and illumination 2:26–28	The age of papal apostasy	Development of numerous new cults
SARDIS The dying church Rev 3:1–6	None for most members; some commended for purity 3:4	Extreme formalism, spiritual death imminent, inactivity 3:1	A robe of righteousness, heavenly record and recognition 3:5	The Middle Ages	Churches which manifest growing formalism, spiritual decline
PHILADELPHIA The weak but loyal church Rev 3:7–13	Keeping of "My word," testimony 3:8	None recorded	To become spiritual pillars, bearing a divine inscription 3:12	The period of the Reformation, Luther's times	All earnest spiritual churches
LAODICEA The rich, poor church Rev 3:14–22	None recorded	Lukewarmness, spiritual conceit, no conscious need, spiritual poverty, spiritual blindness 3:15–17	Divine fellowship, spiritual enthronement 3:21	The last days	Popular, self-satisfied, worldly churches

AN OUTLINE HISTORY OF THE EVANGELISTIC AND MISSIONARY WORK IN THE EARLY CHURCH

(from the ascension of Jesus, A.D. 30, to the imprisonment of Paul at Rome, A.D. 60?)

The apostles did not originally comprehend the extent of the Great Commission, Mt 28:19; Mk 16:15.

They wanted to establish a Jewish Christian church consisting of converted Jews and Jewish proselytes.

Later, through the enlightening of the Holy Spirit, they recognized the universality of the gospel and admitted Gentiles into full fellowship.

Three Periods	Dates	Acts	Outstanding Events Note—The dates on this chart are only approximate.
	A.D. 30	1:4–12, 15–26	The ascension of Jesus was followed by ten days of waiting in prayer and the choice of Matthias as an apostle in place of Judas.
I A.D. 30–37 (?) Period of Organization		2:1–13	The day of Pentecost the Holy Spirit descended upon believers, equipping them for service.
		2:14–36	Peter's sermon resulted in the conversion of 3,000 souls.
Church membership restricted to Jews; Gentiles excluded		3:1–4:1	The first persecution. The healing of the lame man, followed by a bold address by Peter, led to the arrest of John and Peter. They were released; and the church assembled in prayer, resulting in a great manifestation of divine power.
		4:23–33
	30	5:1–11	A terrible judgment came upon Ananias and Sapphira, who suffered immediate death because of their deception. This sad event was followed by a period of rapid growth and a manifestation of miracle-working power in the church. Persecution arose and the apostles were imprisoned, but were delivered by an angel of God and continued their work in spite of opposition.
Jerusalem the Center Ac 1–7	30	6:1–7 6:8–7:1 7:1–60	Seven deacons were appointed, among them Stephen, whose miracles and persuasive preaching led to his martyrdom.
		8:1	The first evangelistic campaign outside of Jerusalem grew out of the scattering of Christians throughout the country by the persecutions under Saul of Tarsus.
II A.D. 37–48 (?) Period of Transition		8:4–17	Philip, Peter, and John preached with great success at Samaria, where the Holy Spirit fell on the Samaritans, a prelude to the future work among the Gentiles.
		8:25–40	Revival spread throughout the region and Philip preached in many of the coast cities from Gaza to Caesarea.
The gradual recognition of the duty of the church to preach the gospel to the Gentiles	37	9:1–22	The conversion of Saul of Tarsus near Damascus, while on a mission of persecution, had a profound effect on Christian history.
	37	9:26	He preached first in Damascus, then went to Arabia (see Gal 1:17); returning to Damascus, he ministered until driven out by the Jews.
	37–43	9:30 9:31	He next went to Jerusalem and attempted to help the church there, but the hatred against him was so bitter that he was compelled to leave and returned to his early home at Tarsus. A period of rest for the church followed his departure.
Jerusalem the Center Ac 8–12	41	10:9–17 9:32–42	Peter's enlightening vision. While the apostle was on an evangelistic tour, he came to Lydda, where Aeneas was healed, and at Joppa, Dorcas was raised from the dead. While here the vision occurred which sent him out to preach to a Gentile congregation in the home of Cornelius at Caesarea. Here the Holy Spirit sanctioned his work by coming upon the Gentile group.
			BEGINNING OF THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY MOVEMENT
		11:19–21	Under the leadership of Christians driven out of Jerusalem by persecution, evangelistic work was carried on in Cyprus, Phoenicia, and finally as far as Antioch in Syria.
	43	11:22	Barnabas, sent to Antioch by the church at Jerusalem, found a rich field for evangelistic work and went to Tarsus to assist Saul. A strong church was established here which became the center of the first foreign missionary work.
		ch. 12	Second persecution. About this time the church at Jerusalem suffered great persecution by Herod Agrippa I, who killed James, the brother of John, with the sword. Peter was also arrested and put in prison, but escaped by angelic deliverance.

Three Periods	Dates	Acts	Outstanding Events
			Paul's first missionary journey, Ac 13:2–14:28
	46–48	chap. 13	The church at Antioch, inspired by the Holy Spirit, ordained Saul (later Paul) and
o. 48–60 (?)		13:1–3	Barnabas as foreign missionaries, and they started on an evangelistic tour, accompanied by John Mark.
		13:4–13	Their work began on the island of Cyprus; from here they went to Perga in Asia Minor, where John Mark deserted them.
eriod		13:14–52	Paul and Barnabas carried their evangelistic campaign to Antioch in Pisidia, then f		14:1–19,	turned southeast to Iconium and Lystra, where Paul was stoned. They departed to xpansion		20–26	Derbe.
nd	49		From Derbe they retraced their steps through the same cities to Perga and Attalia, evelopment			from which port they sailed to Antioch, in Syria, the city from which they started.
f			They covered a distance of about 1,500 miles, and their mission lasted about two oreign			years.

roadened		16:6	Here the missionaries were called into Europe by a vision, and came to Philippi,
		16:9–12	where they were beaten and imprisoned, but were miraculously delivered by an earth-
entiles		16:26	quake. They established a church here and at Thessalonica, their next stop.
dmitted to		17:1–4	As they moved on they found the Bereans receptive to the truth; but Athens proved qual rights		17:10–11	to be poor soil for the gospel, and they left for Corinth. Here Paul met violent opposition,

	53		Paul's third missionary journey, Ac 18:23–21:17
ntioch	54–58	18:23	Leaving the home church at Antioch, Paul revisited the churches of Galatia and ecame			Phrygia and came to Ephesus.
he		18:24–28	During his absence some preliminary work had been done in the city by Apollos, enter			which prepared the way for a successful campaign. Paul's preaching and miracle-
c 8–12		19:1–20	working power made a profound impression, confusing those who used magic and
		19:23–41	deceived the people.
	56		A great work was accomplished and a church founded, but trouble with some craftsmen made it wise for Paul to leave, and he departed to Macedonia and Greece. He 57	20:1–12	remained three months at Corinth, and then revisited the churches of Macedonia. At Troas, he preached a midnight sermon and raised Eutychus to life.
		20:17–38	On his way to Jerusalem he stopped at Miletus and delivered a notable farewell
	58	21:28–33	address to the Ephesian elders. Arriving at Jerusalem he found himself the object of intense hatred, and a conspiracy against his life was formed.
		21:33–40	He was arrested under false charges, but the Roman soldiers rescued him from the mob. His Roman citizenship secured him certain rights.
		23:31–35	The voyage to Rome. Paul was taken to Caesarea and was a prisoner for two years,
	59–60	chaps. 24–28	during which time he appeared before Felix, Festus, and King Agrippa; but having appealed to Caesar, he was sent to Rome, where, chained to a soldier, he preached to Caesar's household and others who came to him.
			While confined he wrote letters to various churches he had founded.
			He was possibly beheaded in Rome about A.D. 67.

4315–BIBLE MNEMONICS

AIDS TO MEMORIZATION

Aids to the memorization of Bible facts, the location of selected verses, chapters, teachings, etc.

Note: Two of the best helps for memorization are repetition and association.

In memorizing the location of important verses, it is helpful to be on the lookout for coincidences.

For Example: "The 3:16's." John 3:16 is considered the greatest promise in the Bible. The memory may be aided by associating this great promise with the other important 3:16's which occur in the Scriptures.

Pr 3:16, the preciousness of wisdom; Mal 3:16, the Lord's treasured possessions; Lk 3:16, the two baptisms; Ac 3:16, the mighty name; 1Co 3:16, the temple of the Holy Spirit; Col 3:16, the indwelling Word of God; 1Ti 3:16, the mystery of godliness; 2Ti 3:16, the value of the Scriptures.

Another illustration: the 2:10's of Jesus. Lk 2:10, the joy bringer; Eph 2:10, the character builder; Php 2:10, the adorable name; Col 2:10, the Fulfiller of life; Heb 2:10, the Captain of our salvation; Rev 2:10, the Crown Giver.

The 4:13's, the gifts of Jesus: Jn 4:13–14, satisfaction; Ac 4:13, transformation; Eph 4:13, inspiration; Php 4:13, power; 1Th 4:13–14, consolation.

The use of a few such series of texts will greatly help the memory; too many might be confusing.

Other coincidences: The seventh chapter of Genesis contains references to the waters of death, while in the seventh chapter of John, Jesus speaks of the water of life, (v. 37).

Three great warning chapters are easily associated because they all contain three: Jer 23, Eze 33, and Mt 23.

All contain warnings to religious leaders.

Last words, recorded:

Of Jesus (on power), Ac 1:8.
Of James (on soulwinning), Jas 5:20.
Of Peter (on growth), 2Pe 3:18.
Of Jude (on divine support), Jude 24–25.
Of John (on divine grace), Rev 22:21.

Memory mottoes:

Finishing life's work, Jn 17:4.
Bible students, 2Ti 2:15.
Table, 1Co 10:31.
Thought, Php 4:8.
Planning, Jas 4:15.

alue

It is helpful to all lovers of God's Word to have a mple system of Bible marking.

(1) As the Bible is marked from time to time it ecomes more precious to the owner.

(2) It preserves the result of years of study and akes the book increasingly valuable.

(3) It keeps the discovered truths fresher in the ind.

Vhat to mark

This will largely depend on personal taste and raining.

Generally speaking, it is wise to select great themes nd mark them consecutively through the Bible, rath- r than too many single verses on a large variety of ubjects.

Various systems

The systems used are many and diverse.

Whichever one is adopted, or personally worked ut, should be used sparingly, and with discrimina- ion.

If the book is marked impulsively every time a new hought is discovered, the pages may soon become a ass of bewildering marks, which will be a hindrance n future studies.

(1) Underscoring or circling passages to be re- embered or make emphatic is the simplest method f marking.

(2) The color scheme. Colored pencils or pens may e used for emphasizing a limited number of subjects.

election of colors

In order to be helpful, the colors should not be cho- en arbitrarily, but have a distinct symbolic meaning. or example:

Red (the color of blood) may be used to mark pas- ages referring to such subjects as the blood of Christ see 679, 2979).

Blue (sky color) is appropriate for marking heaven- y themes (see 1356, 1357).

Purple (the royal color), for subjects related to ingship (see 708, 3419, 3420, 3421).

Green (evergreen), for subjects referring to future opes (see 1692, 2156, 2157, 2405, 2406).

MARKING WITH SYMBOLS

Those who have some drawing skill and want a more extended and definite system of Bible marking may use symbols and letters.

Selection of symbols

As far as possible the symbol should be chosen from the Scriptures, and drawn in miniature form in the margin of the Bible, opposite the appropriate passages. For example:

Let a simple miniature drawing of an altar represent sacrifice, or consecration. Place the drawing in the margin opposite such passages as Abraham's sacrifice, Ge 22:6; or Paul's appeal for consecration, Ro 12:1.

Let the outline of the wings of a dove represent the Holy Spirit. Mark a letter D over the wings opposite passages referring to the descent of the Spirit, as Mt 3:16; Ac 10:38.

Mark an I over the wings where the Spirit is mentioned as indwelling (see 1602).

Mark a T over the wings where the Holy Spirit is teaching, (see 1607) an L where the Spirit is spoken of as leader (see 1611); etc.

Let the miniature drawing of a book represent the Word of God.

Turn to the Index of Chain Topics, 415–445, and find the appropriate letters to mark on the drawing of the book. For example, mark E for endures (415); I for inspired (417); L for loved (420); P for power of (421); S for study of (428); etc.

Whenever possible let the symbol represent an important theme and the letters on the symbol, different aspects of the subject, as illustrated above.

A cross may be the symbol of Jesus' sacrifice and may be marked with different letters to represent the different aspects of the subject.

A picture of a yoke, opposite Mt 11:29 and kindred passages, would represent service.

A heart opposite a passage would indicate love.

A sword would typify warfare.

A censer with incense rising would represent prayer. This symbol could be marked with different letters as follows: E, prayer enjoined (see 2817); A, answered (2818); U, united, (2823); S, secret, (2834); I, intercessory (1785); etc.

A harp would represent praise, and could be placed opposite such passages as those given in 1451–1454.

The above list of symbols could be extended indefinitely.

The value of symbols lies in the fact that they express important thoughts more strikingly, and in much less space, than can be done by words. This makes them especially suitable.

THE ALTAR

(1) The Altar. A raised structure on which sacrifices were offered or incense burned. It was man's simplest and earliest effort to give outward expression of faith in God, desire to worship, and need of sacrifice for sin.

Immediately after leaving the ark, Noah erected an altar and offered sacrifices to the Lord.

This act was acceptable to the Lord and resulted in a divine promise of blessing for the world throughout ages to come.

From Noah's time godly men continued to build altars for worship.

Abraham erected altars at different places where he stayed. See Ge 12:7–8; 13:18; etc.

Jacob was an altar builder. See Ge 33:20; 35:7; etc.

Moses, Joshua, Samuel, David, and other ancient believers built altars for sacrifice or in commemoration of great events. See 120.

THE TABERNACLE

(2) The Tabernacle. A sacred tent and its furniture made according to the divine plan given to Moses (see Heb 8:5).

The altar, approved by divine revelation, was to meet the needs of the nation for sacrifice and worship.

The tabernacle proper was divided into two parts, the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies.

The Holy Place was twenty cubits (30 ft.) long and ten cubits (15 ft.) wide. It contained the table for the bread of the Presence, the golden lampstand, and the altar of incense.

The Holy of Holies was ten cubits (15 ft.) square. It contained the ark of the covenant, a sacred chest which was a symbol of the divine Presence.

A curtain, or veil, of costly woven material divided the two sections.

No one but the high priest ever entered the Holy of Holies, and he went in only once a year, on the Day of Atonement, to make atonement for the sins of the people.

Many of the ceremonies and furnishings of the tabernacle had a typical significance and foreshadowed the coming of Christ.

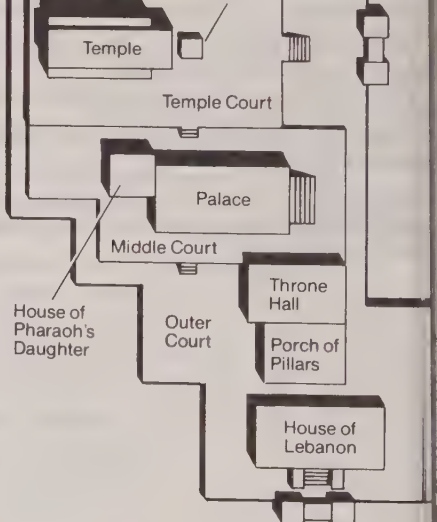
For the typical teachings see Hebrews 8–9.

For its main articles of furniture see altars, 122; 123; table, 3530; basin, 2051; lampstand, 637; ark, 216.

(3) The Temple. The children of Israel had been pilgrims from Egypt to the Promised Land.

When they were settled in their new home it was natural for them to desire something more permanent than a tent in which to worship.

Plan of Solomon's Royal Buildings including THE TEMPLE



David conceived the idea of building a temple for the Lord but was forbidden to do so because he was a man of war, 1Ch 22:8. He amassed a great amount of material for the construction of the building, but it was left for Solomon to erect it. For allusions to the three temples built in Jerusalem, see 3577, 3578, 3579. For the plan of the temple and explanation see 4319.

(4) The Synagogue. A Jewish place of worship. This institution appears to have arisen during the Exile, or shortly after.

The Jews that were scattered abroad felt the need of places for religious assembly and synagogues were erected wherever there was a Jewish settlement.

These differed from the temple at Jerusalem in that they were generally plain rectangular buildings, with no elaborate furnishings or altars for sacrifice.

The Sabbath services held in them were comparatively simple, consisting largely of reading the Scriptures, prayer, some kind of religious instruction, and often an expository address.

They were in some sense forerunners of the church. Jesus attended their services, and Paul often spoke to assemblies gathered in them. See 3521–3523.

(5) The Church. We can trace the desire for spiritual worship through the successive steps in the erection of the altar, the tabernacle, the temple, and the synagogue.

It reaches its highest stage of development in the institution of the church founded by Christ.

Hebrew Times, Seasons, and Festivals–4317

(1) The Sabbath. The seventh day divinely set apart in the Decalogue as a day of rest and worship.
See 3098–3102.

(2) The six annual feasts. See 1256–1261.

(3) The Day of Atonement. The tenth of October. The day of humiliation and expiation for the sins of the nation. On this day the high priest entered the Holy of Holies to make atonement for the sins of the people.

(4) The sabbatical year. Every seventh year the Mosaic law required that land remain untilled. Slaves were to be liberated and debts canceled.

(5) The Year of Jubilee. This occurred at the end of seven sabbatical years, that is, every fifty years.

It was a year of complete release. Slaves were emancipated, mortgages released, and real estate reverted to its original owners (except in walled cities).

The land was to lie fallow as in the ordinary sabbatical year. The moral purpose was to unite the people in brotherhood, to check oppression, and to ease poverty.

Religious Officials–4318

(1) The priests. Men set apart for special religious duties, for acting as mediators between God and man, for the offering of sacrifices, and for other functions relating to worship. See 2058, 2063.

(2) The prophets. Men divinely called and inspired to deliver God's messages, particularly in relation to future events.

In the New Testament the word prophet refers to a person who received a special spiritual gift enabling him to interpret or proclaim truth, and does not necessarily involve the element of prediction.

(3) The scribes. These men were originally secretaries or writers. In later history the term refers to a class of men who were students, copyists, and interpreters of the Law.

Ezra was the most famous scribe. In New Testament times they were leaders among the Jews, were associated with the priests, were sticklers for the letter of the law, and generally were hostile to Christ.

(4) The elders. In the Old Testament they were leaders in the community or among the tribes. In New Testament times they were the chief leaders among the Jews, together with the scribes and priests.

In the early church they were leading officials, elected or appointed to perform certain duties and were invested with some authority in administrative affairs.

(5) The apostles. Originally the twelve disciples chosen by Christ and named apostles, by him, Lk 6:13. Matthias was afterwards chosen by the church to replace Judas, Ac 1:26. Paul was later added to their number by special divine call. See 2080–2082.

The word is sometimes applied in a less restricted sense to men, such as Barnabas, who had apostolic gifts, Ac 14:4, 14.

(6) The deacons. Christian officials appointed to perform certain duties, generally of a subordinate nature.

The origin of the office is generally traced to the appointment of the seven men mentioned in Ac 6:1–6.

Qualifications for the office are given by Paul, 1Ti 3:8–9.

4319–TEMPLE the Herodian temple in Jerusalem

The temple plan, with the sanctuary surrounded by a system of courts rising one above the other, was an object lesson.

1. Illustrating the exclusive elements in the Jewish religion

A. Gentiles' Court
This large flat area surrounding the sanctuary and its outer courts was open to both Jews and Gentiles.

B. Sacred Enclosure
The Soreg, a low surrounding wall, formed a sacred enclosure beyond which no Gentile could pass, under penalty of death. Flights of steps rose 6 cubits (9 ft.) to the Chel (rampart) a flat area just at the base of the walls.

C. Women's Court
Within the gaterooms in the walls, flights of stairs rose 7½ cubits (11¼ ft.) to the Women's Court, which was surrounded by a balcony.

D. Israel Court
This court, exclusively for Jewish men and boys, was 7½ cubits (11¼ ft.) above the Women's Court level and a full 15 cubits (22½ ft.) above the Chel. Unlike the large, square Women's Court, which was open to the sky, this court was narrow, roofed, and surrounded by colonnades.

E. Priests' Court
An area 2½ cubits (3½ ft.) above the Israel Court level and reserved exclusively for priests.

F. Sanctuary
From the Priests' Court, steps rose 6½ cubits (9¾ ft.) to the floor level of the sanctuary interior. Within the walls were numerous side chambers. The building had only two major areas, the G Holy Place and the H Holy of Holies, which were separated by two massive hanging tapestries, one cubit apart. Within the Holy Place priests performed their regular duties. The Holy of Holies was the inner heart of the temple and could be entered only once a year by the high priest on the Day of Atonement, when he offered a sacrifice for the sins of the people.

2. Emphasizing the separation of sinful man from God and the difficulty in approaching the divine presence under the old covenant.

The exclusion of Gentiles from the temple proper illustrated the Jews' being God's chosen, separated people.

The gradation of the courts and their restricted access emphasized group distinctions within Judaism.

The inaccessibility of the Holy of Holies to all except the high priest on one day in the year, and the various barriers which prevented the common people from approaching the supposed place of the divine presence, was a continual object lesson on the holiness of God and his separation from sinners.

The coming of Jesus Christ ushered in a new era. He swept away all barriers between God and penitent men. When Jesus died, "the curtain of the temple was torn in two from top to bottom" (Mt 27:51), signifying that the way was now open for immediate access to God (Heb 10:19-20). In Christ all class distinctions are obliterated—those that existed between Jews and Gentiles (Ro 10:12), those between men and women (Gal 3:28), and those between priests and laymen (Rev 1:6).

F. The Sanctuary
(cutaway view)
Begun in 20 B.C., Herod's renovation towered 15 stories high, following the floor dimensions of the former temples in the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies.

The Rosetta Stone. The key with which scholars unlocked hieroglyphics and a better understanding of early Egyptian civilization.

By G. Frederick Owen, D.D., Ed.D.

INTRODUCTION

God kept two copies of the historic records of his special dealing with and revelation to man. One was the Bible, which had been written on parchment and by great effort placed into the hands of man. The other was written in the ruins and the strange languages of the lands from which the Bible came.

Man had access to the first of these, and could read and pattern his life accordingly; but few from the western world could visit Oriental lands, view the terrain of the country, observe remnants of the wreckage of bygone civilizations, and imagine the meaning of bits of various strange writings found here and there.

Evidence on the surface was small in comparison to the wealth of materials buried in ancient city mounds. Some of the material was found by chance, but most has been found as men developed special tools and methods suited to the search—to unlock unknown languages and to determine the time of origin for each discovery. Progress came slowly, by the dedicated efforts of men from many nations and from many professions and walks of life—professors, linguists, ministers, military men, missionaries, architects, engineers, draftsmen, photographers, and others of great abilities.

Language tools by which mysterious signs and writings could be understood were essential, and their mastery came at great cost to a few capable leaders. Two main keys, however, were found—THE ROSETTA STONE, and the BEHISTUN INSCRIPTION.

One of Napoleon Bonaparte's engineers found the Rosetta Stone at Rosetta, Egypt, near the mouth of the western branch of the Nile. It was an oval-topped, black granite slab, or stele, three feet nine inches high by two feet four inches wide, and eleven inches thick. On its face were three languages common to the ancients of the Nile valley. One was Greek, but the other two were unknown. Many men attempted to read these two languages, but a brilliant young Frenchman, Jean Champollion, dedicated his life to deciphering these mysterious unknowns. His older brother supported him, while for twenty-three years he wrestled with the stone's contents. Finally, in 1822, he published complete translations of the trilingual inscription, coupling the demotic and the hieroglyphic with the Greek, thus proving that the Rosetta Stone was written in three languages—the tongues of the Pharaohs, with which future archaeologists would unlock countless hitherto unknown historical and literary treasures of the Nile Valley.

The Behistun Inscription was a large outdoor low-relief sign, twenty-five by fifty feet, 350 feet up on a cliffside of the Zagros mountains, southwest of Hamadan, Persia. It was inscribed in three languages—all used by the ancients, but all of them strange to modern scholars. Challenged by the task of deciphering these exceedingly odd, though apparently refined languages, Henry C. Rawlinson, an English military officer, climbed on the fourteen to eighteen inch lower ledge, or sat in a suspended cage until, after four years of hazardous labor, a complete copy of the inscriptions was made. Eighteen years later he had completely deciphered the three languages—Old Persian cuneiform, Elamite (Susian), and Babylonian cuneiform. With these three keys, Rawlinson and other learned men unlocked the treasured secrets of the vanished civilizations of Assyria, Babylonia, and Persia—lands whose people played important roles in the unfolding dramas of the Bible.

The use of these languages in correspondence and diplomatic exchange was revealed when, in 1887, a Bedouin woman, in search of rich soil for her garden, dug into the mound of Tell el Amarna, where, on the east banks of the Nile, lay the ruins of Pharaoh Akhenaton's once beautiful dream city. She found inscribed tablets and sold her interest in them for fifty cents. Missionary Chauncy Murch heard of the find and passed the information to Egyptian officials. On examination they proved to be the official diplomatic records of the Egyptian foreign office during the reigns of Amenhotep III (1413–1376 B.C.), and his son and successor Amenhotep IV (Akhenaton—1375–1358 B.C.). Among the records were official communications from the monarchs of Babylonia, Mitanni, and other Asiatic countries, but the majority were letters written by the governors of various cities or districts in Palestine, Phoenicia, and southern Syria (about 150 were from Palestine proper).

The Tell el Amarna Tablets have proved especially important in biblical research, so much so that many regard them as constituting the most important discovery ever made in Egypt. The very fact that most of these tablets were written in Babylonian cuneiform, even though they came from various countries, indicates that the Babylonian cuneiform was the one general system of writing understood by almost all the people of Bible lands during that particular period, and perhaps long before and after it. Thus biblical characters could converse rather freely with the various peoples as they moved from country to country, just as indicated in the Bible.

Interest was now heightened in archaeological discoveries, and the call went out for more topographical research and for further excavation of city mounds. There was ready response from England, Germany, France, the United States, and other countries. Governments, universities, museums, and influential individuals financed expeditions, and the work went forward under the direction of competent men and women who carried forward the work of finding out how the ruins of ancient civilizations tallied with what is written of them in the Bible and other ancient literature.

Now, after some two hundred years of topographical and archaeological research, it can be said that the large army of learned people have picked up the threads of ancient life from a thousand city mounds and woven them into a pattern which agrees almost perfectly with the lives and recorded deeds of Bible characters.

Thousands of "outside" evidences that corroborate Scripture narratives have come to light.

Before disturbing a site archaeologists must map it, measuring and indicating the location of each artifact they unearth.

4320–ABEL BETH MAACAH ("meadow of the house of oppression"), was an ancient fortified city located in the extreme north of Palestine that played an important, although somewhat tragic, role in ancient Bible times. It was to this city that Joab pursued Sheba, the rebel leader, as he fled here for refuge. A "wise woman" of the city tossed the rebel's head over the wall and thereby saved the city (2Sa 20:14–22). It was taken by the Syrians under Benhadad (1Ki 15:20) and later by the Assyrians under Tiglath-Pileser (2Ki 15:29). In Roman times it was known as Abila. Today it is known as Tell Abil and is a typical unexcavated mound (tell) rising boldly on an upland plain some six miles west of Dan, overlooking the Lake Huleh lowlands that stretch to the southeast.

4321–ABSALOM'S PILLAR. The beautiful though somewhat strange monument called Absalom's Pillar, located in the Kidron Valley east of Jerusalem, gives support to the biblical account, which reports, "During his lifetime Absalom had taken a pillar and erected it in the King's Valley as a monument to himself, for he thought, 'I have no son to carry on the memory of my name'" (2Sa 18:18).

The monument is forty-seven feet high. Its lower portion is a mass of solid rock about twenty feet square and twenty-one feet high, completely detached from the rock cliff by hewn passages nine feet wide, and adorned with Ionic columns.

Its upper portion is a circular structure bound about by a rope molding and crowned by an incurving funnel-shaped peak of artistically worked stone. Within is a room eight feet square, with shelf graves on two sides.

This monument may have been carved by Absalom and his men, but, if so, its outer adornments were probably added later. As it now stands, it dates to about the middle of the second or the beginning of the first century B.C.—unless Absalom, like his brother Solomon, employed architectural design far in advance of his time.

4322–ACCO, or Acre, known in Old Testament times as Acco (Jdg 1:31), and in New Testament times as Ptolemais, lies at the north end of the curving beach of the Bay of Acre.

The place is filled with historic associations reaching back to the days before the children of Israel were in Palestine. It is mentioned as a place of importance in the writings of the Assyrians, the Egyptians, the Maccabeans, the Greeks, the Romans, the Crusaders, and in the time of Napoleon and later. However, the Christian world will always remember it as the place where Paul, on his final journey to Jerusalem, "greeted the brothers and stayed with them for a day" (Ac 21:7).

Acco's more ancient ruins cannot be excavated because of the buildings which cover the place, yet portions of its walls and its earthenworks are perfect examples of late eighteenth-century stonework, constructed largely on Crusader foundations from stones taken from Crusader walls.

4323–ACZIB, now known as ez-Zib, was an ancient Phoenician seaport that crowded the shoreline nine miles north of Acco (Acre). The tribe of Asher was assigned the area, but failed to take over the city. Today it is a quiet fishing village with the Mediterranean Sea on the west, a creek to the south, and the Chezib River to the north.

The city of Acre, located on the Mediterranean Sea. The city walls were built by the crusaders.

Excavators opened shaft and pit tombs in the southern and eastern cemeteries, where four hundred bodies had been cremated and interred in the course of three hundred years—from the tenth to the end of the eighth centuries B.C. In these tombs were ritual vessels, incense burners, clay models, elegant red-burnished water pitchers, and jugs of the well-known Phoenician red-slipped ware. The ashes of each person were in a cremation crater covered with a lid and sealed with mud clay.

An area was excavated in the southern part of the mound, where Crusader, Persian, Hellenistic, Roman, and pre-Roman ruins were found. In the northern part of the mound a forty-meter-long trench revealed a Middle Bronze Age rampart fortification which had been destroyed in the beginning of the Late Bronze Age. The city was rebuilt, and in the Iron Age level were ruins of a number of public buildings, in one of which were numerous jars standing side by side. Some bore Aramaic inscriptions such as "To my Lord the King."

4324–ADULLAM, the cave which frequently served as secret headquarters for David and his four-to-six-hundred men, has been traditionally located in the Judean wilderness on the precipitous southern cliff of Wadi Khareitun, some two miles south of Herodium and three miles northeast of Tekoa.

There is a strange, secluded wildness about the place, with massive fragments of rock strewn about the cavern, which is on a long, narrow ledge high above the bottom of the ravine. One large broken rock, weighing many tons, almost bars the entrance. Nearby is a spring of clear, cool running water.

The only access to the cave is through a circular opening some seven feet high. Inside there is a narrow, low passage leading to a small cave, from which a winding passage leads to a large room of about five thousand square feet. Narrow passages branch out and lead to other large rooms, some of which are on lower levels. There is ample room within for a thousand men. The place seems to meet the requirements given in the scriptural account, and David frequently hid from King Saul in this general area.

4325–AI ("the ruin"), the second place attacked by the incoming Israelites under Joshua, has usually been identified with Et-Tell, two miles east of Bethel.

On the basis of the examination of surface potsherds and some test digging done in 1928, Professor Garstang and Dr. Albright concluded that Ai could well have fallen about the same time as Jericho (1400 B.C.). In 1934–1935 Judith Marquet-Krause and S. Yeivin carried on two brief campaigns in which they found the remains of a rather prosperous city, which had been destroyed by fire around 2200 B.C. No definite traces of later occupation were found, with the exception of a small Hebrew village, constructed between 1200 and 1100 B.C.

Mme. Marquet-Krause's untimely death brought the excavation to a close long before it was completed. In reporting the results of the excavations, M. Dus- said emphasized the negative finds from 2200 to 1100 B.C. He, along with many others, found no place for Joshua's destruction of the city at either 1400 or a 1220 B.C.

In certain quarters it was quickly announced tha the Bible, at long last, had been "proven" untrue However, the very carefully written account given in the seventh and eighth chapters of Joshua states tha the place was known as Ai (a ruin); that it was a smal place "to the east of Bethel"; that there were "only a few men there" to begin with, but that it was quickly fortified by all the men of Ai and all the men of Bethe (Jos 7:3; 8:17), so that when they unwisely left the city to pursue Israel, "not a man remained in Ai or Beth- el." Then the Israelite ambush party, waiting between Bethel and Ai, crept in and set the city on fire. Joshua's army defeated the Ai-Bethel coalition; they returned and, after carrying "off for themselves the livestock and plunder," burned it completely, leaving only a "heap of ruins" (Jos 8:28).

From the biblical narrative, there is good reason to believe there was no extensive occupation on the site of the ruin (Ai) in Joshua's time—little more than a temporary wooden fortification, manned by the men of Bethel and Ai. Therefore the "heap" left from the burning would have consisted of ashes, charcoal, and a few stones. The ruins certainly would have been picked clean of building stones by later peoples who sought ready-cut stones; and the long centuries of disintegration and wind erosion would have done its work so completely that any remains from Joshua's time would be almost imperceptible in our day. How-ver, with further and more careful excavation, some ant ruins left of the Ai of Joshua's time may yet be und. Or, perhaps, the Ai of biblical fame will be cated elsewhere.

4326–AKELDAMA, or the Potter's Field, reminds s of the tragic occasion when Judas sold the Lord for irty silver coins, then in agony returned the money nd went and hanged himself. "The chief priests . . . ecided to use the money to buy the potter's field as burial place for foreigners. That is why it has been alled the Field of Blood to this day" (Mt 27:6–10).

On the east end of the southern slope of the Hinnom alley is a rugged, rocky area of possibly two acres, hich since Jerome's time (A.D. 400) has been known s the Potter's Field. Here, where a natural cave has een extended, strangers and unfortunates were bur- d through the centuries.

Tradition persists that this is the very location of the potter's house" which Jeremiah visited (Jer 8:1–4) and that later the chief priests purchased it ith the betrayal money, as a burial place for strang- rs. This may be correct, as it meets the scriptural equirements and is accepted by many authorities.

4327–ALEXANDRIA, the birthplace of Apollos, as founded by Alexander the Great in 331 B.C. Its alaces of the Ptolemies, its wonderful museum, its amed library, and its keenly intellectual populace of reeks, Jews, and Egyptians made it one of the great- st intellectual and cultural centers of the Roman mpire.

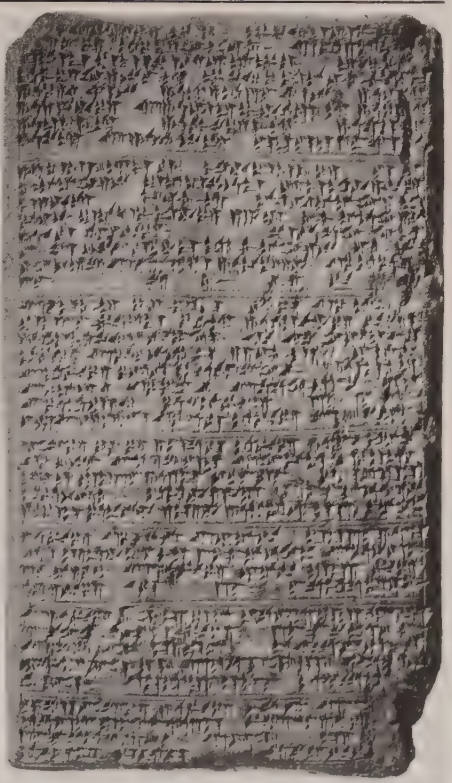
The Septuagint (Greek) version of the Old Testa- nent (280–170 B.C.) was written at Alexandria, and here, during N.T. times, lived Philo Judaeus, a bril- iant and devout Jew, whose writings on the Logos Word) were in certain respects similar to those of John the Beloved.

The Arabs took Alexandria in A.D. 641, destroyed he magnificient museum, and burned the great li- rary with all its valuable books, manuscripts, and ecords. The Turks took over in 1517. Its walls and uildings were reduced to ruins, and Alexandria's for- ner splendor vanished. The buildings of the modern ity are built over the ancient; therefore archaeologi- al discoveries have been largely confined to such ob- ects of antiquity as Pompey's Pillar and the two obe- lisks of the 16th century B.C., known as Cleopatra's Needles. In 1878 one of these was taken to England and erected on the Thames embankment, near Parlia- ment. The other was set up in Central Park, New York City, in 1881.

4328–AMARNA, TELL EL (the mound of A-mar'- na), lay halfway between Memphis and Thebes, and was the remains of Pharaoh Akhenaton's (Amenhotep IV) model capital city which was spoiled and left to go to ruin around 1358–50 B.C.

Much light was thrown on writing, history, politics, and trade relations, as well as manners and customs of Bible lands when, in 1887, a peasant woman dug for fertile soil in the mound of Amarna, and uncovered the royal archives of Amenhotep III, and his royal son Amenhotep IV, who early in his career changed his religion and became known as Akhenaton.

Eventually, more than 350 cuneiform tablets were recovered, most of which were frank personal letters and dispatches from kings, governors, and officers located in cities and fortresses of Babylonia, Mitanni, Phoenicia, Syria, and Palestine. They were written between 1400 and 1358 B.C., and sent to these two pharaohs at the Egyptian court. Some of them are now in the national museums of England, France, Egypt, and Germany; others are owned by private collectors. They are from 2 to 3 inches wide, and 3 to 9 inches long, inscribed on both sides.



BRITISH MUSEUM

One of the Tell el-Amarna tablets.

Most of these tablets were written in the cuneiform language of Babylonia, and reveal the fact that for an extended period of time the various peoples of Western Asia used the cuneiform as their common language. Thus, when Abraham came to Syria, Canaan, and Egypt, he readily conversed with the various people.

As to contents, these clay tablets described Palestine and the surrounding countries as being in a state of turmoil within, and as being attacked from without. For example, the governor or officer in charge at Gezer wrote to the Pharaoh saying, in part:

Let my lord the king, the sun in heaven, take heed unto his land, for the Khabiri are mighty against us; and let the king, my lord, stretch out his hand unto me and let him deliver me from their hands, so that they may not make an end of us.

A number of letters from Abdi-Heba, governor of Urusalem (Jerusalem), pled for help from Pharaoh Akhenaton to prevent the country from being lost to Egyptian rule. In part, one of the letters read:

To the king my lord, say. Thus saith Abdi-Heba thy servant. At the feet of the King, my lord, seven times and seven times I prostrate myself . . . The whole land of the King has revolted. There is not one governor that is loyal to the King, all have rebelled. May the King harken unto Abdi-Heba and send troops, for if no troops come this year, the whole territory of my lord the King will be lost. The Habiru are capturing the fortresses of the King. May the King care for his land. The Habiru are taking the cities of the King . . . If there are no archers this year, then let the King send a deputy that he may take me to himself together with my brothers and we die with the King, our Lord.

These tablets frequently use the name Khabiri in speaking of those who were overrunning the country. Many scholars have regarded the Khabiri as the Hebrews, and much of the material fits with the early date (1400 B.C.) for the beginning of the Hebrew conquest of Canaan under Joshua. It has been said, "Here we have a story of Joshua's conquest of Canaan from the enemy's side."

4329–ANATHOTH, the home of Abiathar the priest (1Ki 2:26), and of Jeremiah the prophet (Jer 1:1), was located some three miles northeast of Jerusalem. Its name survives in the small village of Anata, but the ruins of ancient Anathoth itself lie some 800 yards to the northwest, on the summit of a broad ridge of hills now known as Ras el-Kharrubeh. The excavators found that its occupation began about 1000 B.C., as an Israelite priestly city, and continued until the seventh century A.D. Nothing was found that definitely belonged to Jeremiah, but the view eastward over the Judean desert and the Dead Sea is impressive, reminding one of God's words through Jeremiah, "Have I been a desert to Israel?" (Jer 2:31).

4330–ANTIOCH, where the followers of Christ were first called Christians, is located some three hundred miles north of Jerusalem, on the west bank of the Orontes River. In ancient times, it was called "The Queen of the East," because of the beauty of its surroundings, the importance of its commerce, and its strategic location on intersecting caravan routes between the east, west, north, and south.

Princeton University and the National Museum of France began excavations at Antioch in 1932, and, during the six succeeding years, unearthed over twenty ruined churches, numerous baths, two cemeteries, a stadium, and many gorgeous floor mosaics. Some of these mosaics represented scenes of the Isis cult. One large, well-preserved mosaic (30 by 40 ft.) represented the fable of the phoenix, while another, discovered in a sixth-century floor of a building near St. Paul's Gate, bears the inscription, "Peace be your coming in, you who look on this; joy and blessing be to those who stay here."

The most sensational find, however, was a beautiful silver drinking cup, carved from a single piece of silver and enclosed by a unique outer chalice exquisitely carved with symbolic grape vines, among which are twelve seated figures thought by many to represent Christ and eleven of his apostles. The inner cup holds two and a half quarts of liquid, and is evidently an ancient relic of great sanctity. Some, but not all, regard it as the Holy Grail—the cup used by the Christ and his disciples at the Last Supper. It has been variously dated from the first to the sixth century. Most scholars, however, favor a date of from the fourth or fifth century. The double cup is now in the Cloisters, New York City, and is famed as The Chalice of Antioch.

Seventy mounted troops and two hundred foot soldiers accompanied the apostle Paul when he was sent as a prisoner along this road. After a rest at Antipatris, the foot soldiers left Paul to continue his journey with the horsemen to Caesarea, twenty-six miles northward (Ac 23:23–33). Parts of the old Roman road, from Jerusalem to Caesarea, have been uncovered near Antipatris and remain to this day.

4332–ARABAH, now known as Wadi Arabah, begins at the southern end of the Dead Sea and extends southward for 112 miles to the Gulf of Aqaba. It is an arid depression from six to twelve miles wide—in reality a continuation of the Great Rift Valley, this section of which has been known from ancient Bible times as the Arabah. Beginning at 1292 feet below sea level, the valley gradually ascends as it goes southward for 67 miles to a watershed which rises 660 feet above sea level. From here it quickly descends until 45 miles further southward it reaches the Gulf of Aqaba at Ezion Geber.

Surface explorations, along with minor digs, carried on by Dr. Nelson Glueck, revealed a number of ruined villages and many copper and silver mines from which ore was dug in the time of Solomon (900–1000 B.C.) and during the time of the Nabateans (300 B.C. to A.D. 100).

4333–ASHDOD, military pride of the ancient Philistines, is located on a low rounded hill nine miles northeast of ancient Ashkelon, and three and a half miles southeast of the modern Jewish colony of Ashdod. The mound occupies an area of about 100 acres, which consists of a well-defined acropolis and a lower city.

When the Philistines captured the ark of the covenant, they brought it here and placed it in the temple of Dagon. The next morning the people were deeply impressed when they found Dagon fallen on his face before the ark of God (1Sa 5:3). Isaiah reports (20:1) that Sargon (721–705 B.C.), king of Assyria, sent Tartan, his general, to take the city of Ashdod. Some critics have disputed this statement because secular history makes no mention of such a king. But in 1842

I. Botta excavated Khorsabad and found an octagonal cylinder which reads: "In my ninth expedition to the land beside the great sea, to Philistia and Ashdod went . . . the cities of Ashdod and Gimzo of the Ashdodites I besieged and captured."

Herodotus relates that Psamtik I (633–610 B.C.), Pharaoh of Egypt, besieged Ashdod for 29 years before the standards of Egypt flew over the city. It was to Ashdod (then called Azotus) that Philip the evangelist went after having baptized the treasurer of Ethiopia (Ac 8:40).

It was while excavating here in 1962 that Moshe Dothan and David Noel Freedman uncovered twenty levels of occupation strata that show continuous occupation from the seventeenth century B.C. until the end of Byzantine times. In the three Philistine strata (XIII–XI) they found a city gate, a temple, the remains of houses, grain silos, wine-presses, baking ovens, agricultural tools, implements of war, and seals inscribed in an unknown script. The excavation verified the biblical record of its destruction by Uzziah, king of Judah (2Ch 26:6), and revealed the skeletons of three thousand individuals who died during the conquest of the city by Sargon. Further verification of this event is a fragment of Sargon's stele, which he set up in 712 B.C.

4334–ASHKELON, one of the five federated cities of the Philistines, lies on the shores of the Mediterranean about twelve miles north of Gaza. It faces the sea like an open bow, and to its ancient docks came vessels of many countries to purchase and carry away cargoes of grain. Here Herod the Great was born, and later he adorned the city with many buildings and colonnaded streets.

Dr. J. Garstang and W. J. Phythian-Adams excavated here in 1921–22 and found remnants of the many people who had lived here—Canaanite, Philistine, Maccabean, Hellenistic, Roman, Crusader, and Arabic. Of special importance were a large basilica built by Herod the Great, and a very finely decorated tomb.

4335–ASSHUR, the first of the four capitals of the mighty Assyrian empire, is now known as Qala'at Sherqat, and is located on the west bank of the Tigris River, sixty miles south of modern Mosul. Its history began around 3000 B.C., and one city after another prospered, then was destroyed, until the last came to an end in 614 B.C.

Excavation of this mound was undertaken, in turn, by Layard, Rassam, and Koldewey. Layard became interested when he heard the Arabs talk of the mound containing "strange figures carved in black stone." Soon after his men began to work, they found a damaged, yet most interesting, life-size black basalt statue covered on three sides with cuneiform inscriptions telling of Shalmaneser III. Later he found inscribed bricks, boundary stones, fragments of inscribed slabs, and a few tombs with their usual contents.

In 1853 Hormuzd Rassam and his men were digging in the mound when Rawlinson sent a message advising Rassam to look for the "corner stone" contents at the base of the ziggurat. On investigation, Rassam found two "foundation tablets" of Tiglath-Pileser I (1110–1103 B.C.), which tell of the erection of the temple (1820 B.C.) and of its being rebuilt by Tiglath-Pileser in his day. One tablet mentions that this was the city of Asshur.

In 1903 the Germans, under Robert Koldewey, began systematic excavations which they carried on until the outbreak of World War I. They gathered quantities of pottery, traced the outlines of temples, shrines, palaces, streets and fortifications, and discovered many inscribed steles of Assyrian kings. They found an Assyrian bilingual poem which tells of the creation of the world and the beginnings of mankind. Marks alongside the text look much like "musical notations." The extent of the German find at Asshur will probably never be known, for the war cut short the work, and complete reports and publications were never made.

4336–ATHENS, one of the greatest cultural centers of Paul's day, grew up around a 520-foot-high rocky plateau called the Acropolis. Here, on this elevated area, stood the many-columned Parthenon, the famed architectural wonder, and so many other sacred edifices that the place was called "the many templed Acropolis."

To the north of the Acropolis was the celebrated civic center and marketplace, known as the Agora, where people not only traded, but visited and discussed questions of interest at the time. To the northwest there extended out from the Acropolis, on a somewhat lower level, a rocky hill called the Areopagus, or Mars' Hill, where the councils and the High Court met. Both of these well-known places were familiar to Paul. In the marketplace he "reasoned . . . day by day with those who happened to be there" (Ac 17:17), among whom were the Stoics and Epicureans, who, with admiration and curiosity, "remarked, 'He seems to be advocating foreign gods' " (v. 18). Therefore they brought him up the hill to speak before an informal session of the supreme court. Standing in the midst of Mars' Hill, before these representatives of the best learning of the earth, and many others who came to listen, Paul spoke about "The Unknown God," and delivered one of the most dynamic messages of all time. Some mocked, some were deeply impressed, and others were converted.

Thanks to the American School of Classical Studies, the marketplace has been uncovered, its streets charted, and its ruined buildings identified.

The thirty-five stone steps carved in the rock up Mars' Hill, and traces of an altar and many rock benches on top of the hill, are visible today. Thousands of tourists from all parts of the world climb these steps and, standing on Mars' Hill, are even now often moved by the words as well as the spirit and power of Paul's mighty address.

To the southwest is the ancient roadway leading to Corinth.

No remains of an altar inscription, "To an Unknown God," referred to by Paul, have as yet been found in Athens, but an identical inscription on an altar was found in 1903 during the excavations of the city of Pergamum.

4337–BAALBEK. In the middle of the fertile Bekaa plain, between the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon mountain ranges, are the gigantic ruins of Baalbek, which the Greeks and the Romans called Heliopolis, "city of the sun."

Its beginnings go so far back as to be lost in the ancient legends of Baal, held to be "the controller of human destiny." During the early centuries of our Christian era, Baalbek was exceedingly prosperous, even famous. Its buildings as we now know them were begun by the Roman Emperor Antoninus Pius (A.D. 138–161) and continued by Septimius Severus and other rulers down to Caracalla (211–217). The Romans built Baalbek to honor Jupiter, Baal, and Bacchus, and to impress the nations of the Levant with the might and greatness of Rome. As a center of sun worship, it acquired renown as the seat of an oracle, and was visited by leading rulers and prominent people from far and near.

Under Constantine, Baalbek's temples became Christian churches, but when the Arabs captured the city in 634 they converted the entire temple area into a strong fortress that played an important role in the crusader wars of the Middle Ages. It was sacked, pillaged, and almost destroyed a number of times, but usually revived. In 1664, and again in 1750, it was violently shaken by earthquakes, from which it never recovered.

Baalbek was first known in Europe through two English architects, Wood and Dawkings, who visited the site in 1751. After their trip to Jerusalem and Damascus in 1898, Kaiser Wilhelm II and the kaiserin visited Baalbek. They arrived in the evening, set up their tents in an open area in the midst of the ruins, and left early the following day. This short stopover, however, was enough to persuade the kaiser to do all he could to preserve the imposing ruins for future generations. After returning to Berlin, he took the necessary steps. Within a few weeks German experts were on the scene. In 1900, under the supervision of Otto Puchstein, an archaeologist, and Bruno Schulz, an architect, experts and workmen began to remove the debris, and a month later excavation work was started. By 1904 the major undertaking was essentially completed; tons of debris had been cleared away and some order had been given to the chaos. The present appearance of the city is a result of that work done more than 75 years ago.

Baalbek has since been visited, marveled at, and described by so many travelers that it has easily become one of the most famous ruins in the Mediterranean world. Only with the temple of Amon at Karnak, the ruins at Palmyra, and the Parthenon at Athens can these buildings be compared. Baalbek has survived partly because it was built compactly, yet on a colossal scale. The ruins are only about 950 feet by 650 feet. Yet there is in this mixture of Roman and Oriental work, as one observer puts it, a "mingled vastness and delicacy" that gives one "an emotion of deep serenity."

The remains of various buildings compose the ruins. Those in clearest outline are: The Forecourt, the Great Court, the temple of the Sun (to Jupiter-Baal), and the temple of Bacchus.

4338–BABYLON, the mightiest city of the ancient world, was largely built by the efforts of Hammurabi (1728–1686 B.C.), and Nebuchadnezzar II (604–562 B.C.). It declined with the fall of Nebuchadnezzar, fell to a lower level under Belshazzar, and came to ruin about 130 B.C. at the hands of the Parthians.

Niebuhr, Rich, and Rassam probed the ruins of the place, which lay on both sides of the river. But to Robert Koldewey and his staff go the honors for fourteen years of careful excavational work in Babylon from 1899 to 1913.

The discoveries in Babylon were no less than phenomenal. Among the more important finds were: (1) a wall about the main city more than fourteen miles long and 136½ feet thick; (2) many city gates of which the Ishtar Gate with its 575 enameled dragons, bulls and lions, was the most outstanding; (3) the "processional street" which entered the city at Ishtar Gate on the north, went past the royal palace, then directly through the main part of the city to the temple of Marduk "the Creator, and King of the universe"; (4) the gorgeously decorated palace of Nebuchadnezzar with its banquet hall and throne room, 56 feet wide and 168 feet long; (5) the foundation and outline of the Tower of Babel, known as "E-Temen-an-ki" (the House of the Foundation Platform of Heaven and earth), believed to have been the ruins of the ill-fated Tower of Babel of Genesis; (6) the Hanging Gardens or the extensive ruins of a quadrangle area made up of high-vaulted crypts or subterranean cellar rooms braced with brick arches and covered over with dirt and debris. The excavators believed these ruins to be the remains of the foundation structure of the famed Hanging Gardens (one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World); (7) and almost 300 cuneiform tablets relating mostly to the distribution of oil and barley to captives and skilled workmen from many nations who lived in and around Babylon between 595 and 570 B.C. Among those mentioned were "yow-keen" (Joiachin), "King of the land of Yehud" (Judah) and his five young sons who were in the hands of Keniah, their attendant.

4339–BEERSHEBA, the center of patriarchal life, means "well of the oath," a name which originated with the oath between Abraham and Abimelech, king of Gerar. Two of the wells in this area are very ancient, and are thought to have been connected with the patriarchs—possibly the very wells which they and their servants dug. The wells are circular and the larger one is twelve and a half feet in diameter, and about sixty-six feet deep. On one of the masonry stones lining the shaft, Condor, in 1874, found a date indicating that repairs had been carried out as late as the 12th century A.D. The old stone curb, deeply grooved by ropes for many centuries, has now been replaced by a newer well mouth and a somewhat more recent water lift. Yet many herds of camel, cattle, and sheep still drink there daily from hewn stone and cement troughs.

4340–BELVOIR, a famous crusader castle-fortress, occupies one of the most picturesque of scarps, extending eastward from Mt. Moreh. It rises 1,400 feet above the Jordan Valley and is so situated that one standing on its heights may observe activities happening along much of the way between Tiberias and Beth Shan. It commands a view of two highways ascending from the Jordan Valley westward into the interior—one by the Jezreel valley and the other by way of the Tabor valley.

In Roman times the fort of Agrippina stood here. In 1168, the crusaders purchased the site and erected Belvoir as one of their castle-forts. It held off strong Muslim forces until January 1191, when the eastern tower was undermined and destroyed. Seeing the hopelessness of continuing the struggle, the Christian forces sued for peace and were permitted free passage to Tyre. Belvoir was dismantled in 1241, and eventually an Arab village rose amid its ruins. It was finally abandoned in 1948.

In 1966–67, excavations were carried out at the site by M. Ben-Dor on behalf of the Israeli National Park Authority. Stables, storerooms, cisterns, a kitchen, and a very fine hall with pillars and capitals made of black basalt were discovered near the ruins of a church.

4341–BETHANY, the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus, is now called el-Azariyeh ("the place of Lazarus"). It is located two miles east of Jerusalem, on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives.

The older ruins here consist of a cave tomb, considered by some to be the tomb of Lazarus, and the ruins of two buildings unauthentically pointed out to tourists as the home of Simon the Leper, and the home of Mary, Martha, and Lazarus.

The so-called "tomb of Lazarus" is a cavern reached by some twenty-five steps. There is little possibility of its ever having been connected in any way with the burial of Lazarus, yet it has been so designated since

The ruins of a home believed to be that of Mary and Martha.

A.D. 300. The twin-towered ruins known as the house of Simon the Leper, where Jesus was anointed with costly ointment (Mk 14:3–9), is of medieval origin. The roofless ruin shown as the place where Martha "opened her home to him" (Lk 10:38) is hardly the home where Jesus and his disciples so frequently came in Bethany. However, these three ruins commemorate sacred incidents in the life of our Lord.

4342–BETHEL ("house of God") is the place where Abraham built his second altar, where Jacob had his vision of angels ascending and descending on a heavenly ladder, and where, after twenty years, he returned, according to his vow, to set up an altar and call the place "El Bethel, because it was there that God revealed himself to him" (Ge 35:2–7). Jeroboam desecrated the place by setting up a calf-god of gold.

Dr. Albright of the American Schools of Oriental Research carried out soundings here in 1927, and in 1934 was joined by Dr. J. L. Kelso of the Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary, and other young archaeologists. The excavation was resumed by Dr. Kelso in 1954.

The finds indicate a settlement established here around 2000 B.C., and destroyed by a very fierce fire during the thirteenth century B.C., probably in the disturbed and disorganized period of the Judges, or, as some think, by the incoming Israelites under Joshua. The town was rebuilt in the ninth century, and destroyed by the Assyrians in 724–22 B.C. while the siege of Samaria was being carried on. It revived but was destroyed by a great fire around 597 B.C., probably by Nebuchadnezzar's army. Rebuilt in the late Persian period, it prospered until destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70, at the same time they destroyed Jerusalem.

The earlier city walls were among the best found in Palestine of that period, and there was "a remarkably well constructed system of stone-lined drains, which ran under the plaster floors" and carried the rain water and drainage outside the city wall. In the early city levels there were many Canaanite cult objects, but after Israel took over there were no images or monuments to false gods—not even a trace of the golden calf.

4343–BETHESDA was a spring-fed pool, surrounded by five porches, where Jesus healed the man who had been sick for thirty-eight years (Jn 5:2).

The only record indicating its location places it "near the Sheep Gate." Apparently it was in the northeast part of the city, for according to Josephus and various ancient authorities, the principal sheep market in Jerusalem was located north of the Temple area, just as in recent times the Arab sheep market has been located outside Herod's Gate. Also, the Medeba map (fifth century) located the pool in this section which is known as Bezetha.

In 1888 repairs were being made on St. Ann's church, in this northeast section of Jerusalem, when what seemed to be a large reservoir was located. Professor Conrad Schick, who was consulted, organized an expedition and uncovered the entire area down to the Roman level, revealing two large pools with five porches and numerous fragments of columns and capitals—all in Roman style, but evidently somewhat later than the time of Christ. There were steep winding steps leading down to the pools, and on a prominent wall of one of the porches was a faded fresco of an angel in the act of troubling the waters. Here was Bethesda, according to the tradition of the early church.

4344–BETHLEHEM, the city of David, lies five miles south of Jerusalem. Here Rachel was buried. Ruth gleaned in Boaz' field, David was anointed to be king, Christ was born in a manger, and the Magi came from the east seeking the Savior.

Rachel's tomb now stands beside the highway, at the entrance of the city. It is venerated by Jews, Christians, and Muslims, and is considered to be one of the most authentic sites in the Holy Land.

The Church of the Nativity was built by Helena (the mother of Emperor Constantine) in A.D. 328–30, over the traditional site, believed then as now to be the place of Christ's birth. Emperor Justinian (527–565) rebuilt the church in the 6th century. Though dilapidated, this church still stands in Bethlehem. In 1934 Mr. William Harvey carried on limited excavations, and, about some eighteen inches under the floor of the present church, he discovered portions of the mosaic floor of the original church built by Helena and Constantine. Some of the mosaics were of flowers, fruits and birds; others were in geometric designs. No religious scenes were used in these decorations, since they were to be walked on.

Under the choir area, at the east end of the church, is a flight of steps leading down to the grotto of the Nativity, twenty feet below the floor level. This cave-like chapel room measures 12 by 40 feet. The walls are completely concealed by tapestries and the ceiling is hung with beautiful lights. At the eastern end of the chapel is a small crypt, the marble floor of which is inlaid with a vermilion silver star, lighted by 16 silver lamps and surrounded by a simple inscription in Latin announcing the most stupendous event in all history: Here Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary." Nearby is a manger which completes the setting for that profound statement: "And she gave birth to her firstborn, a son. She wrapped him in cloths and placed him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn" (Lk 2:7).

4345–BETHSAIDA, the original hometown of Philip, Andrew, and Peter, was located on the Plain of Batiha, east and north of where the Jordan River enters the Sea of Galilee. The plain spreads out for two miles along the Jordan, and extends back for one mile eastward toward the mountains.

Et Tell, a small mound on the northern edge of the plain, is usually identified with Bethsaida. But the ruins called el-Araj, on the shore of the sea, and directly east of where the river enters, is thought by some to be the spot that more likely marks the site of Bethsaida, "the fishers' town." Some suppose that John's "Bethsaida in Galilee" (Jn 12:21) implies that there were two places called Bethsaida, one of which was west of the Jordan, nearer Capernaum. But the gospel accounts, on the whole, seem to imply but one Bethsaida, and the older traditions agree with this. Excavations in the future may settle the question, but uncertainty as to the exact location does not affect the gospel narratives.

4346–BETH SHAN lay at the east end of the Valley of Jezreel, on the south bank of the river Jalud. It guarded the highway between the valleys of Jezreel and the Jordan and was therefore of most strategic importance.

Excavations by the University of Pennsylvania, between 1921 and 1933, were directed successively by Clarence Fisher, Alan Rowe, and G. W. FitzGerald. These resulted in many finds and threw considerable light on the history of the city and the part it played in the drama in which Egypt, Israel, and the Philistines were the chief actors. Some nine occupational levels were excavated, and in the various strata was found cultural evidence such as pottery, statuary, jewelry, scarabs, seals, and a six-pound pot of gold dedicated to Baal. Thirteen steles, or inscribed monuments, were uncovered. Two of these bore inscriptions of Seti I (1318–1301 B.C.), and another of Rameses II (1301–1234 B.C.); and one was a statue of Rameses III (1198–1167 B.C.).

The first stele of Seti I narrates in considerable detail how he sent "the first army of Ra" to Beth Shan to "overthrow" a coalition of local people who threatened Egyptian rule. The other stele has on it a reference to repulsing the "Apiru of the mountains of the Jordan" who were seeking expansion. It has been suggested that these might well be the tribe of Manasseh who "did not drive out the people of Beth Shan . . . and their surrounding settlements" (Jdg 1:27).

The nine-foot high stele of Rameses II was dated in the ninth year of his reign. Its twenty-four lines were rather worn, yet it depicted the king as "an eagle among birds," who made his enemies "fly like feathers before the wind." Among his boastings, there was mention of the city of Rameses (or Raamses) in Egypt. Unfortunately, the idea was advanced that the stele mentioned the city of Rameses as having been constructed by Asiatic slave laborers. The press widely publicized the finds, and many were led to believe that Rameses II was certainly the pharaoh of the oppression, and that Merenptah, his son and successor, was the pharaoh of the Exodus. Then, when the official report was given, the public was advised that the city of Rameses was mentioned, but that there was no allusion to the building of the city, nor any reference whatever to the employment of Hebrews or Asiatics. Alan Rowe, the excavator, stated it plainly when he said, "The text contains no mention whatever of any such building operations, nor of the Israelites."

The ruins of many religious edifices were uncovered during the excavation of the great mound of Beth Shan—a Muslim mosque, a Christian church, a Hellenistic temple, and some five or six temples where the religion practiced has been described as "Canaanitish with an Egyptian veneer." The deity in whose honor most of these temples were dedicated was "Mekal, the Lord (Baal) of Beth Shan." On the fifth level two temples were uncovered, both of which had come to an end about 1000 B.C. The one on the north side of the mound was, from all indications, the temple of Ashtoreth (Astarte), on whose inside walls the armor of Saul was hung as a trophy following his tragic death on Mount Gilboa. The temple on the south was 80 by 62 feet, with its axis running east and west. It contained a long central hall with three circular stone bases on either side. This, the excavators concluded, must have been the temple of Dagon, where Saul's head was displayed (1Ch 10:10; 1Sa 31:10). Outside on the city walls were hung the bodies of Saul and his sons.

The city of the fifth level seems to have been captured and destroyed by David about 1000 B.C., after which it lay in ruins until 300 B.C. when Hellenistic buildings appeared.

4347–BETH SHEARIM. One day in March 1936, two boys were passing along the wadi that runs west of the mound of Sheikh Abreik, located on a hillside in the southwest of Galilee, when they saw a fox disappear into a cave opening. Crawling in after it they found themselves inside a catacomb, with burial chambers whose walls were decorated with incised, or red-painted, inscriptions and designs.

When the boys informed Dr. Benjamin Maisler of what they had found, he gathered a group of scholars and together they entered the catacomb and found that some of the inscriptions on the walls contained names of Jewish sages. Continuing on in the underground avenues they discovered that they were in a vast cemetery hidden under the mound of Sheikh Abreik, which they concluded must have been the site of ancient Beth Shearim.

It was known from Josephus, the Talmud, and other ancient Jewish literature that Beth Shearim was located somewhere in this area, and that the town had a large cemetery. Several Jewish scholars had once lived here and conducted a rabbinical academy. The Sanhedrin had even convened here at times. The village had become especially famous as the residence of "Rabbi," the Patriarch of Judah I. The Talmud contains descriptions of the life and work of this Patriarch, of the academy where he taught, and of his burial in the tomb which he had prepared during his lifetime. Others wanted to be buried nearby, and it became the burial place not only of Jews of Beth Shearim but of many other countries.

The heads of the synagogues of Tyre, Sidon, Beirut and leading men and their families from most of the nearby countries were brought here for burial—rabbis, scribes, public officials, merchants, and craftsmen. The belief became prevalent that "he who is buried in the Land of Israel is as though he were buried under the altar," and for more than a century Beth Shearim was the place where countless Jewish deceased were brought—even from as far away as Babylon and south Arabia. As one scholar has commented, "In fact, here was a kind of posthumous ingathering of the Jewish people who had been dispersed beyond the Holy Land."

Dr. Maisler quickly organized an expedition under the sponsorship of the Palestine Jewish Exploration Society, with Pessach Bar-Adon as chief assistant and Zvi Bar-Adon as architect. Following a preliminary exploration of the catacombs, however, Zvi Bar-Adon contracted cave fever and was replaced by Jacob Kaplan.

The excavations at Beth Shearim extended over four seasons, between 1936 and 1939. A total of 11 catacombs were cleared, and in addition a synagogue on top of the mound was excavated. Many of the catacombs had courtyards, corridors, and halls. The halls had many rooms of various dimensions with numerous burial niches cut in their walls. The courtyards in front of the burial halls were quite wide, and some were paved with colorful mosaics. The entrances had stone doors, most of which still turned on their hinges. A few doors were intact, but most had been broken down by intruders.

In catacomb number 11, sixteen halls with stone doors were exposed. These halls had many rooms with numerous burial niches cut in their walls. Approximately 400 burial places were counted. The coffins were made of wood, stone, lead, or marble, and were usually decorated with one of the traditional Jewish symbols: the menorah, lulab, enthrog, shofar, or incense shovel. Catacomb number 20 had a large courtyard with three arched entrances leading to a hall 164 feet long, with extensions on either side. Here were found 130 limestone sarcophagi, with innumerable fragments of marble sarcophagi. Most of these and other coffins were beautifully carved and bore significant inscriptions. Some 200 inscriptions were found, the great majority of which were in Greek, with only about 10 percent in Hebrew. Perhaps the most outstanding inscription was on a broken marble slab which originally had been fixed in the wall of the mausoleum of Catabomb 11. The epitaph on this slab provides definite proof that these archaeological remains at Sheikh Abreik are indeed those of ancient Beth Shearim. The inscription, as originally published by the late Prof. Moshe Schwabe, reads as follows:

I, Justus, son of Leontios and Sappho, lie here dead,
And after I had plucked the fruit of all wisdom
I left the light, the miserable parents who mourn ceaselessly
And my brothers. Woe to me in (my) Besa(ra).

After decending to Hades, I Justus lie here
With many of my people, for so willed stern fate.
Be comforted, Justus, no man is immortal.

4348–BETH SHEMESH, the "house of the sun," is situated twenty-four miles west of Jerusalem, on a hill spur overlooking the Valley of Sorek. It was important because it was a Levitical city, and a frontier post between Judah and the Philistines. It was here that the ark of the covenant was returned on a cart drawn by two milk cows, after it had been in possession of the Philistines.

The mound was excavated by Dr. Duncan Mackenzie (1911–12) for the Palestine Exploration Fund, and by Elihu Grant (1928–31) of Haverford College. The excavators found that five cities had been superimposed, one above the other—the first dated from 3000 B.C., and the last was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C.

They found extensive constructions from the Canaanite, Israelite, and Philistine periods. A quantity of very fine pottery, weapons, jewelry, scarabs, and several inscribed jar handles were found. Of special interest was a jar handle which read, "Belonging to Eliakim, steward of Yokin (Jehoiachin)." In the fourteenth century level, Grant found a potsherd which had on it Old Hebrew characters inscribed in ink. He also found a clay tablet written in a cuneiform similar to many of the Ras Shamra (Ugarit) texts. These showed the widespread use of alphabetic writing at this time.

4349–BETH ZUR, prominent military fortress city four miles north of Hebron, was excavated in 1931 by O. R. Sellers and W. F. Albright, aided by five young archaeologists.

These men found that Beth Zur had been occupied during the middle Bronze Age (2000 to 1500 B.C.), but was destroyed about 1580 B.C. when the Hyksos were expelled from Egypt and Palestine. It was built in the time of the judges, burned about 1000 B.C., fortified by Rehoboam about 930 B.C., and played a major role in the Maccabean wars. One fortress was built and destroyed three times during the time of Judas, Jonathan, and Simon. The city declined under John Hyrcanus, and was deserted before the beginning of the Christian era.

During the short campaign of excavation were found strong masonry walls, a fortress, a marketplace, a storeroom for a wine shop, many ovens, a cellar, a water reservoir, and extensive bathrooms, all of the Hellenistic period. There were Egyptian scarabs of Rameses II and Thutmose III, and a Hebrew seal impression "Of Ge'alyahu, the son of the King." There were many small objects, such as inscribed and uninscribed weights, spindle whorls, buttons, beads, rings, needles, arrowheads, spear points, and 279 coins—one of the finest selections of ancient coins ever to be found in so short a campaign. Yet "there were no hoards, and on only two occasions were two coins found together." Six of these coins are of the Persian period, and tend to indicate that the Jews used the Attic drachma standard during the period of Nehemiah and Ezra, as stated in the Book of Chronicles.

The literary materials concerning Beth Zur, as found in the Bible, 1 Maccabees, and Josephus, are given striking confirmation by these coins and the abundance of other archaeological evidence uncovered in the excavation.

4350–CAESAREA, the Roman capital of Judea in the time of Christ and Paul, was located by the Mediterranean Sea, thirty-two miles north of Joppa, and some sixty miles northwest of Jerusalem. Herod the Great began to build the city in 25 B.C., and completed it in 13 B.C. At the dedication in 12 B.C., he named it Caesarea, in honor of Caesar Augustus, and made it the Roman capital of Judea. It soon became a busy seaport, a great commercial center, and one of the most attractive cities of its day. It was constructed so well and on such a magnificent plan that it was frequently called "Little Rome." Philip the evangelist lived here and Paul was imprisoned here for two years, during which time he appeared before Felix, Festus, and King Agrippa.

The city stood, with varying fortunes, until A.D. 1256, when Sultan Bibars of Egypt captured the city and destroyed its walls and most of its buildings. During succeeding centuries it lay in ruins, with only broken pottery, portions of gates and castles, and fragments of granite and marble columns protruding from the sands and lying half-submerged in the shallow waters of the nearby sea.

The Department of Antiquity of the Government of Israel has undertaken the excavation of Caesarea. Their larger finds, thus far, have included a very splendid Crusader castle, the theater, the amphitheater, the hippodrome, and the pavement of a Jewish synagogue—possibly the one, or the successor of the one, in which Cornelius once worshiped, and which Philip, Peter, and Paul visited. In the theater they found an inscribed stone which bore the names of Pilate and Tiberius. This was the first time Pilate's name has been found on a stone inscription. A large temple dedicated to Caesar of Rome was uncovered. It contained an unusually large statue of the emperor.

In 1960 the Link Expedition to Israel explored and charted the extensive harbor built by Herod the Great. Only the tops of the elaborate stone breakwater protruded here and there above the waters, but undersea explorations went far in confirming Josephus' description of Caesarea's massive and extensive harbor.

4351–CAESAREA PHILIPPI was located at the foot of Mount Hermon, where, as a sparkling stream, the most eastern source of the Jordan River rushes out from a cave at the base of a great cliff and goes on to join other sources of the famous river. Being well watered, the place has a variety of trees, vines, and flowering shrubs and is one of the most beautiful localities in all the Holy Land. In Old Testament times it had a shrine dedicated to Baal, while later the Greeks built a shrine to Pan, the god of nature, and called the place Paneas (the city of Pan).

In 20 B.C. Herod the Great built a white marble temple here, and dedicated it to Augustus Caesar. At Herod's death the city fell to his son, Herod Philip, who enlarged and beautified the place and named it Caesarea Philippi, in order to gain the favor of his emperor, Tiberius Caesar, and to distinguish it from the better-known capital and seaport of Caesarea on the coast.

RESEARCH MEDIAGRAPHICS—JAMES E. JENNINGS

The theater at Caesarea dates from the time of Herod. It was excavated between 1959 and 1963, and during the project a Latin inscription was found that named "Pontius Pilate, Prefect of Judea."

It was to this area of natural beauty that Jesus took his disciples for a brief period of rest and devotion, and where, after prayer, he asked them, "Who do you say I am?" Simon Peter made the great declaration, "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Mt 16:16, Mk 9:18). In medieval times (A.D. 1120) the Crusaders built a castle here on a mountain spur some 1150 feet above the gushing fountain, and called it The Castle of Subeibeh.

Today, masses of building stone, pieces of broken columns, and half-buried arches are strewn over the site of the city. On the face of the great cliff around the grotto, from which emerges the stream, are several niches, and a Greek inscription to the effect that "Pan and his Nymphs haunt this place." Another inscription speaks of the "Priest of the god Pan."

A hoard of coins has been found. On one is pictured the syrinx or pipe of Pan; on another Pan leans on a tree playing his flute; on a third is shown the mouth of the cavern and Pan, within, playing the flute; and on a fourth coin is the name of the city, "Caesarea-Paneion."

High on the mountain, overlooking Caesarea Philippi, stands the Castle of Subeibeh surrounded by walls ten feet thick, one hundred feet high, and strengthened by numerous round towers. The interior of the old fortress is an uneven area of four or five acres, dotted here and there by houses, cisterns, huge walls, and wide courtyards. The castle is old and worn by time and the elements, but is better preserved than many other castles of this area.

4352—CALAH, now called Nimrud, lies about twenty miles south of Nineveh, on the west bank of the Tigris River. According to Genesis 10:11, it was first built by Nimrod: "Nimrod went to Assyria where he built Nineveh, Rehoboth Ir, Calah."

Sir Henry Layard began exploring the mound in 1845 and found that the remains of the ancient city walls measured 7,000 by 5,500 feet. Within these walls he found the remains of the palaces of three kings: Ashurnasirpal (885–860 B.C.), Shalmaneser III (860–825), and Esarhaddon (680–669 B.C.), along with many wall sculptures. The most interesting of these sculptures was a series which record the victories of Tiglath-Pileser III, the Pul of 2 Kings 15:19. These figures show, in graphic style, the evacuation of a city, military operations connected with a siege, and the harsh treatment of prisoners. They appear to have been removed from an older palace by King Esarhaddon and placed in his palace at Calah.

The statue of Nebo, the god of wisdom and writing, was excavated at Nimrud, and dates from the time of Adadnirari III (810–782 B.C.). Engraved on the statue is the following inscription: "Trust in Nebo; do not trust in any other god."

A relief from the palace of Tiglath-Pileser III shows four statues of gods being borne away from a conquered city on the shoulders of Assyrian soldiers.

The most important of all discoveries at Calah, however, was the Black Obelisk which had been set up by Shalmaneser III in the central building. It is a large, imposing monument of black marble, six feet six inches high, and tapering at the top. It has twenty small bas-reliefs—five on each side—showing officials from five different countries bringing tribute to the king. Above, below, and between the reliefs are 210 lines of cuneiform inscription which tell the story of the monarch's achievements in both war and peace during the first thirty-one years of his reign. Among other individuals it mentions Hazael of Damascus and Jehu of Israel. On the obelisk Shalmaneser says:

> In the eighteenth year of my reign I crossed the Euphrates for the sixteenth time. Hazael of Damascus put his trust in his large army, and mustered his troops in great numbers, making Mount Senir (sa-ni-ru), facing the Lebanon, as his fortress. I fought with him and inflicted defeat upon him, killing with the sword 16,000 of his experienced soldiers. I took away from him 1121 chariots, 470 riding horses as well as his camp. He disappeared to save his life, but I followed him in Damascus, his royal residence. There I cut down his gardens outside the city and took my departure. I marched as far as Mount Hauran destroying, tearing down and burning innumerable towns, carrying booty away from them which was beyond counting. I then marched as far as the mountains of Ba'lira'si, by the sea-side and erected there a stela with my image as King. At that time

I received the tribute of the inhabitants of Tyre, Sideon, and of Jehu, son of Omri,

Later in the inscription is a section of even greater interest to the Bible student. It reads:

The tribute of Jehu, son of Omri: I received from him silver, gold, a golden bowl, a golden vase with pointed bottom, golden goblets, pictures of gold, bars of lead, staffs for the hand of the King, and javelins, I received.

Jehu is shown kneeling, with tribute, in front of Shalmaneser. The Assyrian monarch is accompanied by two attendants (one holding a sunshade above him), and stands proudly, with the symbols of Ashur and Ishtar in the area above. King Jehu of Israel wears a short, rounded beard, a soft leather cap, and a sleeveless jacket, which marks him as a prisoner. Following him come Israelites dressed in long garments and carrying precious metals and other tribute. This relief is exceedingly important, since it is the only sculptured relief we have of an Israelite king.

4353–CALVARY, or GOLGOTHA. Both words—the first derived from Latin and the latter from Aramaic—mean "the skull," or "the place of the skull," and refer to the place where Christ was crucified (Mt 27:33; Lk 23:33). Whether it was called "the place of the skull" because it was a place of execution (a place where skulls were found) or because the site resembled a skull is a matter of conjecture.

The exact location of the site is unknown, because Titus destroyed Jerusalem in A.D. 70, and for sixty years the city lay in ruins. Few Christians returned to live there, and those who did would have been only children when they fled from the city, and on their return would not have been able to identify places where devastation had been so complete sixty years before. The Scriptures merely indicate that the grim tragedy occurred outside the city walls, on an eminent place where it could be seen from a distance. It was fairly near a city gate, and near a roadway which evidently passed through the gate and on by the place of execution (Jn 19:20; Heb 13:12; Lk 23:49; Mt 27:39). John states that the tomb was in a garden nearby (Jn 19:41).

Various sites have been suggested, but only two of those are seriously considered. One is within the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, and the other is Gordon's Calvary, with its Garden Tomb.

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher came into being in the following manner: In A.D. 312 Constantine had a vision of a cross in the sky, and the words, "By this conquer." He made the cross the standard of his army, after which such phenomenal success attended his efforts that in time he became the master and monarch of Europe and western Asia. Desiring to pay his debt to Christ and Christianity he sent his mother, Helena, to the Holy Land to search for the tomb in which Christ had been buried. With the aid of Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea, and Macarius, bishop of Jerusalem, the debris from a mound was removed and a nearby tomb uncovered. Here were found three crosses, and other evidence which led them to designate the place as Calvary, and the tomb as the one in which Christ had lain.

Helena spread the news, the Catholic world rejoiced, and Emperor Constantine erected a magnificent group of buildings over the "miraculously discovered" site. These were completed and dedicated in A.D. 335, and called the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. In A.D. 333, when the church was yet incomplete, the Bordeaux Pilgrim described it as "a church of wonderous beauty."

This building stood until A.D. 614, when Chosroes II demolished and burned it. By popular subscription it was rebuilt, and stood until destroyed by the so-called "Mad Caliph Hakem" in 1010. Within thirty-eight years it was rebuilt, and later taken over by the Crusaders when they entered Jerusalem in 1099. At once they set about enlarging and beautifying the structure. This building stood until it was burned in the great fire in September of 1808. Three million dollars in subscriptions were received, and within two years another church arose over the site. It was not as beautiful or substantial as the former ones, yet it stands today—the pride and glory of Eastern Christians. It is a duplex structure, covering both the place of crucifixion and the tomb in which Christ was supposed to be buried. Here the Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Gregorian Armenian, Copts, and Jacobites have their separate chapels partitioned from each other. The Holy Sepulcher itself is situated in a large rotunda at the western end of the nave, where each of the Christian groups take their turn worshiping on special occasions. A few yards away, on an elevation fifteen feet above the level of the tomb, is the so-called "true cross," studded with millions of dollars worth of gems and precious jewels. Nearby is a crack in the rock, which is pointed out as having been made by the earthquake which shook the earth when Christ was crucified.

No place in the Christian world has been regarded with such awe and treated with such reverence as that occupied by the building known as "The Church of the Holy Sepulcher." No place has been fought for and longed for as has this one. It has been estimated that two-thirds of all Christendom love this place above all others because they believe the hill to be Golgotha, and the sepulcher to be the one where their crucified Lord lay. However, the place is inside the walls of present day Jerusalem, and many wonder if it were not also inside the walls of Herod's city.

Gordon's Calvary, and the Garden Tomb. On a lone gray hill north of Jerusalem, a "stone's throw" from the ancient wall, and some seven hundred feet outside the Damascus gate, is a prominent site which covers three acres and can be seen plainly from every direction. As a hill it rises forty to fifty feet above the surrounding terrain, and the side of the hill which is turned toward the city is rounded at the top and bears "a certain fantastic likeness" to a human skull. There are caverns for the eyes, a protruding rock for the nose, a long slit for the mouth, and a lower ledge for the chin—"quite as strong as is to be found in most of the nature resemblances which are commonly noticed in different parts of the world."

In 1842 Otto Thenius of Dresden studied this hill rather carefully and proposed that it was Golgotha. He pointed out that traditionally it was the Jewish place of stoning, that it lay outside the city, and that it showed the form of a skull. Then, on a day in 1885, a famous Christian and British military man by the name of General Charles G. Gordon was out walking on the northern wall of Jerusalem, when he observed and studied this skull-like rock formation. On returning to his hotel he said, "Today I have found just the place for Calvary." General Gordon wrote to his sister and others about this possibility, then went on his way, and was killed three years later at Khartoum, Africa. Lew Wallace, Captain Conder, and others were inclined to agree with Gordon's views. After a time, therefore, a portion of the land west of the skull hill was purchased. During excavations an ancient garden was found, and in it a tomb which had once been sealed by a rolling stone. Nearby excavations revealed other early Christian graves.

A company of English Protestants purchased the place, enclosed the area, and placed a guard at the tomb. Today, the place is well-known as Gordon's Calvary and the Garden Tomb. The tomb is without ornamentation or ostentation, and for that is the more impressive. No one worships the place, and we trust they never shall; but many notable Easter services have been conducted here. Moody and Talmage have preached here, and hundreds of thousands have reverently gathered here from the four quarters of the earth, and have, in a small measure, felt the force and simplicity of the angel's words: "Come and see the place where [the Lord] lay" (Mt 28:6).

Many excavations have been carried out, and efforts made to trace the course which the north wall must have taken during Christ's time. Herodian masonry underneath the Damascus gate indicates the presence of the wall in that area during Christ's time, but the exact course of the wall from Jaffa gate to Damascus gate must be traced before it can be decided if the site now occupied by the Church of the Holy Sepulcher was within or without the city wall. Until then, no final word may be given as to the exact site of Calvary.

4354–CANA of GALILEE, the village where Jesus performed his first miracle, is usually identified with Kefr Kenna, some four miles northeast of Nazareth. This is on the road to Capernaum and is the traditional site. It is blessed with vineyards, orchards of fig trees, and an abundance of water. Limited excavations have been carried out here, and, while no definitive evidence is forthcoming, the place agrees very well with all that John tells us about Cana.

Many modern scholars, however, prefer to identify Cana with Khirbet Kana, a ruin on top of a hill eight and a half miles north of Nazareth. No excavations have been made here, yet Josephus and certain medieval pilgrims describe this site as the "Cana of Galilee" as they knew it.

4355–CAPERNAUM was located on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee at a place called Tell Hum. It was the chief commercial and social center of this area during the ministry of Jesus. Here, on the great highway between Syria and Palestine, customs taxes were collected and a Roman garrison was stationed. Here Jesus came after leaving Nazareth, and Peter's home became his home. Here he called Matthew and here he taught and preached, and did "many great works."

Christ predicted Capernaum's downfall, and today its scattered heaps of black basalt building stones extend for a mile along the shore of the sea. Here and there, faint outlines of buildings appear above the surface. The more important of these are the ruins of an octagonal-shaped structure now shown as Peter's house (more probably a memorial building on the site of the home of the apostle Peter), and the remains of one of the finest and best preserved synagogues of Galilee.

All excavational work here has been centered on the synagogue, which was a two-story, gable-roofed structure 60 by 80 feet, oriented toward Jerusalem. On its east was an attractive porticoed porch. The synagogue itself was built of white limestone, and on the interior a row of columns on each side stabilized the building and made balconies possible on the second floor for women worshipers.

The decorations on the interior frieze, on the cornice, and on the lintels of the doors of this synagogue are of infinite variety. They include the likenesses of plants, animals, birds, and mythological creatures, as well as geometrical designs. There are the usual sacred symbols of the Jews, such as the seven-branched candlestick and the six-pointed star.

On the frieze is a relief which plainly represents the ark of the covenant which went before the people of Israel during their wanderings in the desert. On one of the white limestone pillars is an Aramaic inscription which reads "HLPW, the son of Zebidah, the son of Johanan, made this column. May blessing be his." "These names" says Dr. Glueck, "correspond roughly to the New Testament Alphaeus, Zebedee, and John, mentioned . . . in the list of Jesus' disciples and their families (Mk 3:17–18)."

Many believe this is to be the synagogue built by the centurion and visited by Jesus at Capernaum, but most archaeologists think that it was erected during the second or even the third century A.D., on the presumed site of the one of Christ's time. They base their conclusions on the architecture and especially on the ornamentation.

4356–CARCHEMISH, now known as Jerablus, was the east capital of the ancient Hittite empire, and the strategic military and commercial center of North Syria. It lay on the west bank of the Euphrates River, on one of the upper river's few fords, sixty-five miles northeast of the modern city of Aleppo.

Carchemish was a place of decisive battles. The Bible and general history refer to it as such, and archaeology clarifies the story—especially of the Battle of Carchemish. Assyria had lost its capital at Nineveh to the Babylonian coalition in 612 B.C., and at Haran in 610. The capital was then set up at Carchemish. Pharaoh Neco II was on his way to Carchemish to aid the Assyrians against the Babylonian coalition, when the good king Josiah lost his life in delaying him at the pass of Megiddo (2Ch 35:20). Delayed again at Riblah (2Ki 23:31), the Pharaoh finally approached Carchemish too late. Nebuchadnezzer had surprised the Assyrians and captured Carchemish; then turned on the Egyptians under Neco and utterly defeated them in hand-to-hand fighting. He pursued them to Hamoth so that, as the Assyrian story says, "not a man escaped to his own country." As a result of this Battle of Carchemish in 606, the Assyrian empire was finished, Egypt was reduced to a second-rate power, and Babylonia gained the ascendancy throughout the Middle East.

The site was excavated during 1912–14 by Sir Leonard Woolley and T. E. Lawrence (later to become Lawrence of Arabia) for the British Museum. They found substantial remains of a powerful city with forts, palaces, temples, marketplaces, and a great wall sculptured with a procession of warriors and the king and crown prince celebrating a great victory. Many objects were found, and numerous inscriptions in a script which baffled archaeologists and linguists until recently. The discoveries gave realism and clarification to biblical and other historical accounts.

4357–COLOSSE was located in the Lycas Valley, eleven miles east of Laodicea. Being on the east-west trade route from Ephesus to the Euphrates, it was both prominent and prosperous until the eighth century A.D., when a change in the road system gave Laodicea the advantage. The Turks destroyed Colosse in the twelfth century, and left it in ruins.

In 1835 William J. Hamilton identified and explored the ruins of the city and its citadel. He observed many marble columns, a ruined theater with many of its seats preserved, and the city cemetery with its rock-cut graves.

Archaeological discoveries in the city have been limited to a few inscriptions, some coins, and an ancient church. As limited as these are, they give added meaning to Paul's letter to the Colossians.

4358–CORINTH, a proud, wealthy, and wicked city of the ancient world, was located on the four-mile-wide strip of land which linked the southern Peloponnesus with the mainland of Greece. Being on the north-south highway, and having the two thriving seaports of Cenchrea on the east and Lechaeum on the west, it was literally "at the meeting of the ways," and easily became the greatest commercial center of Greece. Around it were fertile lands on which were grown olives, grapes, dates, and other fruits.

As the head of the Achaean League, it was destroyed in 146 B.C. by Mummius, the ruffian Roman leader, who sent shiploads of Corinth's statuary, paintings, and other art treasures to Rome.

In 46 B.C. Julius Caesar rebuilt the city, giving it wide streets, marketplaces, temples, theaters, statues, fountains, and the white and blue marble bema, or rostra, where orations were made and judgments rendered. Southward was the Acrocorinth, a hill that arose five hundred feet above the city. On this eminence was located the temple and statue of Aphrodite (Astarte), the goddess of love and fertility, who not only dominated much of the social and religious life of the city, but whose worship tended to foster and popularize immorality among both citizens and travelers.

Paul came to Corinth about A.D. 52 and spent a year and a half, supporting himself by tent making, while by his preaching and teaching he converted both Jews and Greeks, and gathered together the church to which he wrote two immortal epistles.

The city had almost continuous settlement until 1858, when a terrible earthquake destroyed it. The surviving inhabitants went four miles away and built new Corinth. The old city lay in ruins, and was gradually being buried by many feet of soil, until in 1896 the American School of Classical Studies at Athens took possession of the site and dug twenty trial trenches in various locations. In trench number three they uncovered a paved street, over 46 feet wide, with sidewalks and gutters, but with no marks of wheels, which meant that it was for foot travel only. The street led north and south, therefore the diggers followed through, hoping to find the agora, or marketplace.

In the various campaigns which followed, excavators made numerous small finds such as sculptured fragments, various vase fragments, reliefs, certain terra cottas, an angel, a marble lintel of a door on which was inscribed "Synagogue of the Hebrews," and a limestone block on which was a first century inscription saying that Erastus, the Commissioner or Administrator of the city, had paved this plaza (some sixty feet square) at his own expense. Paul writes of one Erastus who was the director of public works, or treasurer, of the city (Ro 16:23), and it could well be that the inscription speaks of this same man, who later became Christian and a valuable helper of Paul.

The larger finds consisted of a Greek theater, the temple of Apollo, the ancient court and fountain of Peirene, the agora or marketplace, and the bema, or judgment platform, where, in all probability, Paul was brought before Gallio and acquitted. Also the pavement below where the Greeks "turned on Sosthenes, the synagogue ruler and beat him in front of the court. But Gallio showed no concern whatever" (Ac 18:17).

4359–DAMASCUS, "The Pearl of the East," is said to be the oldest city in the world with a continuous history—reaching from the time of Uz (Noah's grandson) to the present day. Always, during these long centuries, Damascus has been "the head of Syria" and the metropolis of the desert peoples. Its permanency is attributed to the fact that it is located within a 60,000 acre plain (2260 feet above sea level), which is one of the most fertile oases of the world. The city and surrounding plain owe their life and prosperity to the well-known Abana and Pharpar rivers of biblical fame (2Ki 5:12). The Abana, now known as the Barada, spreads fan-like into seven quiet branches, which in turn subdivide into many streams which distribute water to the homes, gardens, orchards, and vineyards of some 400,000 people, then sink into the desert sands some eighteen miles eastward. The Pharpar, now called the Awaj, rises from the foothills of Mount Hermon and flows some seven miles south of Damascus, where it waters the surrounding orchard country.

Ruined remnants of fairly ancient walls and gates remain—some of which date back to Roman times. At two different places, a bricked-up window is pointed out as the one through which Paul "was lowered in a basket" (2Co 11:33). Yet these only illustrate the story, for the masonry immediately around both of the windows hardly dates back to Roman times.

The street called Straight begins at the eastern gate and runs westward into the heart of the city. The house of Ananias, as seen today, is a low cave-like chapel, sixteen to twenty feet below the street level. This possibly could be the correct location of the house, but Straight Street was then on a lower level, as a discovered street remnant shows. The present street is no longer the broad boulevard—a mile long and nearly a hundred feet wide—"down which Roman chariots rattled." Yet it is fairly straight, and at its western end has roofed-over bazaars which present a brilliant changing pattern of animated trade—as truly Oriental as will be found in any part of the world.

The Great Mosque, which ranks next in sanctity to the Mosques of Mecca, Medina, and Jerusalem, is the oldest and most venerated building in Damascus. It represents three great epochs in history, and the three religions which successively possessed it: paganism, Christianity, and Islam. The massive foundations and exterior colonnades are of a Greek or Roman temple. Some think it highly probable that this was the site of the temple of Rimmon, or Hadad, where Naaman deposited "as much earth as a pair of mules can carry" and erected his own altar (2Ki 5:17–18). Later, Ahaz saw the altar in this temple and had it reproduced in the temple at Jerusalem (2Ki 16:10–13). Under the Romans the temple was dedicated to Jupiter. After Constantine embraced Christianity in the fourth century, the temple was reconstructed into an immense church which was dedicated to John the Baptist by Theodosius. After the Muslims captured Damascus in A.D. 634, the building was remodeled into a magnificent mosque. Three fires have damaged the building, but each time it has been restored.

In its present state the Great Mosque consists of a quadrangle structure 480 by 324 feet, surrounded by fine masonry walls and surmounted by a splendid dome, three lofty towers, and a multitude of graceful minarets. One of these is called "the Minaret of Jesus," for, says Muslim tradition, "on the summit of this Minaret Jesus will appear on the great Judgment day."

On the south side of the mosque, on the upper beam of a little-used, but magnificent doorway, is an inscription in Greek which reads:

Thy Kingdom, O Christ, is an everlasting Kingdom.

4360–DAN, now known as Tel el-Qadi (Mound of the judge), was long considered the northern frontier of the land of Israel—"from Dan to Beersheba." And it was the city in which Jeroboam set up the golden calf.

It is now a quadrangular mound which rises some thirty to eighty feet above the plain, and is some fifteen hundred feet long and seven hundred feet wide. Minor ruins, three large trees, considerable smaller growth, many gardens, and the tomb of a Muslim saint occupy the mound. The largest spring in Bible lands, if not in the world, rises from the west end of the mound, and is one of the main sources of the Jordan River.

Only surface explorations have been carried out here, yet they show the place to have been occupied from near 2600 B.C. to about 600 B.C. Sacred and secular history meet here in strange and thrilling events, and the mound is so promising that it easily becomes one of the most challenging sites for excavation in all Bible lands.

4361–DEAD SEA SCROLLS is the name given to a collection of ancient Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek manuscripts (and fragments of manuscripts), found in a number of caves in the barren foothills of the Judean wilderness, west of the Dead Sea. These documents represent the most important and most sensational archaeological discovery of our age. More than one-third of these are books of the Old Testament, which are older by at least 1000 years than the hitherto earliest known Old Testament manuscripts. Thousands of learned articles and scores of books have been written about them, yet many of them have not yet been studied and translated.

The discovery of the scrolls began in the spring of 1947 when an Arab shepherd boy missed one of his goats. While searching for it in one of the steep valleys, he threw a stone into a hillside cave and heard what sounded to him like the breaking of pottery. Summoning his assistant, the two entered the cave and found some pottery jars 25 to 29 inches high and about 10 inches wide. In these, they found objects which looked much like miniature mummies, but were actually leather scrolls wrapped in squares of linen cloth, and covered over with a pitch-like substance possibly derived from the Dead Sea. With a vague idea that they had discovered "antikas" which might bring them money, they divided the scrolls and set off for Bethlehem where they located an antique dealer and offered him the scrolls for twenty pounds. He refused them.

Afterward they were directed to Jerusalem where, after bargaining for weeks, they sold four of the scrolls to Archbishop Athanasius Samuel of St. Mark's Syrian Orthodox Monastery, and three to E. L. Sukenik, professor of Archaeology at the Hebrew University, Jerusalem.

Archbishop Samuel showed his scrolls to several authorities who were uncertain about their content and value. Finally they were taken to Dr. John C. Trever, acting director of the American Schools of Oriental Research (Jerusalem), who photographed and studied some of them, then sent copies to Dr. W. F. Albright of Johns Hopkins University. This well-known authority tentatively dated them to be "about 100 B.C.," and declared them "an amazing discovery."

The Arab shepherds revealed the cave where the scrolls had been found, but war between the Arabs and Jews made scientific investigation impossible until February of 1949, when Dr. Laukester Harding of the Jordan Department of Antiquities, and Pere R. de Vaux of the Dominican Bible School of Jerusalem carefully excavated its floor level. Within three weeks they found some 800 scroll fragments belonging to about seventy-five different leather scrolls, a few fragments of papyrus scrolls, portions of linen in which scrolls had been wrapped, Roman lamps, and portions of jars and potsherds from about fifty different jars. Apparently some 200 scrolls had been hidden away in the cave. Origen, an Alexandrian church father who lived during the third century, is said to have used certain manuscripts which he found "in a jar near Jericho." Also, Timotheus, Patriarch of Baghdad, wrote a letter to Sergius, Archbishop of Elam, about A.D. 800, saying that a certain person from Jerusalem told him of an Arab hunter's dog that went into a cave entrance near Jericho. When the animal did not return for some time, his master went in after him, and found himself in "a little house in the rock" in which were many manuscripts. He reported the find to some Jewish scholars in Jerusalem who came down to the ave and removed many of the scrolls, which they said were books of the Old Testament and other Hebrew works.

While excavating the cave, Harding and de Vaux noticed, on a nearby whitish-terrace, a ruin which the Arabs called Khirbet Qumran. Surmising a connection between the scrolls and the ruin, they returned in 1951 and began to excavate. During the five campaigns which followed, they uncovered the ruins of an elaborate central building complex, the main floor of which comprised more than 15,000 square feet. It was a community center or monastery with a massive tower for defense, an extensive culinary department, a great assembly and dining hall, pantry, laundry, storerooms, spacious courts, and an impressive water system which brought water, from a waterfall in the western hills, through some stone carved channels into many large cisterns. Nearby were stables for horses, a community pottery workshop, extensive pools for bathing and baptizing, and three cemeteries, one of which contained more than a thousand graves.

What impressed the excavators most was a scriptorium, or writing room, 43 by 13 feet. In this were the ruins of a narrow masonry table sixteen and a half feet long, and two shorter tables, together with a long bench attached to the wall. In the fallen debris of this room were three inkwells, two of terra cotta and the other of bronze. One of the inkwells actually contained the residue of dried ink, which had been made from carbon (lampblack) and gum. Nearby was a double basin which was probably used for ritual washing before and after working with the sacred manuscripts.

The many discoveries at Qumran (including more than 700 coins which provided almost continuous sequence for more than 200 years) made possible the reconstruction of the way of life of this semi-monastic Jewish community which lived there from about 110 B.C. to A.D. 68. The scriptorium, the pottery plant, a jar identical with those found in one cave, the many scroll fragments, the style of writing, and the way of life not only linked these people with the scrolls found in the nearby cave, but identified them as "the people of the scrolls," or the Essenes. These were the people whom Josephus, Philo, and Pliny the Elder had described as having split off from the orthodox Judaism of Jerusalem, and "removed themselves from the evils and wrongs that surge up in cities" to live in agricultural colonies in this very section of the country, and as far south as En Gedi. According to their writings they considered themselves to be called upon "to go into the desert to prepare there the way of the Lord, according as it is written, 'in the desert prepare ye the way, make straight in the wilderness a highway for our God.'" Their manner was quiet, and their lives extremely simple and chaste. They prayed each morning with the rising of the sun, worked until the fifth hour, then bathed in cold water, clothed themselves in white garments, and ate a communal meal preceded and followed by grace. Then, changing into their working clothes, they labored or plied their arts (including the writing of manuscripts) until evening, and returned to supper in the same manner. During the evening hours they devoted themselves to prayer and the study of their laws—principally the books of the Old Testament and the Apocrypha.

Life in the Qumran community was interrupted by an earthquake which Josephus said shook Judea in the spring of 31 B.C. After that calamity, the site remained uninhabited for almost thirty years. Then, about 4 B.C., the community returned. The buildings were repaired, the tower was reinforced, shaken walls were buttressed, new rooms were erected, and industrial kilns were constructed. Thereafter, the secluded life of prayer and study at Qumran was resumed on a larger scale.

Their faith, and their purpose and mission in life must have received a great uplift, and even a small measure of confirmation, from the preaching of John the Baptist, and the coming of Jesus Christ. They had taught repentance as a necessary prerequisite to baptism—as did John. Their Manual of Discipline had said, "They shall not depart from any counsel of the law . . . until there shall come a prophet and the Messiah of Aaron and Israel." Their constant teaching was that the "age of consummation" was at hand—that God was about to act, and the Messiah was about to appear, "bringing a sword." Yet we do not know how many Essenes may have gone with John, and subsequently with Jesus. Neither John nor Jesus, of course, carried a sword. The Essenes considered salvation to be only for members of their own sect, who were God's elect, and they were governed "rank upon rank," culminating in a genuine hierarchy. Therefore the community, as such, did not become Christian. It continued its disciplined routine, and came to an abrupt end in A.D. 68, when Qumran was demolished and burnt by contingents of the Roman Tenth Legion who came into Palestine to lay siege to Jerusalem and crush the first Jewish revolt. On the eve of this onslaught the members of the community fled, leaving the most of their precious manuscripts hidden in caves around the settlement. A squad of Roman soldiers encamped on the leveled debris, divided the larger ruined rooms into living quarters, and built a rough aqueduct in the place of the elaborate water system. After a time the Roman soldiers left, and the place remained empty until the second Jewish revolt, in A.D. 132–135, when the ruins were temporarily used as a stronghold or a hiding place. Later the desert took possession of the area until the Arab shepherd found the first scrolls and archaeologists rescued the literary treasures.

Thirty-seven caves in the Qumran were examined during 1952 and found to contain pottery; but eleven of them also contained manuscript material. Cave II yielded biblical and apocryphal fragments, among them a portion of the book of Jubilees, and an Aramaic document describing the New Jerusalem. In cave III were 274 portions of manuscripts, and two copper scrolls which originally were made up of three strips of copper, riveted together and measuring nearly eight feet in length. But in cave IV were found over four hundred manuscripts, and about a hundred thousand fragments, varying in size from a thumbnail to a sheet of legal-size paper.

Altogether, the remains of more than 500 different manuscripts, or large portions of manuscripts, and multiplied thousands of fragments were found in these eleven caves. About one-third of the manuscripts are books of the Old Testament, the remainder are commentaries on some Old Testament books, Apocryphal and wisdom books, hymns and psalms, liturgies, theological works, and works relating to the eople who lived at Qumrân and wrote the scrolls. here are manuscripts or fragments of every book of he Old Testament, except Esther. The most popular ooks, to judge from the number of copies found of ach, were Isaiah, the Psalms, Deuteronomy, and enesis. These were written on rolls of leather which ad been carefully ruled to guide the scribes. A few ere written on papyrus and one on copper.

The most important and best-preserved of all these anuscripts were found by the young shepherds in ave I. The four which were purchased by St. Mark's onastery were: (1) The scroll of Isaiah, known as St. Mark's Isaiah scroll, written on seventeen sheets of archment sewn together end-to-end, making a scroll 4 feet long and 10.2 inches high. It is the largest and est preserved of all the scrolls, and was written in an arly form of the square letter, which according to Dr. lbright, places it in the second century B.C. This akes it the oldest known complete Hebrew manuript of any biblical book, and it agrees in almost very respect with our traditional Hebrew texts, as sed in the translation to the King James Version. (2) he Manual of Discipline, written on five sheets of ream-colored leather, sewn together, and forming a croll six feet in length and 9½ inches in height. It not nly contains detailed regulations relating to all rocedures and ceremonies of the sect, but describes t some length the "Two Ways," of good and evil, of ight and darkness, which God sets before man; (3) he Habakkuk Commentary, written on two sheets f brown leather, sewn together, making a scroll five eet long and less than six inches high. It is a Hebrew ext of the Book of Habakkuk, the first two chapters f which are supplied with a commentary. It speaks of he "spirit of truth and the spirit of error," and in ommenting on Habakkuk 1:13, it says, "into the and of his elect God will deliver the judgment of all he nations"; (4) The Genesis Apocryphon, a leather croll about nine feet long and twelve inches high. It s an Aramaic version of several chapters of the Book f Genesis, with additional stories about Lamech, Enoch, Noah, and Abraham.

The three scrolls from cave I which were acquired y professor E. L. Sukenik for the Hebrew University, onsist of: (1) A second scroll of the book of Isaiah, of vhich the first thirty-seven chapters are badly disinegrated, but chapters 38 through 66 are in fair condiion; (2) "The War of the Sons of Light with the Sons of Darkness," which contains nineteen colmns of writing and is nine and a half feet long and ix inches high. It is a military manual giving direcions for the conduct of a holy war between the "Chilren of Light" and the foes foreseen as attempting to ppress the people of God in the last age; (3) The Psalms of Thanksgiving, which were hymns composed nd collected by the Essene community—their hymn ook.

The Israeli Government, through General Yigael Yadin, purchased the four St. Mark's Monastery crolls from Archbishop Samuel for $250,000, and onstructed a special room in the Hebrew University t Jerusalem which they call "The Shrine of the Book." This now holds the original seven scrolls from ave I, which the Israeli Government regards as "the reatest historical treasures of the world." The other crolls, with some of the original jars from cave I, the pottery from the Qumran excavation, and multiplied thousands of scroll fragments, are kept in the Palestine Archaeological Museum at Jerusalem. Here an international group of scholars clean and restore the pottery, and piece together and translate manuscripts and fragments, as well as other objects found during the excavations in the caves and at Qumran.

Discoveries in the Wadi Murabba'at area:

In 1952 the Arabs of the Ta'amireh tribe reported productive caves in the Wadi Murabba'at area eleven miles south of Qumran, and two miles west of the Dead Sea. The excavations that followed (Jan. 21 through March 3, 1952) revealed that these four caves, carved 150 feet deep in the north face of the cliffside, had been used by refugees and guerrilla bands long before David and his men camped in these, or similar, caverns while fleeing from Saul 3000 years ago. In two of the caves the excavators found considerable written material, among which was a parchment tablet containing a list of names and numbers written in the Hebrew script of the seventh or eighth century B.C.; fragments of four leather scrolls—one of Genesis, two of Exodus, and one of Deuteronomy; a "magnificent scroll" of the minor prophets; and some letters and contracts in Hebrew, belonging to the period when the caves were occupied by an outpost of the army of Bar Kochba, leader of the second Jewish revolt against Rome in A.D. 132–35. Two of these letters were signed by Bar Kochba, "the prince of Israel," and others were written to him.

In 1959 Dr. Yigael Yadin organized an archaeological expedition which rode in helicopters and searched the Israeli territory farther south along the west shores of the Dead Sea. They located and explored other caves used by contingents of Bar Kochba's army. Coins and written documents were found including one scroll fragment inscribed with Exodus 13:1–16, and another containing parts of seven lines of the 15th Psalm.

Discoveries at Khirbet Mird:

In 1950 members of the Ta'amireh Bedouin tribe found manuscript material of great interest at Khirbet Mird, a ruined Christian Monastery on top of a conical peak 2½ miles northeast of Mar Saba. A Belgian expedition made further searches there in February and March of 1953. Altogether, these discoveries include papyrus fragments of private letters in Arabic, a fragment of the Andromache of Euripides, and a number of biblical texts in Greek and Syriac. The Greek texts include fragments from Mark, John, and Acts. Those in Syriac include fragments of Joshua, Luke, John, Acts, and Colossians. They all date from the 7th and 8th centuries of our Christian Era.

4362–DERBE, where Paul "preached the gospel" and gained many converts, among whom was Gaius (Ac 14:6, 20; 20:4), has not been located with certainty. However, it is now more generally identified with a fair-sized mound some fifteen miles southeast of Lystra, where a dedicatory inscription by the council and people of Derbe was found honoring Antonius Pius in A.D. 157. Roman milestones have been found in this area, and surface potsherds and coins indicate that it was inhabited during the Hellenistic and Roman periods.

4363–DIBON, once the capital of Mesha, king of Moab, is located on the highway three miles north of the Arnon River. Its extensive ruins cover the slopes of two adjacent mounds, the south mound is occupied by a citadel and the present village and, fortunately for archaeological purposes, the north mound is entirely unoccupied. Both are surrounded by walls which appear ancient.

Dibon has been conspicuous in archaeology since 1868, when a friendly Arab sheik directed Rev. F. A. Cline's attention to an oval-top stone protruding from the dusty soil. On its face was an inscription in Hebrew characters, which led Dr. Cline to believe it was of historical value. After copying a few words from the monument he sent them to the Berlin Museum, and offered the sheik $400 for the stone, but the sheik countered with long delays.

In the meantime, the news reached M. Clermont-Ganneau, a distinguished Orientalist of the French Consulate at Jerusalem. He arranged for a squeeze, or paper-pulp impression, to be made of the inscribed stone and made a larger cash offer. Realizing the possible value of the stele, the Arabs heated the stone to a high temperature, and poured cold water over it breaking it into numerous pieces. Then, in keeping with Arab customs, they distributed these fragments among the chief families of their tribe.

Clermont-Ganneau, through his Arab assistant, purchased almost every piece of the stone from the various families. Then, with the help of the squeeze as a guide, he reassembled the monument piece by piece, and placed it in the Louvre in Paris. The British Museum, and other such organizations were permitted to make replicas.

The Moabite Stone is made of black basalt, and resembles a nineteenth-century gravestone. It is three feet ten inches high, two feet wide and fourteen inches thick. On its face are thirty-four lines of alphabetical script that, in content, resemble and supplement the account of Mesha's revolt as given in the third chapter of 2 Kings. The stone was erected by Mesha about 850 B.C. at Dibon. The inscription reads in part:

> I am Mesha, son of Chemosh . . . King of Moab, the Dibonite . . . My father ruled over Moab thirty years, and I ruled after my father. And I made this high place to Chemosh because of the deliverance of Mesha, because he saved me from all the Kings and caused me to see my desire upon all who hated me. Omri, King of Israel, oppressed Moab many days because Chemosh was angry with his land. And his son succeeded him, and he also said I will oppress Moab. In my days he spake according to this word, but I saw my desire upon him and upon his house, and Israel perished with an everlasting loss. Now Omri had possessed all the land of Medeba and dwelt in it in his days and half the days of his son . . . but Chemosh restored it in my day. . . .

Important excavations were begun here by the American Schools of Oriental Research in 1950, and have been continued for many seasons. Thus far, five city walls have been uncovered, one large square tower, many buildings, considerable carbonized wheat, and a small fragment of an inscribed stele which is apparently somewhat like the Moabite Stone.

One of the walls is built of large, well-squared blocks, and is from 7.5 to 10.8 feet thick. It is regarded as belonging to the city of Mesha's time. There is pottery from Early Bronze (3000 to 2000 B.C.) to Arab times, but very little pottery which dates from the Middle and Late Bronze Age. Apparently the place was scarcely more than a name when Israel passed near on the way to Canaan.

Excavations conducted here from the spring of 1953 by Dr. Joseph P. Free, of Wheaton College, have revealed eleven levels of successive occupations from Early Bronze (3000–2000 B.C.) to the Middle Iron Age 1000–586 B.C.). Gates, walls, and other objects of interest were found in all these levels, but special attention was given to the Middle Bronze level (2000–1500 B.C.), the city of Joseph's day, and the Middle Iron level (900–586 B.C.), the city of Elisha's day. About the former was a heavy wall, at one corner of which was the skeleton of a child buried in a jar made of Middle Bronze pottery. This, the excavators thought, could well have been a foundation sacrifice similar to the one made by Hiel under the city wall which he constructed when he rebuilt Jericho (1Ki 16:34). Areas of the town of Elisha's day, which have been cleared, show narrow streets and small houses with storage pits and bread ovens. In this level fifteen pieces of silver were found stored in a pottery box—probably someone's savings.

4365–EBLA (TELL MARDIKH). In northwestern Syria, midway between Egypt and Assyria, lies a series of impressive mounds which for long decades have been rather carelessly pointed out as mounds that the Hyksos heaped up for city sites during their expansion southward in the 16th and 15th centuries B.C. Others said they were Arab citadels from the 7th and 8th centuries A.D. The most impressive of these mounds is known as Tell Mardikh, which lies some 30 miles south of modern Aleppo, rises 50 feet above the plain, and covers an area of 140 acres.

In the spring of 1964 Dr. Paolo Matthiae, professor of Near East archaeology at the University of Rome, obtained a permit to excavate Tell Mardikh with his wife, Gabriela, and an efficient archaeological team of assistants. They sank shafts 4 by 4 meters square with one meter balks—much as had Kathleen Kenyon at Jericho and Jerusalem. Each square had a pick man, a shovel man, and a wheelbarrow man. Overseers were the director, the assistant director, the architect, and a field man.

During the first few years they carried out soundings in various parts of the mound. Uncovered were city gates similar to those of Solomon at Gezer and Megiddo, and two small, chapel-type temples like the famous temples of Shechem, Megiddo and Hazor—all dating between 2000 and 1600 years before Christ, the period called Middle Bronze I and II.

In 1968 the archaeologists discovered a royal statue which bore a dedicatory inscription to one Ibbit-Lim, "Lord of the City of Ebla, to the goddess Ishtar." It soon became clear that they were excavating the remarkable metropolis of the kingdom of Ebla, an immense Semitic empire whose center was set on the plains of modern Syria. From occasional references to it in ancient inscriptions—from Ur, Lagash, Nippur, Mari, and Egypt—archaeologists had long suspected the presence of such a civilization in North Syria. Many places and events of history would now fall into proper place.

In 1973 work was begun in Early Bronze Age Ebla, which dated between 2400 and 2225 B.C. Excavators found a tablet indicating the city at this period was divided into two sections—an acropolis (high city) and a lower city. The acropolis contained four building complexes: the palace of the city, the palace of the king, the palace of the servants, and the stables. The lower city was divided into four quarters, each of which had a gate: the gate of the City, the gate of Dagan, the gate of Rasap, and the gate of Sipis.

In 1975, while excavating in the palace of the city, the chief administrative center, they came upon the ruins of a large three-story royal palace building which had flourished four generations before the birth of Abraham. It contained a spacious audience-court (100 to 170 feet, with a portico of carved wooden and stone columns adorned with gold and lapis lazuli), a tower room, and two smaller rooms at the entrance of the courtyard. In the tower room were 42 cuneiform business tablets and a small school exercise tablet.

During the following year they worked in the two rooms at the entrance of the courtyard. In the first room were about 1,000 business and administrative tablets, which were found "rather spread out and disordered." The second room was a large library—the authentic royal archives—containing 15,000 tablets that had been regularly arranged on wooden shelves. When the palace was destroyed by fire, however, the flames devoured the wooden shelves, and the tablets settled on top of one another. Mrs. Matthiae reported, "It was an astonishing sight—I could not believe we had discovered such an immense, beautiful, important treasure. Even my husband, who rarely loses his sang-froid, found it an emotional experience. He suddenly felt like an archaeologist of the last century must have, like Botta discovering the archives of Ashurbanipal, or Hilprecht the tablets of Nippur."

In a nearby room were another 1,000 tablets, along with writing implements. This they took to be the scribe's room. In yet another room were 800 tablets, along with beautifully carved wooden figures, seal impressions, and plaques of wood, gold, and lapis lazuli. One sheet of gold was found.

Realizing the gigantic task that lay before him, Professor Matthiae called in Professor Giovanni Pettinato, chief Assyriologist and Sumerologist at the University of Rome. Professor Pettinato found that the major portion of the tablets were written in Sumerian wedge-shaped cuneiform script—the world's oldest written language. The tablets themselves, however, dated from the middle of the third millennium B.C. One large tablet was a dictionary, giving the Sumerian equivalents of some 3,000 Eblaite words. With the help of this lexicon, Pettinato was able to dicipher many other Eblaite tablets. About 20 percent of the tablets were written in a northwestern Semitic language which Pettinato called Paleo-Canaanite, or Old Canaanite, although the script used was also cuneiform Sumerian. This, he says, was the language spoken at Ebla and is closer in vocabulary and grammar to biblical Hebrew than any other Canaanite dialect, including Ugaritic.

Contents and Significance of the Tablets

The tablets so far unearthed number nearly 20,000, the majority of them large. Those which have been translated—only a fraction of the total—tell of the economy, administration, education, religion, trade, and conquests of a great commercial empire of which all memory had been lost in the historical traditions of the Near East.

From the beginning of the work, eighteen seasons were spent on the site through November 1982. Excavators suggest that it may take up to two hundred years to explore the rest of Tell-Mardikh and the surrounding sites, and to digest all the data. Yet what they have found already throws a flood of light on so many aspects of research in the field of ancient history and biblical archaeology that in many quarters the Ebla Tablets are now considered more significant for elucidating ancient history and the early backgrounds of the Bible than any other archaeological discovery ever unearthed.

With its empire, the city of Ebla, whose population is given in one tablet as 260,000, constituted one of the greatest powers in the Ancient Near East during the third millennium B.C. Its commercial and political influence extended far beyond its own borders—from Sinai in the southwest to Mesopotamia in the east. As a major trade center, it controlled east-west commercial routes for grain and livestock from the west, cedar timber from Lebanon, and metals and textiles from Anatolia—the home of the Hittites—along with trade in silver and gold and the several other commodities from Cyprus and other Mediterranean countries.

Ebla was a flourishing Semitic civilization. Her "arts prospered and her craftsmen were renowned for the quality of their metal work, textiles, ceramics and woodworkings. They made cloth of scarlet and gold, weapons of bronze, and furniture of wood. Their educational system was far advanced. They kept records in their own language on tablets of clay which they stored in archives deep in the cellars of the royal palace." All this existed more than a thousand years before the brilliant civilization of David and Solomon.

Ebla had a king and a queen. Like Israel, it anointed its kings and had prophets. The king was in charge of state affairs, and his queen was held in equally high regard. The crown prince helped with domestic and administrative affairs, while the second son aided his father in foreign affairs. The tablets are quite explicit about the structure of the state and about the royal dynasty. Six kings are listed, among which is Ebrum. The resemblance of his name to Eber, the father of the Semites, according to Genesis 10:21, is astonishing, since it is virtually the same name as the biblical Eber, a direct descendant of Noah and the great-great-great-great grandfather of Abraham.

Other names found in these texts and later used by biblical characters are: Abraham, Esau, Saul, Michael, David, Israel, and Ish-ma-il (Ishmael).

The gods worshiped at Ebla numbered around 5000 and included El and Ya. El is a shortened form of Elohim, used later by the Hebrews and in the Ugaritic tablets. Ya is a shortened form of what some think might be Yahweh, or Jehovah, and was used for their supreme god and for gods in general. Other principal gods were Dagan, Rasap (Resef), Sipis (Samis), Astar, Adad, Kamis, and Malik.

In recording the trade and treaty dealings of Ebla the tablets give the names of hundreds of individuals, place-names, among which are Urusalim (Jerusalem), Geza, Lachish, Joppa, Ashtaroth, Dor, and Megiddo, as well as cities east of the Jordan. One tablet (No. 1860) mentions the cities of the plain—in the same order as in Genesis 14:2 (Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboiim, and Bela, or Zoar)—as being cities with which Ebla carried on extensive trade. This was the first time these place-names had been found outside the Bible. Dr. David Noel Freedmen had pointed out that this record precedes the great catastrophe involving Lot which many modern scholars have regarded as entirely fictional.

The texts contain Canaanite stories of the Creation and of the Flood and a Canaanite code of law. The Creation tablet—a beautifully inscribed ten-line poem—is closer to the Genesis account than anything else discovered. In essence a part of it reads:

> There was a time when there was no heaven, and Lugal ('the great one') formed it out of nothing; there was no earth, and Lugal made it; there was no light, and he made it.

The Flood story is given in five columns on a small ablet. Only two columns had been deciphered when his present article was written.

Ebla is only partially excavated, yet a part of the royal palace, two temples, a fortress, three city gates and tablets which now number nearly 20,000 have been exposed. These tablets are part of the official archives of a great empire. At one time Ebla even ruled over and collected tribute from Mari. Reverses came, however, and ancient Ebla was destroyed. Apparently the destruction was incomplete, for Ebla enjoyed something of a second life during the early part of the second millennium B.C. Of this period the excavators have found only architectual remains and the royal statue of King Ibbit-Lim.

Around 1800 B.C. Ebla became a vassal state of the great kingdom of Aleppo, spoken of in the Mari letters as Yamhad. Around 1600 B.C. Naram-Sin, king of Akkad, defeated Ebla in battle and destroyed the city. From this disaster the city of Ebla never recovered, and it remained buried under its own debris until modern excavators began to resurrect it.

Ebla's contribution to archaeology and historical geography renders the biblical scene far richer and more real—even though it preceded early Israel by four hundred to a thousand years. It gives the biblical student a fuller understanding of the life and times of the eastern Mediterranean world of the 3rd millennium B.C., and of the civilization that was part of Abraham's heritage.

4366–ECBATANA, now called Hamadan, was the early capital of the Medes and, later the summer capital of Cyrus the Great.

In Ezra 6:2 we are told that the scroll on which Cyrus wrote his decree for the release of the Jews and the rebuilding of Jerusalem could not be found "in the archives . . . in Babylon." It was later discovered in the palace archives at Ecbatana, where, supposedly, it was placed by Darius the Mede (Gobryas), who, as Cyrus' elderly military general, had been made king of Babylon for a time. On retiring to his own city of Ecbatana, he had carried the decree with him and placed it there in the palace archives. Ancient writers say the city had seven walls, each of a different color, and that the inner wall was covered with gold. Semiramis, an Assyrian queen, built a beautiful palace here in 800 B.C., and in 546 B.C. Cyrus conquered Lydia and brought its king, Croesus, and his wealth to Ecbatana.

The modern city of Hamadan is built over the mound of ancient Ecbatana, making it all but impossible to excavate the ruins of this fabulously wealthy capital city. But incidental discoveries of silver and gold objects have been made, and an ox-head with shaft holes and ornamented with a lion in relief has been uncovered. It is now in the British Museum, and is dated about 1200 B.C. Also found was a trilingual inscription in Persian, Susian, and Babylonian, languages of Artaxerxes Mnemon, king of Persia from 405 to 362 B.C. In the British Museum is a portion of a clay tablet inscribed with the annals of Nabonidus, which records the capture of the city by Cyrus.

Some eighty miles west of Ecbatana, poised high on a mountainside, is the famed Behistun Inscription—the greatest outdoor sign ever erected. It pictures Darius the Great in the act of receiving homage from ten conquered kings. The complete story of the occasion is told in a trilingual inscription accompanying the picture.

4367–EDREI, the place where Og, king of Bashan, was defeated by the Israelites, now goes under the modern name of Der'ah and is an important junction some sixty miles south of Damascus.

The ancient mound, which lies near the modern city, has many ruins, inscriptions, and surface potsherds which testify to its continuous occupation from the third millennium B.C. down to modern times. Its chief fame, however, rests in its unique subterranean city which lies under the present mound. This hidden city is reached by a long court and a narrow passageway which leads down to a strong stone door entering the city proper. Here, supported by ten-foot-high columns, and ventilated by air shafts, are rooms, winding passageways, a broad street with dwellings and shops on both sides, several cross streets, a marketplace, and a splendid assembly hall with a ceiling formed by a single slab of jasper.

This remarkable underground city is thought to have been built about the time of Herod the Great, or possibly earlier, as a place of refuge in time of trouble or war. Here the people were prepared to stand a siege on the part of an enemy "as long as their magazines were filled with food, their stables with cattle, and the cisterns with water." This subterranean city has been occupied much of the time since it was constructed.

4368–ELAM was a country made up of the Zagros Mountain range and other extremely desirable territory east of Babylonia. Shushan was its capital.

Cyrus the Great merged Media, Elam, and Anshan ("Persian Land") into one empire which came to be known as Persia. Elam figures prominently in Assyrian and Babylonian texts because it was adjacent to them, and the country itself has yielded many archaeological discoveries which have confirmed certain aspects of biblical history. Elamites were present at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came (Ac 2:9).

4369–EMMAUS. On the day after the crucifixion, two of the disciples were on their way from Jerusalem to Emmaus when the risen Christ joined them on their journey and talked with them "about everything that had happened," without their recognizing him (Lk 24:13–33).

Four different modern towns have been proposed as being this Emmaus. The one place, however, that accurately meets the descriptions given by Luke and by Josephus is a village now called El-Qubeibeh. It is situated on a prominent vantage point seven miles northwest of Jerusalem on the more northerly Roman road passing westward by Nebi Samwill. From it one can see several miles in every direction—especially westward where the Plain of Sharon and the Mediterranean Sea loom large on the horizon.

Near here, in 1099, Crusaders found an old Roman fort named Castellum Emmaus. When the Franciscans erected the church of Saint Cleophas here in 1878, they unearthed the remains of a church judged to be crusader.

There stands here today a beautiful German church and hospice, whose garden is planted with pine, oak, and arbutus.

4370—EN GEDI ('ain Jidy, "the fountain of the kid") is a celebrated place some 400 feet above the west shore of the Dead Sea, where immense fountains of warm water flow out from beneath limestone cliffs and cascade on down to a small but fertile plain, half a mile broad and a mile long.

Here, in ancient times, grew vineyards, palms, balsam, camphor, gum arabic, sugar cane, melons, and many other edible fruits and plants that made it one of the world's famed garden spots.

The village, or town, of En Gedi probably lay below the spring on the edge of the plain, as the scattered ruins of masonry indicate. Above and around the fountains are towering cliffs and a wild area called the wilderness of En Gedi, which no one could overrate as a place of refuge. There are numerous caves in the area, some of which sheltered David and his followers when they dwelt here for some time in the "strongholds of En Gedi" (1Sa 23:29).

King Saul, with three thousand men, sought David on these "Crags of the Wild Goats." It was in one of these caves that David, unnoticed, cut off a corner of Saul's robe (1Sa 24:22).

Dr. Yigael Yadin excavated many of these caves and found pottery and other remains of ancient occupation.

4371–EN ROGEL (now called Job's Well) was a familiar landmark which separated the territory of Benjamin from Judah (Jos 18:16–17). Its location was at the lower end of the Kidron Valley—just at the point where the Hinnom and Kidron valleys meet. It is near Jerusalem, yet fairly well out of sight of the city, therefore Jonathan and Ahimaaz, when they awaited intelligence to inform David of Absalom's movements, stayed at En Rogel "for they could not risk being seen entering the city" (2Sa 17:17). Also, when Adonijah said, "I will be king" (1Ki 1:5), he met here for the futile coronation ceremonies, while Solomon and the loyal forces, rather belatedly, met farther up the Kidron Valley at the fountain of Gihon (now called Virgin's Fountain), and hurriedly completed the crowning ceremonies; whereupon the people shouted, "Long live King Solomon!" (1Ki 1:9–39).

The well En Rogel is now about 125 feet deep, and overflows during periods of heavy winter rains, after which it may run for two or three days. It then becomes a great attraction to many people of Jerusalem, who flock in crowds to visit "flowing Kidron."

4372–EPHESUS, the commercial, political, and religious center of western Asia, was located near where the Cayster and the Meander rivers enter the Aegean Sea. Pliney said that in ancient times "the sea used to wash up to the temple of Diana," but the natural harbor and general area gradually silted up until today the ruins of the city lie in a low plain four or five miles inland from the sea.

Ephesus, like other ancient cities, was deeply religious. Her chief devotion was to Diana (called Artemis by the Greeks), the Asian goddess of fertility. Three early shrines (the first from about the end of the 8th century B.C.), and two beautiful temples were constructed for her on the same site. The first temple was begun about 550 B.C., dedicated 430 B.C., burned in 356 B.C., on the night in which Alexander the Great was born. The last temple took more than thirty years to build. The women of Ephesus sold their jewels to help provide funds for it. Kings presented columns, and gifts of gold, and furnishings of every kind poured in from many nations. When it was completed in 323 B.C., it was the most magnificent building ever constructed in the Greek world, and was acclaimed one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. The temple became immensely rich through gifts and legacies, and was best known for the image of Diana, which the credulous were told had fallen from heaven (Ac 19:35).

Paul labored here for three years, and laid the foundation for the strongest Christian church of the first century. So effective was his ministry that believers "who had practiced sorcery brought their scrolls together and burned them publicly" (Ac 19:19), and the worship of Diana decreased until Demetrius, the silversmith, stirred up a riot against Paul (Ac 19:24, 38). Timothy and John carried on the work here and in the other six churches of this area. As Christianity advanced, the worship of Diana declined. In A.D. 262 her temple was plundered and burned by the Goths, and was finally deserted after the Edict of Theodosius, which closed pagan temples. The city decreased in size as a result of malaria, and its buildings became silted up with river mud and buried with the dust of the ages.

Excavations were begun at Ephesus on May 2, 1863, by the British Museum, under the direction of architect J. T. Wood, and continued until 1874. Wood's chief objective was to locate the temple of Diana, yet he worked six years to no avail. Then, one day while excavating in the theater, he uncovered a Roman inscription which told how the images of Diana were carried from the temple to the theater on each birthday of the goddess, and how the procession entered the city by the Magnesian Gate and left by the Coressian Gate. When he found these gates he was able to uncover the street to the temple, where he and his crew of workmen excavated for five years. David C. Hogarth continued the work at the temple during 1904–1905. The Austrian Archaeological Institute began in 1898, and for more than thirty years they carried on thorough excavations to gain an overall picture of the city.

The excavators found the walls of the city of Ephesus to be about five miles in length, enclosing an area of more than a thousand acres. Its walls were high, and some of its streets paved with marble. The most significant of these marble-paved streets led from the theater to the harbor—one-half mile away. It was thirty-five feet wide, flanked by colonnades, behind which were shops and other splendid buildings. Monumental gateways were at each end.

The site of the temple of "Artemis of the Ephesians" was about a mile to the northeast of the city wall. It was constructed on a huge concrete platform 234 by 418 feet, while the temple itself measured 163 by 342 feet. Its roof was supported by 127 Ionic columns six feet in diameter and sixty feet high. Among the ruins Wood found what he took to be an altar, but later Hogarth tapped on the "altar" and detected a hollow sound. He then broke it open and found a large and most significant collection of jewelry, coins, and other objects of art. Many regard this as a foundation deposit, or cornerstone collection, placed there when the temple was constructed.

In the midst of the city was the agora, or marketplace, which was a rectangular area 360 feet long, surrounded by pillared halls, shops, and rooms. In the midst of the open space was a sun and water clock.

Northeast of the agora, on the western slope of Mt. Pion, the excavators uncovered a theater with tier upon tier of seating arrangements able to accommodate at least 24,000 people. In Greek cities the theater was the usual meeting place for the masses, and this particular theater represents one of the most vivid scenes in the New Testament, for it is the place where Demetrius and his fellow silversmiths led the mob in the great riot against Paul over the worship of Diana and over the diminishing trade in the silver miniatures of the temple of Diana which the silversmiths made and sold (Ac 19:23–41).

North of the theater, near the Coressian Gate, they found the ancient stadium, or amphitheater where games, gladiatorial combats, and contests with wild animals were held. Could Paul have "fought wild beasts" here? (1Co 15:32.)

Other discoveries included a lovely marble bath

The theater in Ephesus. Gaius and Aristarchus, Paul's traveling companions, were dragged to this theater when Demetrius incited a riot against Paul (Acts 19:23-29).

house with many rooms, a fine library, a large basilica church dedicated to "St. John the Theologian," the "Catacomb of the Seven Sleepers" in which were hundreds of burial places, and a temple dedicated to emperor worship. In it was a statue of Domitian, the emperor who banished John to the island of Patmos and who was persecuting the Christians while Christ was giving his revelation to John.

No city has been so thoroughly excavated as Ephesus, and these excavations throw considerable light on Paul's epistles and John's writings—especially on the seven churches of Revelation.

4373—ERECH. Twenty miles northwest of Ur lie the vast ruins of the ancient city of Erech (Uruk or Warka) which was founded by Nimrod, the phenomenal builder and "mighty hunter before the Lord" (Ge 10:9–10). Also, it was the royal residence and fortified city of King Gilgamish, hero of the Babylonian legend of the Flood.

Excavations began here in 1852 and have been carried on at intervals for more than one hundred years. Some of the earliest finds were a 40- to 50-foot high brick wall encircling the city for five and a half miles, a Parthian temple ornamented with colored mosaics, an extensive Parthian cemetery yielding an almost inexhaustible supply of slipper-shaped, glazed coffins, a 100-foot high pyramidal ziggurat, and thousands of Neo-Babylonian cuneiform tablets, some of which were in clay envelopes.

Later excavations penetrated down to virgin soil, and established a relative chronology dating back to nearly 4000 B.C. In these earlier strata, were unearthed the remains of a massive wall dating back to about 3000 B.C., cylinder seals, and some 575 tablets written in the very ancient form of pictograph writing. These recorded much religious history, and indicated that the earlier inhabitants of Erech (Warka) believed that there were only two deities, of which one preceded the other.

Two strata of flood deposits were penetrated, but the excavators were unable to determine their exact relation to the great Flood.

4374–EZION GEBER, the twentieth stopping place of the Israelites on their journey from Egypt to Canaan, and later the naval port of King Solomon, was located at the head of the Gulf of Aqaba, an arm of the Red Sea. The exact site was unknown until, in 1937, Fritz Frank, a German explorer, discovered the mound of Tell el-Kheleifeh less than a half mile from the shore. On the surface of the mound were pottery fragments which he thought were ancient—old enough to cause him to suggest that the site should be identified with Ezion Geber.

The following year an archaeological expedition, headed by Dr. Nelson Glueck, left Jerusalem and soon entered Wadi el-Arabah, the Great Rift Valley south of the Dead Sea. In many places, as they went southward along this valley, they came upon slag-heaps of iron and copper ore, and galleries tunneled into the rocky hillside—all that remained of mines long since deserted. Pushing on for the entire length of the 106 mile desert-like valley, they came finally to Tell el-Kheleifeh, a lonely city mound rising out of the shadeless plain a half mile north of the Gulf of Aqaba. From test shafts dug into the mound they found copper fishhooks, tiles, pottery, and remnants of walls. The pottery dated from 900–1000 B.C., which was in the time of King Solomon who "made a navy of ships in Ezion Geber, which is beside Elath, on the shore of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom" (1Ki 9:26).

During the three seasons of excavation which followed, excavators uncovered the remains of an extensive settlement, in which were numerous casting molds, vast quantities of slag, and an extensive building with green discoloration on its walls. The building proved to be an amazingly well-built blast furnace. The brick walls on the north side had two rows of openings which were skillfully constructed built-in flues, through which the never-ceasing north winds from the Wadi el-Arabah blew, serving as bellows for the refinery, which was constructed similar to the Bessemer systems of last century.

The excavation of the town with its residential and business district, its casemated walls, its strong gate, and great blast furnace (along with the many other discoveries), not only proved it to be the ancient city of Ezion Geber, but caused Dr. Glueck to write:

> Ezion Geber was the result of careful planning and was built as a model installation with remarkable architectural and technical skill. In fact practically the whole town of Ezion Geber, taking into consideration place and time, was a phenomenal industrial site, without anything to compare with it in the entire history of the ancient Orient. Ezion Geber was the Pittsburgh of Old Palestine, and at the same time its most important seaport.

4375–GAZA, the most southern, as well as the most famous, of the five federated cities of the Philistines, was located two and one half miles from the sea, on a well-rounded hill which rose sixty feet above the surrounding plain.

Situated on the great coastal highway between Egypt and Mesopotamia, at a junction of the trade route from south and central Arabia, it was an important commercial and military center from Canaanite times. It seems to have been a town throughout the intervening centuries, and many famous people such as Samson, Alexander the Great, Napoleon, and Allenby have stayed here for a time.

Mr. W. J. Phythian-Adams, Deputy Director of Antiquities, made soundings here in the autumn of 1922, and found a "formidable accumulation of debris." But no significant archaeological work has been possible because of the presence of the modern city on the old site.

More recent surveys have led many of the best authorities to believe that Gerar should be identified with Tell Abu Hureirah, which lies on the banks of Wadi Es-Sariah, eleven miles southeast of Gaza. The mound covers about forty acres, and on its surface are an abundance of potsherds indicating that the city enjoyed considerable prosperity during the Middle Bronze Age—the age of the patriarchs.

4377—GERIZIM. Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal are twin mountains located in central Palestine. Ebal is 3,076 feet above sea level, and Gerizim is 2,848 feet. These mountains played an important role in Israel's early history, and in the history of the Samaritans from 700 B.C. to the present. Between the two lies the fertile half-mile-wide Valley of Shechem, the best-watered valley in central Palestine.

Mount Gerizim has usually been called the Mount of Blessing, because after crossing the Jordan River Joshua placed half the people before Mt. Gerizim and half of them before Mt. Ebal. The blessings on those who kept the law were pronounced from Gerizim, and the cursings on breakers of the law came from Ebal (Jos 8:30–35).

Jotham's parable of the trees was later spoken to the men of Shechem from a prominent ledge about halfway up the slopes. This ledge is now popularly called Jotham's pulpit.

The Basilica of Agony is surrounded by the Garden of Gethsemane.

On returning from Babylonian captivity, the Jews refused the Samaritans the privilege of helping rebuild the temple at Jerusalem. Therefore, the Samaritans set up their own priesthood and built their own temple on Mount Gerizim. This temple was destroyed by John Hyrcanus about 128 B.C., yet the Samaritan woman at the well said to Jesus, "Our fathers worshiped on this mountain" (Jn 4:20). And, to this day, the small sect of Samaritans live in Nablus and celebrate the feasts of Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacle each year on Mount Gerizim. They venerate the extensive remains of a temple which they say was built by Sanballat. Others say these remains are of a church built by Justinian during the fifth century. Still other ruins are on the summit of the mountain, and at the foot of Mount Gerizim are the ruins of a Canaanite temple that dates from about 1600 B.C., and is identified with the shrine of Baal.

4378—GETHSEMANE. The Garden of Gethsemane was an olive orchard, with its oil press, which was across the Brook Kidron from Jerusalem, on the western slope of the Mount of Olives. It was a secluded place where Jesus often went with his disciples, and where he agonized in prayer before his betrayal by Judas (Lk 22:39–44).

A tradition, dating from the fourth century, places the garden some fifty yards east of the Kidron bridge, where there is now an enclosed area (of about an acre) in which are many beautiful flowers, and eight gnarled olive trees of extraordinary girth and great age—said to date from as far back as the time of our Lord. The sweet simplicity with which the garden is kept, and its quietness, make it an impressive place for meditation. Millions visit the place and are deeply impressed.

Occasionally, however, the question arises, Was the garden so small, and could the trees be quite so old?

Josephus states that Titus cut down all the trees around Jerusalem at the time of the siege in A.D. 70. This may be true, yet olive trees, when cut, sprout from the stumps and continue almost indefinitely. Northwards, about one hundred yards, is a place farther away from the roadway which some think "more suitable and less artificial." However that may be, the olive garden where the Son of God agonized for man was somewhere in this area.

4379—GEZER, known today as Tell el-Jezer, was located on a 27-acre hilltop, overlooking the Maritime Plain eighteen miles west of Jerusalem. It guarded the pass from Joppa to Jerusalem, and the highway from Egypt to Syria, and was, therefore, one of the most strategically located cities of Palestine. Sometimes it belonged to Egypt and at other times to Palestine, and it therefore played an important role in the history of these two countries. At King Solomon's marriage to an Egyptian princess, it was given to her as a present from her father. Solomon rebuilt the place and made it into a chariot city (1Ki 9:16–17).

From the excavations carried on by R. A. S. Macalister in 1902–05 and 1907–09, and by A. Rowe in 1934, it was learned that the earliest inhabitants of Gezer were a non-Semitic people, some of whom lived in caves. A few of these caves were natural, while others were carefully carved out of the soft limestone rock. Some even had carefully carved stairways.

Many walls of the larger rooms were adorned with pictures indicating that the people were religious, and that they lived by farming and hunting—just as they have done throughout the ages. About 2500 B.C., a Semitic people captured the place and held it to the end of the Hebrew monarchy. Other civilizations lived here until about 100 B.C.

An ancient high place was found which threw considerable light on the worship of Baal and Ashtoreth (Astarte) by the Canaanites. This center of worship had a row of light, roughly-chiseled stone pillars, the tallest of which was ten feet nine inches and the shortest five feet nine inches. In some places these were polished smooth by the kisses of the devotees. On the platform, about these stone pillars, were pottery plaques of Astarte with rude exaggerations of sexual organs, and other indications of the sensual worship of the Canaanites, all of which gave vivid realism to Jehovah's strict command, > Break down their altars, smash their sacred stones and burn their Asherah poles in the fire; cut down the idols of their gods and wipe out their names from those places (Dt 12:3).

Within the southeastern part of the city, dating from 2000 to 1400 B.C., was a great rock-cut, staircased tunnel 13 feet wide and twenty feet high, which led 219 feet through the rock to a large spring of water, which was 94½ feet below the surface. Niches within these downward-sloping walls held lamps which lighted the way for water carriers who brought water up from the spring. The smoke stains above these niches evidence the use of olive oil lamps there almost 4000 years ago. At another place, nearer the center of the mound, Macalister found an enormous reservoir capable of holding two million gallons of water. Apparently this was constructed after the spring at the bottom of the tunnel had failed.

An altar stone inscribed to Heraclus was found. This was from a Hebrew altar, for Jehovah was mentioned in the inscription.

Macalister uncovered a building complex with strong walls, a fine gate, and a series of towers which he supposed was the castle built by Simon Maccabeus for his "dwellingplace" in 142 B.C. (1Macc 13:47–48). But more recent discoveries of Solomonic gates and walls at Megiddo and Hazor have led authorities to believe it to be a gate and walls erected by King Solomon when he rebuilt and fortified Gezer. The gate measurements here "agreed astonishingly well" with the gates built by Solomon at Megiddo and Hazor.

In the fourth Semitic level, which dated from the late tenth century B.C., Macalister found a small limestone plaque, four and a half inches long and two and three fourths inches wide, which proved to be a school boy's exercise, whereon he had made up a calendar giving the order of the chief agricultural operations through the seasons of the year. In good classical Hebrew it read:

> His two months are olive harvest;
> His two months are grain planting;
> His two months are late planting;
> His month is hoeing up flax;
> His month is barley harvest;
> His month is harvest in festivity;
> His two months are vine-tending;
> His month is summer fruit.

4380–GIBEAH, the first capital of united Israel, and the residence of King Saul, lies four miles north of Jerusalem. As a cone-shaped hill, terraced from base to summit and capped by ruins, it long puzzled the archaeologists until in 1922 and 1933 Dr. Albright led expeditions which uncovered seven occupational levels, dating from 1100 B.C. to A.D. 70. On the first, or oldest level, Albright found the ashes and charred ruins of an Israelite town, burned near the end of the 12th century. This was believed to represent the destruction which is recorded in chapters 19 and 20 of Judges.

On the second town level, which was constructed sometime before 1000 B.C., the excavators uncovered King Saul's two-story, castle-like fortress, which measured about 155 by 170 feet. The hammer-dressed stone walls averaged some eight to ten feet thick, and there was a splendid stone staircase leading to the second floor. The audience room where David is thought to have played his harp to soothe Saul measured about 14 by 23 feet—the size of an average living room today. In the ruins were found cooking pots, burnished ware, grinding stones, spinning whorls, and a gaming board. In the cellar of Saul's castle were storage jars for wine and oil, and a grain storage in which there remained considerable grain, charred and blackened by three millennia.

4381–GIBEON, now known as Al Jib, lies eight miles northwest of Jerusalem. It was the home of the Gibeonites who traveled to Gilgal and tricked Joshua into making a treaty with them as vassals (Jos 9:3–27), the place where the soldiers of Abner and Joab held a contest "at the pool of Gibeon" (2Sa 2:12–17), and the abode of the tabernacle after it was moved from Nob until Solomon's temple was completed. Here Solomon prepared a great feast, had a wonderful dream, and chose God and wisdom, rather than riches and honor (2Ch 1:3–13).

Excavations were carried on here in 1956–57 by Dr. James B. Pritchard, who cleared the debris from a rock-cut pool 35 feet in diameter and 33 feet deep. A spiral stairway, approximately five feet wide, led down to the bottom of the pool, where 27 jar handles were discovered, all of which were stamped in Hebrew script, with the name Gibeon. Many of these handles also had cut on them such names as Amariah, Azariah, and Hananiah—all names of biblical characters. Hananiah, the opponent of Jeremiah, was from Gibeon (Jer 28:1).

At the bottom of the pool, the steps led into a tunnel which continued to a depth of 49 more feet to a large underground springroom—the city's major water supply. This caused the excavator to exclaim "Can it be that this impressive engineering feat, a rock-cut pool with steps leading down to the spring 82 feet below the surface, is the very landmark referred to as the scene of the contest between the men of Joab and the men of Abner?" He thought it was, and many people agree with his conclusions.

During the three seasons of excavation, many archaeological relics were found from the Middle Bronze Age on, but, to the Bible student, the most interesting and significant are those from the Israelite period.

4382–GIHON, now known as the Virgins Fountain, is an intermittent spring (or fountain) of pure water which bursts forth from deep within the Kidron Valley, east of Jerusalem and just opposite the village of Siloam. From early times it has been the only known continuing spring near Jerusalem. In fact the city was located on this plateau because of the splendid water supply.

The Jebusite inhabitants of Jerusalem dug a deep underground channel or tunnel westward from the fountain, under the wall, and into the city, so that they might draw water without having to go outside the walls, and also to enable them to obtain all the water they needed in time of siege without being exposed to the enemy. This tunnel from the spring is supposed to have been the "water shaft" by which Joab led his warriors into the city, took the garrison by surprise, and became David's general (2Sa 5:8).

After the conquest of David, this underground tunnel was needed less and less, for David seems to have constructed an upper and a lower reservoir (pool) for collecting the water for domestic use, and for the irrigation of the gardens in the Kings Valley below.

In 1867 Warren discovered the shaft and tunnel through which the Jebusites obtained water. At the end of the tunnel was a pool, and a shaft leading upward to the top of a hill within the city. At the top of the shaft was an iron ring, through which a rope had been passed for hauling water from the pool.

Solomon was crowned at the spring of Gihon, and rode David's royal mule back into the city, thus signifying to the people that he was their king, as his father had been before him.

Considerable debris from the many destructions of Jerusalem have filled the Kidron Valley bed, until today the spring of Gihon is approached by a deep descent of thirty steps down to the water. The spring still flows strong, but, being intermittent, it flows only four or five times a day in the rainy season, and once or twice a day in the dry summer season.

4383–GILGAL was Israel's first camping place after crossing the Jordan. Here they erected twelve memorial stones taken from the bed of the Jordan (Jos 4:20) circumcised the males (5:3), and kept the Passover (5:10). Here Joshua met the commander of the army of the LORD (5:14). Here Israel encamped while taking the city of Jericho (4:19), while they made a treaty with the Gibeonites (9:6) and launched the campaign against the five Amorite kings (10:6). Gilgal remained a rallying point for Israel for many generations to come.

The city is given in the biblical record as being located "on the eastern border of Jericho" (Jos 4:19). Josephus states that the Israelites, after crossing the Jordan, went on for fifty stadia and then pitched camp ten stadia from Jericho (Ant. V, 1, 4). In the Onomasticon, Eusebius locates Gilgal "at about the second milestone from Jericho."

Khirbet el-Mefjir, a mound one and one-quarter miles northeast of Jericho, agrees almost exactly with the estimations of these three authorities. Reckoning a Roman stadium at 607 feet, this site is 10.87 stadia from ancient Jericho and 50 stadia from the Jordan. In soundings at one of the small mounds at Khirbet el-Mefjir in 1955, James Muilenburg unearthed remains from the Early and Middle Iron periods, which corresponds fairly well with the long years in which Gilgal was so significant in Israel's history.

The modern city of Hama has a population of probably 100,000, and is built around the ancient mound which is rather impressive, rising 130 feet above river level.

In 1812 Burckhardt found a hieroglyphic inscription at Hamath, and in 1872 D. Wright, of England, secured the inscription for the museum at Constantinople, making it accessible to scientific investigation. Hittite inscriptions on monuments were discovered in 1871, and certain other minor discoveries were made from time to time; but for the major portion of our knowledge of Hamath, we are indebted to a Danish excavation conducted there from 1932–38 by Prof. H. Ingholt. He uncovered twelve occupational levels, the earliest going back to Neolithic times. The Old Babylonian period (1830–1550 B.C.), and the Amarna age (1300 B.C.) were important in the life of the city, but the excavations are far from complete.

4385–HARAN, Abraham's first stopping place on the way to Canaan, was an important junction and trading center located on the Balikh River about forty miles east of Carchemish, on the highway along which caravans and armies frequently marched. It was six hundred miles northwest of Ur of the Chaldeans and about four hundred miles northeast of Canaan.

In the Mari tablets and other cuneiform sources, are frequent references to Haran as a flourishing city during the 19th and 18th century B.C., when Abraham, Rebekah, Nahor, and Jacob lived in this area.

After the fall of Nineveh (612 B.C.), the Assyrians retreated to Haran, and it was the capital of Assyria until captured by the Babylonians in 609 B.C.

The ancient mound of Haran is uninhabited, but adjacent to it is a Muslim village, in which the majority of homes are of the "bee-hive" type, common in northern Syria. The present inhabitants have many traditions concerning Abraham and a nearby well at which they say Eliezer met Rebekah, when he sought her as bride for Isaac.

Excavations at the mound have revealed a continuous history from about 2000 B.C. to around A.D. 1000 or later, during most of which the city had a temple dedicated to Sin, the Moon god. No inscriptions have been found, but fragments of an Assyrian lion, ruins of a very ancient castle, and the remains of an old cathedral have been uncovered.

4386–HAZOR, the home of "Jabin king of Hazor," was located four miles southwest of the "Waters of Merom," on a magnificent mound of some 200 acres. Situated at the crossroads of two international trade routes, its position was commanding enough for it to be styled "the head of all" the northern kingdoms of the Canaanites (Jos 11:10). Joshua destroyed the place, but it was rebuilt by Solomon, along with Megiddo and Gezer (1Ki 9:15). Tiglath-Pileser III of Assyria destroyed it in 733 B.C.

Garstang carried on preliminary examinations of the mound (now called Tell el-Qedah) in 1928, and concluded that Hazor was destroyed by Joshua about 1400 B.C., but his examinations were too brief to be conclusive.

In 1955 Prof. Yigael Yadin began excavations of Hazor under the sponsorship of James A. de Rothchild. These excavations have been carried on for many years by as many as 200 laborers, directed by Dr. Yadin and his staff of forty-five archaeologists, architects, photographers, draftsmen, and students of archaeology.

The site comprises two distinct areas. The citadel is 120 feet high and covers 25 acres, while at its foot on the north lies a large rectangular plateau comprising about 175 acres which at times was used as a camp area, and at other times as a residential area. The entire city was fortified by great walls and wide beaten-earth ramparts, strong enough to give confidence to any who may have held the place.

On the citadel area the excavators found ten city levels, which meant citadels and temples built on top of each other. On the Solomonic level was a splendid gate almost identical in size and style with the one found at Megiddo, as well as the one found later at Gezer. Yadin concluded they were built by the same royal architect. The Israelite settlement was confined to the 25-acre citadel area.

On the lower rectangular plateau was found a Canaanite temple 55 by 80 feet. In the "holy of holies" of the temple was found a complete set of ritual furniture and implements, also four bronze figurines, many cylinder seals, and an Egyptian scarab seal belonging to Amenhotep III (1413–1376). The destruction of the city by Tiglath-Pileser in 733 B.C. was vividly illustrated by layers of ashes and charred fragments found in the citadel and at other places of this period. The many vessels were in their places, which seemed to indicate that destruction came suddenly.

There is still much that Dr. Yadin has not found, but he says: "Holding the Bible in one hand and a spade in the other, seemed to be the most successful method of discovering the relics of that biblical city."

4387–HERMON, MOUNT the "Chief of the Mountains" of Palestine, is five miles wide and twenty miles long. It has three peaks, the tallest of which is 9,166 feet above the Mediterranean Sea. For centuries before Abraham's time the mountain had been venerated in connection with Baal.

Baal worship was the leading religion of Canaan. On most of the high peaks of the country were shrines known as "high places"—the higher the holier. Here groves were planted and shrines erected for worship. Since Mount Hermon towered above all other mountains in the region, it was the chief high place, the shrine of shrines. Canaanites looked to Mount Hermon much as Muslims face Mecca when they pray.

In contrast to this practice, David asked the question, "I lift up my eyes to the hills—where does my help come from?" He then answers, "My help comes from the LORD, the Maker of heaven and earth" (Ps 121:1–2).

During the summer of 1934, Dr. J. Stewart Crawford and the present writer led a small expedition in which we studied the ancient Baal shrines surrounding Mount Hermon. We located many ruins, and in each case the shrine was so oriented that when the priest and the devotees were at the altar they faced the chief Baal sanctuary, or Quibla, located on the highest of the three peaks of Hermon.

We then ascended the mountain and found the ruined temple of Baal, constructed of Herodian masonry, which dated it just previous to and during the early Christian era. In a low place near the northwest corner of the temple, we excavated and found loads of ashes and burnt bone which had been dumped there as refuse from sacrifices. This Baal temple evidently was in full use when Jesus Christ was transfigured on the summit to the south.

4388–JABNEH, Jamnia, or Jabneel (Jos 15:11; 19:33), is located four miles inland from the Mediterranean Sea and nine miles northeast of Ashdod. Uzziah (783–742 B.C.) recaptured Jabneh from the Philistines by breaching its wall (2Ch 26:6).

It was used by the Greek Syrians as a base for their operations against the Hasmoneans (1Macc 5:58), but was conquered by Simon Maccabeus in 147 B.C. and long remained a part of the Jewish kingdom. With the accession of Herod it became a part of his kingdom, and he presented it to his sister Siloam. Later it was given to Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, by Antony as a wedding present. With the fall of Antony it was restored to Herod. Jabneh played a leading part in the events leading up to the first Jewish Revolt, and following the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, Titus gave permission for the founding of a Jewish settlement at Jamneh. Here they brought their sacred scrolls and Jabneh became the "center-in-exile" for the Sanhedrin and a flourishing center for study of the law. Here the Synod of Jamnia met in A.D. 100 and canonized the Hebrew Scriptures into the thirty-nine books which form our Old Testament.

At the beginning of the Second Revolt under Bar Kochba in 132, Jabneh was gradually abandoned. The focus of Palestinian Judaism shifted northward to Galilee, where it centered in such cities as Safed, Tiberius, Meiron, and Beth Shearim.

Jabneh is identified with the prominent mound of Yabneh. No excavations have been made on the site, but potsherds of the Iron Age and the Persian period have been found on the surface, and there are remains of buildings and tombs of the Roman and Byzantine periods.

4389–JACOB'S WELL is one-half mile south of Sychar, on the high road from Jerusalem where it curves to enter the valley between Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal. Situated near Joseph's tomb, on the ground purchased by Jacob, it is one of the most authentic sites in all Bible lands. Samaritans, Jews, Christians, and Muslims revere it as the well which Jacob dug, and the one on whose curb Jesus sat when he talked to the woman of Samaria who had come there to draw water. Samaritan tradition dates back more than 23 centuries, and was reflected by this Samaritan woman when she said to Jesus, "Our father Jacob . . . gave us the well" (Jn 4:12). Christian tradition dates from 333 when the Bordeaux Pilgrim visited the well. A Christian church was built here in the 4th century. The Crusaders found the church in ruins and rebuilt it, but their church was destroyed during the 12th century, and its ruins, as a "heap of brown stones," lay over the well.

In 1838 Robinson found the entrance to the well's mouth, measured the well, and found it to be 105 feet deep. In 1881 Dr. C. A. Barclay excavated about the well, and found that debris had fallen or been thrown into it until it measured only 67 feet deep. Later the well was cleaned out to its bottom (105 feet), but so many tourists, and others passing by, threw or pushed stones into it in order to hear how long it would take for a stone to splash in the water below, that it gradually filled until it was 75 feet deep. At this time the Greek church purchased the place, and after many years completed a church over the site.

The ancient well curb is many feet below the present level, and shows deep grooves worn by the ropes by which the water pots or water skins were drawn up. The well measures 7 feet and 6 inches in circumference. Its upper portion is lined with masonry, but the lower portion has been dug through limestone. The water is cool and refreshing, for "the well is deep," and it is both a cistern and a spring—that is, it is fed both by surface water, and by an underground source.

The associations of the well carry us back in history to pastoral scenes and patriarchal customs, and to the beginning of Jesus' ministry, when by this wayside well, he revealed his divine nature to the perplexed woman of Samaria, and spoke the profound truth that will endure through all time—"whoever drinks the water I give him will never thirst. Indeed, the water that I give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life" (Jn 4:14).

4390–JERICHO, the first city captured by the incoming Israelites under Joshua, is now an eight-acre mound called Tell es-Sultan that lies beside the copious spring known as Elisha's Fountain.

It was excavated by Charles Warren (1868), Ernst Sellin (1907–11), John Garstang (1929–36), and Miss Kathleen Kenyon (1952–58).

The first excavator directed attention toward the mound only, while the second made sufficient discoveries to arouse widespread interest. Then Garstang uncovered portions of four towns which had existed there successively since 3000 B.C. Digging through to the base of the mound, he found traces of civilizations of extraordinary antiquity—the oldest yet found in Palestine.

The fourth occupational level, which Garstang called "City D," proved to be of primary importance to Bible students and historians as well as to archaeologists, who had often discussed the correct date of Israel's Exodus from Egypt and subsequent entry into Palestine. Scholars had differed by two centuries or more in their dating of this event. Jericho was the place where the question could be studied most thoroughly. This fourth occupational level seemed to be the very city taken by Joshua, and the excavators proceeded with special caution.

Two thirty-foot-high walls, that ran nearly parallel, circled the summit of the mound. They are made of sun-dried brick some four inches thick and vary in length from one to two feet. The inner wall is from eleven to twelve feet thick and is constructed on the foundation of an earlier wall. The later outer wall is about six feet thick and stands on the edge of the mound. The space between the two walls varies from 12 to 27 feet and at frequent intervals the two are tied together by brick walls.

On the outskirts of the old city mound Garstang discovered a cemetery where he opened scores of graves that yielded quantities of pottery vessels, considerable jewelry, and about 170 scarab beetles. In these tombs he found pottery from the Early, Middle, and Late Bronze periods, but only a few sherds of Mycenian ware, which began to be imported around 1400 B.C. The Egyptian scarabs can be dated with certainty since they mention various pharaohs by name and represent each of them from Thutmose III (1490–1436). One scarab bears the name of Queen Hat-shep-sut and Thutmose III, another that of Amenhotep II, who was depicted as an archer, corresponding well with his tomb records in Egypt. The series of dated scarabs end with the two royal seals of Amenhotep III, who reigned 1413 to 1376 B.C. Nothing else in the tombs suggests later dates.

On returning to the city mound, Garstang carefully compared the pottery fragments with those discovered in the tombs and found some of them to be Late Bronze. After examining approximately 100,000 fragments of pottery, 1500 unbroken vessels, as well as eighty scarabs, the fallen walls and other evidence, Garstang had no hesitancy in dating the fall of the city at about 1400 B.C., and identifying it as the Canaanite city of Jericho, which fell before the Israelites led by Joshua. The charred remains evident everywhere were to him a confirmation of the biblical account that the Israelites "burned the whole city, and everything in it" (Jos 6:24), and the fallen walls were a confirmation of how the Israelites entered "charged straight in" (Jos 6:20).

Desiring to exercise the greatest care possible, and in the spirit of a true scientist, Garstang called in three of Palestine's top ranking archaeologists and pottery experts: Pere Vincent, Clarence S. Fisher, and Alan Rowe. When these authorities had carefully and independently examined the pottery, the charred ruins, and the fallen walls they signed statements with Garstang confirming the date of 1400 B.C., with a possible alternative date no later than 1377 B.C. This dating corresponds well with the chronology given in 1Kings 6:1.

Solomon's reign probably began about 961 B.C. If this date is correct, the fourth year of his reign would be approximately 957. When 480 years are added, 1437 becomes the date for the Israelite departure from Egypt. Allowing forty years for the wilderness wandering, we arrive at the date of 1397 for the destruction of Jericho—well within Garstang's limits.

These finds and the interpretation given them were not satisfactory to some, however, for they could find no place in their thinking for a Jericho which so closely conformed to the biblical record. For almost two decades there was constant opposition to Garstang's conclusions and pressure was brought to have Jericho reexamined.

This desire was gratified in the beginning of 1952, when a joint expedition of the British School of Archaeology, the Palestine Exploration Fund, the American Schools of Oriental Research, and the Department of Antiquities of Jordan began to reexcavate Jericho under the direction of Miss Kathleen Kenyon. The work was diligently pursued for five seasons, during which the excavators sank pits to bedrock in six different locations on the mound. In one of these, a site toward the north-east end, was found evidence of Jericho's first settlement.

Two Neolithic periods characterized this earliest settlement. During the first period the people built pioneer houses, which from the remains appear to have been little more than huts. They then constructed permanent, round brick homes, developed a good grade of flint tools, and made highly polished limestone dishes. The town was surrounded by a substantial stone wall six and one-half feet thick and twelve to twenty-three feet high, on which was a massive stone watchtower 30 feet high and 28 feet in diameter. An inner staircase of twenty-two steps, each a slab of stone three feet across, led to the top of the tower. Even these earliest inhabitants had a rather comfortable civilization.

Following the destruction of this town, another was built on its ruins and was also enclosed by a stone wall erected on new foundations. This people constructed large, solidly built rectangular-shaped homes of elongated mudbricks, plastered their floors and walls with red- or cream-colored plaster, and burnished them to a high polish. Stone knives, flint sickle blades, querns, mortars and pestles, along with various kinds of grains, marked the occupants as being largely agricultural.

The people of this city buried many of their dead under the floors, and in some instances formed portraits of deceased loved ones by carefully packing the skull with clay, after which, with molder's clay, they artistically formed the features of the deceased. Some of the skulls had bright seashells for eyes.

Carbon-14 analysis of the earliest city gave varying dates—±5850, 6250, and 6800 B.C. Subsequent tests yielded much higher dates—as high as ±7705, 7800, and even 8350. For the second city, radiocarbon tests gave dates of 5820 and 6880. Other tests gave still other dates. The wide variation in these tests caused many to consider them unreliable. When the test dates were challenged as being too early, Miss Kenyon commented, "It does stretch out the stages between this and c. 3000 B.C. [the next settlement] to an uncomfortable extent." Elsewhere she added: "In our present state of knowledge, one must use carbon-14 dating with caution, for its reliability has still to stand up to the test of full experience. Nevertheless, the city of Jericho would often be called 'the oldest city in the world,' yet to more careful scholars the actual age of prehistoric Jericho would remain uncertain."

Throughout the Early Bronze Age (3000–2100 B.C.) Jericho was defended by a series of mudbrick walls, but this town perished violently at the hands of newcomers around 2300. Immediately thereafter a prosperous medium-sized town arose within an elaborate defense system of mudbrick walls. Around 1800 to 1750, this Middle Bronze Age people added a deep moat overlaid with stones, with steep, plastered glacis (slopes) twenty feet high. In the course of time, two more glacis were added on top of the first one. The last one was of stone, on which the outer city wall was built.

The remains of the people of this Middle Bronze period have been well preserved, as revealed in the nearby cemetery located in the foothills west of the tell. In the course of five season's work, Miss Kenyon and her associates excavated 59 tombs, most of which contained multiple burials, although there were also some family vaults and individual tombs. In one tomb there were seven bodies laid out in a row, with no suggestion that one was more important than the other. Most of the dead lay on rush mats. Only one individual lay on a bed, probably a man of importance, for he occupied the center of the tomb with the members of his family around him. Most of the bodies had a scarab signet either on a bronze finger ring or on a chain suspended round the neck. In the case of reused tombs, the older burials were simply pushed back to make room for later ones.

Articles buried with the dead were meant to serve the deceased in the afterlife. From these finds excavators were able to supplement to a remarkable degree other information derived from the tell about the people who lived during the earlier periods—especially during the time of the patriarchs.

The objects recovered from the tombs included pottery vessels of all sorts, wooden beds and stools, three- and four-legged tables, trinket boxes with bone inlay, baskets and mats, metal daggers, bronze pins, combs, beads, scarabs, small wooden and alabaster bowls, pomegranates, raisins, joints of mutton, and even whole carcasses of sheep. One of the strangest discoveries was an actual human brain inside its skull, with the convolutions of the brain still evident.

In one tomb were gold-mounted amethyst scarabs, four complete with rings in perfect condition, the fifth with only its circling band, and one small bracelet. A room was reconstructed and furnished with the furniture and other objects found in the tombs.

It is generally supposed that certain gases formed and created an atmosphere which preserved the otherwise perishable objects found in these tombs, yet many scientific tests have left the question unanswered.

During the later course of Miss Kenyon's excavations some of those who had been dissatisfied with Prof. Garstang's interpretations inquired of Miss Kenyon as to how she interpreted her finds. In particular they wanted to know her interpretation of the fallen walls. She advised them that Garstang had mistakenly identified the walls of Jericho, that the inner wall belonged to the Early Bronze Age—some 2300–2200 B.C.

At once the news went over the wires that Garstang had wrongly identified the fallen walls of Jericho and that Miss Kenyon's more precise stratigraphic method had disproved Garstang, since no Late Bronze Age remains had been found and therefore no city existed for Joshua to capture. "The walls," the report said, "were a full thousand years earlier than Garstang had dated them." Or as one typical report read: "The fallen walls found by Garstang are now known to be a millennium too early to be associated with Joshua's attack." The report readily found prominent place in the news, in learned journals, and in books almost everywhere.

The report, however, contained only a half truth. Miss Kenyon had only indicated the time Jericho's massive twelve-foot wide inner wall was constructed. Excavations of certain other ancient cities reveal that massive walls built during this period stood strong for many centuries. In fact Miss Kenyon's next excavation was the city of Jerusalem where she uncovered the remains of "the large heavy wall" that had surrounded the Jebusite city which King David captured in 1000 B.C. After careful examination she reached the conclusion (with which other archaeologists agreed) that this was a Middle Bronze Age wall that had been constructed around 1800 B.C. The wall, therefore, was 800 years old when David and Joab captured the city. David, Solomon, and others used these walls for some 200 more years—until nearly the time of Nehemiah. These walls, with certain repairs and extensions, stood for about a thousand years.

The Jebusites were simply using the massive walls of Jericho, built many centuries earlier. They had so much confidence in the impregnability of the walls that they taunted David and Joab with the startling suggestion that "the blind and the lame" could defend the walls and the city (2Sa 5:6). The walls were indeed strong and finally fell only by the power of Almighty God (Jos 6:1–27).

In a later excavation, Miss Kenyon reported that she had found "the foundations and stem of a wall, with about a square meter of intact floor," the remains of a so-called middle building, an oven, a juglet—all belonging to the Late Bronze Age (1500–1200 B.C.). In speaking of these remains, Miss Kenyon says, "they do at least show that a town of that period had existed . . . the date is fourteenth century, and fits in well with the more precisely datable finds in the tombs made by Professor Garstang. . . . The evidence seems to us to be that the small fragment of a building which we have found is part of a kitchen of a Canaanite woman, who may have dropped the juglet beside the oven and fled at the sound of the trumpets of Joshua's men."

New Testament Jericho

On January 10, 1950, Dr. James L. Kelso and his associates began the excavation of New Testament Jericho. They found the winter capital of Herod the Great, the citadel, hippodrome, swimming pool, fountains, gardens, villas, and the ruins of other buildings that had been constructed of typically Herodian masonry, with the smooth marginal draft on all four sides. The villas thinned out toward the east, and a little beyond them is modern Jericho, which Dr. Kelso thought might be over the site of the poorer sections of New Testament Jericho.

4391—JERUSALEM. Archaeologists have never questioned the location of ancient Jerusalem, but have concentrated on discovering and identifying its walls, gates, and holy places. Difficulties stood in the way, however, for Jerusalem had been besieged, captured, or destroyed in whole or in part more than forty times. Ruin was piled upon ruin, and debris rolled into valleys, until in some places it was more than thirty-five feet down from the present ground level to the street levels on which Jesus walked—and another thirty feet or more to the level on which Old Testament characters had walked. Added to this was the fact that almost all areas of Old Jerusalem were covered by modern buildings or cemeteries, so that the major portion of the city was inaccessible for digging. Researchers made direct diggings whenever it was possible, and tunneled under, where such was permissible. Many able men searched the underground of Jerusalem: Robinson, Warren, Wilson, Bliss, Guthe, Schick, Clermont-Ganneau, Parker, Weile, Macalister, Duncan, Crowfoot, Myer, Sukenik and others. Many discoveries have been made by their labors, as well as by chance discoveries.

In 1838 Dr. Edward Robinson discovered curved stones that formed the spring of a forty-two foot wide arch which projected from the southwest corner of the temple area. Some of the stones which made up the arch were as much as 26 feet long. It was the eastern portion of one of the series of arches that supported a bridge, which in Herod's time spanned the Tyropoeon Valley and connected the temple area on Mount Moriah with the western hill across the valley.

Years later Charles Warren was digging directly across the valley from this area, and discovered the base of a pier which supported the western end of this same arched bridge. It rested on a pavement thirty feet below the surface. Then below this pavement at a depth of 23 feet, he found an ancient sewer aqueduct

Now this had been the history of the excavation. While the workmen were still lifting up the ax, each toward his neighbor, and while three cubits still remained to (cut through, each heard) the voice of the other who called to his neighbor since there was an excess in the rock on the right hand and on (the left). And on the day of the excavation the workmen struck, each to meet his neighbor, ax against ax, and there flowed the waters from the spring to the pool for a thousand two hundred cubits; and . . . of a cubit was the height of the rock over the heads of the workmen."

12 feet deep and four feet wide, running parallel with the Tyropoeon Valley.

Sir Charles Wilson discovered another arch springing from the same wall, but 560 feet north of Robinson's arch. It was similar to Robinson's, although more complete, since there were twenty-five courses of stone—twelve on each side of the keystone. This, too, was the base for a bridge across the Tyropoeon Valley. The outer court of the temple, according to Josephus, had been entered on the western or city-side by four gates, the two principal ones being at the points indicated by Robinson's arch and Wilson's arch.

In 1850 Felicien de Sauley found a large tomb complex north of Jerusalem which he believed to be the tomb of the kings of Judah. There was a very fine rolling stone at the entrance, and spaces for sixty or more burials inside. It remains until today the finest tomb yet discovered in the Jerusalem area, but it proved to be the mausoleum of Queen Helena of Adiabene in Mesopotamia and her descendants, who had been converted to Judaism and moved to Jerusalem during the first century A.D.

In 1852 Joseph Barclay was walking along the north wall of Jerusalem when his dog disappeared into a cave-like opening under the wall some 300 feet east of the Damascus Gate. He removed debris about the opening and found that it was the entrance to a stratified limestone cave which extended southward under the city for about 700 feet. The markings along the side and end walls show the very shape and size of the building stones quarried here, and they must have run into the tens of thousands. The stone is soft and white, and from the piles of stone chippings and other evidence, many believe this to be Solomon's quarry, where his men shaped and dressed the stones, before taking them on sleds to the temple—for "no hammer, chisel or any other iron tool was heard at the temple site while it was being built" (1Ki 6:7).

In 1865 Warren and Wilson sank seven shafts as much as ninety feet in the Tyropoeon Valley. They examined the underground temple walls and found them to be constructed mostly of large and "beautifully worked" stones "fitted together in the most marvelous manner, the joints being hardly discernible." These great stones belonged to the time of Herod the Great, or earlier. They also found quantities of pottery, many lamps, and a second pavement twenty-two feet below the present ground level; and below this pavement they uncovered the stone signet of "Haggai, the son of Shebaniah." This prophet mentions such a signet (Hag 2:23). They also sank three shafts near the southeast corner of the temple area wall—one 90 feet, one 100 feet, and a third 125 feet. At various intervals, horizontal galleries were tunneled back to the walls and careful inspections made. The masonry had been laid with a precision and fineness of joint surpassed only by the early Egyptian work on the pyramids. At the southeast corner, more than 90 feet below the present ground level, Warren found a cornerstone which was three feet eight inches high by fourteen feet long, and weighed approximately 100 tons. Many feel that this stone could well have been laid by Solomon. In his efforts to trace the ancient city walls, Warren sank many shafts on the hill Ophel, and laid bare David's wall for 400 feet. Raymond Weile, Macalister, Duncan, Sukenik, and Moyer all made valuable discoveries in tracing the ancient walls and towers around Ophel, on to the "Citadel of David," and traced even the third wall, built by Herod Agrippa, which ran on westward and circled around to pass back through the property about the American Schools of Oriental Research, and on toward the present corner wall near the Palestine Archaeological Museum. In some areas the modern walls, built by Suleiman "the Magnificent" in 1537–42, were constructed on the foundations of the ancient walls.

In 1880 some school boys were wading in the Pool of Siloam when one waded about nineteen feet into the conduit and discovered some peculiar marks cut in the east rock wall above the water level—marks that looked like writing. When they informed their teacher, Prof. Conrad Shick, he and Dr. Sayce visited the spot and copied the inscription. It consisted of six lines written in ancient Hebrew—practically the same characters and alphabet as those used on the Moabite stone. The inscription reads as follows:

> Now this is the story of the boring through; while the excavators were still lifting up their picks, each toward his fellow, and while there were yet three cubits to excavate, there was heard the voice of one calling to another, for there was a crevice in the rock, on the right hand. And on the day they completed the boring through, the stone-cutters struck pick against pick, one against the other; and the waters flowed from the spring to the pool, a distance of 1000 cubits. And a hundred cubits was the height of the rock above the heads of the stone-cutters.

There was no explanation with the inscription, and none was needed, for all authorities agree that it was written about 702 B.C., when Hezekiah, king of Judah "made the pool and the tunnel by which he brought water into the city" (2Ki 20:20) to preserve the waters of the spring of Gihon (Virgin's Fountain) for the inhabitants of Jerusalem when they were threatened with invasion and famine by the Assyrians. The account in the Bible and the inscription agree. The engineers surveyed, and the diggers began at both ends and worked toward the center—a distance of 1770 feet. They dug the tunnel an average height of six feet through the solid rock and came together "pick to pick"—a notable feat for that day. The inscription gives unmistakable evidence of a Hebrew alphabetical script in which Isaiah and other prophets wrote much of the world's most eloquent literature.

In 1871 Clermont-Ganneau recovered an inscription which had once been a part of Herod's temple and marked the boundary beyond which no Gentile dared go. It read:

> No stranger is to enter within the balustrade around the Temple and enclosure. Whoever is caught will be responsible to himself for his death, which will follow.

The longest Aramaic inscription from the time of Christ was discovered by Prof. Sukenik in 1931. It reads: "Hitherto were brought the bones of Uzziah, King of Judah—do not open." It is supposed that reburial was made necessary by the extensive constructional work carried on by Agrippa II in Jerusalem.

4392—JEZREEL, the city after which the Valley of Jezreel was named, is perched on the spur of a prominent hill at the foot of Mount Gilboa. The city itself, and the striking view across the Valley of Jezreel and the Plain of Armageddon, present a panoramic view of where many of the most stirring and tragic events of the ages took place or will take place.

The royal palace of Ahab and Jezebel stood out boldly on this promontory, and many of the wicked events of their lives took place here. Elijah tucked "his cloak into his belt" and ran before Ahab's chariot from Mount Carmel to Jezreel, where Queen Jezebel vowed to take his life (1Ki 18:46–19:3). Here, by a frame-up, Jezebel obliged Ahab by bringing about Naboth's death and securing his vineyard (21:1). Elijah later appeared in this same vineyard and announced that dogs would lick her blood (21:23). When Jehu entered Jezreel, Jezebel reaped the reward of her wicked deeds. Eunuchs threw her into the street, Jehu's chariot horses trampled her underfoot, and dogs ate her flesh (2Ki 9:30–36).

No excavations have been conducted here.

4393–JOPPA, the "gateway" of ancient Palestine, is built on a rocky knoll 116 feet high which projects into a small, beautiful cape. Its harbor, or breakwater, is formed by a circle of large rocks, one of which, in mythology, is said to be the one to which Andromeda was chained to be devoured by a sea monster to appease the anger of Poseidon, before she was rescued by Perseus.

It was the port to which the cedars of Lebanon were sent for the construction of Solomon's temple, and the port where the prophet Jonah left for Tarshish. Its history is long and often checkered, yet excavation has been limited, and that in one area. Sufficient pottery and other artifacts have been found, however, to attest its antiquity.

4394–JUDEAN DESERT CAVES. Following the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, frantic searches for additional documents were made by Bedouins in the valleys and caves adjoining the Dead Sea. In 1953, Y. Aharoni surveyed the Jewish sector in this area, and during March and April of 1960 and 1961 four well organized Jewish expeditions explored the valleys and caves between Masada and En Gedi. Each of the four groups was assigned a specific area. Leaders of the groups were N. Avigad, Y. Aharoni, Y. Yadin, and Pessah Bar-Adon. They were designated expeditions A, B, C, D. The coordinator of the four groups was J. Aviram. Some one hundred soldiers and three hundred civilian volunteers took part. Israeli defense forces provided equipment, camp sites, and all supplies.

Caves were given names relating to some significant discovery made in each.

The Cave of the Pool, 492 feet up the steep cliffside, received its name from a pool located near the entrance to the cave. It had been partly hewn out of the rock and partly constructed by those who had taken refuge there. Rainwater entered the pool from above through a vertical gutter, part of which is still preserved. The cave served as a refuge during the Late Stone Age (3100 B.C.), during the seventh century B.C., and during the Bar Kochba Wars (A.D. 132–135). In it were found pottery lamps, cooking pots, fragments of glass vessels, wooden combs, spindles, baskets, ropes, the charred remains of dates, pomegranates, carobs, walnuts, almonds, olives, and the bones of animals and birds eaten by the occupants.

Burials were made in smaller caves nearby. One coffin contained seven skulls. In another coffin was found a complete skeleton wrapped in a shroud, with leather shoes on the feet.

The Cave of the Treasure, located 984 feet above the Dead Sea, had two main rooms, each about 39 by 46 feet. In it were found lamps, household utensils, a unique basket sieve, and part of a churn, along with various kinds of jars.

"But the great surprise came on the eighth day of our work," says Pessah Bar-Adon. "In the north wall of the cave a sloping stone was found to be covering a natural niche. . . . Through cracks at its edge could be seen a glint of metal. At once we set about clearing away the loose earth all around the stone until it was entirely exposed. We had to stop work when darkness came, but early next morning we started to uncover the great hoard that the niche contained. . . . When the treasure was revealed there was an awed silence —and then in an instant the cave was filled with an outburst of rejoicing" (Bar-Adon, "The Cave of the Treasure," Archaeological Discoveries in The Holy Land, p. 30).

On unwrapping the straw mat, they found 420 objects, including 240 metal "mace heads" of various sizes, shapes, and decorations; twenty metal chisels and axes; eighty metal "wands" or standards of various shapes and ornamentation; a unique box made of ivory; and ten metal crowns of excellent workmanship and design (ibid., p. 33, 34).

Cave of the Letters, situated 650 feet above the wadi bed of Nahal Hever, was excavated by Y. Yadin. The cave is 165 feet long, and contained the belongings of Jonathan Bayan, one of Bar Kochba's commanders who had taken refuge here with his family.

The objects found included 19 metal vessels, incense shovels, jugs, palm mats, clothing, a hunting net, a number of keys, and several beautifully ornamented glass plates. But the prize of all the finds were fifteen letters from Bar Kochba to the commanders in this area, an archive of thirty-five documents mostly pertaining to Babatha's business transactions, and several fragments of biblical scrolls.

The Bar Kochba letter, along with the other documents, revolutionized conceptions of the Bar Kochba wars and opened new vistas on the material and religious culture of the times. One small fragment from the book of Psalms contained several verses from Psalms 15–16 which were basically identical with our Masoretic Text. Another fragment contained verses 7–8 from the twentieth Psalm.

The Cave of Horrors is on the southern bank of Nahal Hever, where some 40 fugitives took refuge at the end of the Bar Kochba War. The Romans had pitched their camp on the mesa 260 feet above them. In the end, when the besieged succumbed from lack of water, they made a bonfire of their possessions, and met death at their own hands, apparently choosing to die rather than surrender. At least forty skeletons of men and women of various ages were uncovered, as well as those of children and infants.

In the cave, aside from the skeletons, were found such household articles as baskets, ropes, wooden and stone whorls, wooden combs, needles, awls, nails, a steel knife, and leather sandals, along with remains of food—olives, dates, wheat, and barley. The biblical manuscripts found in the cave include a Greek translation of the twelve minor prophets, along with portions of the books of Hosea, Amos, Joel, Jonah, Nahum, and Zechariah.

4395–KADESH BARNEA, the well-known camping and dwelling place of Israel, has sometimes been identified with Ain Qedeis, about 49 miles southwest of Beersheba. However, those who might have studied this area carefully are thoroughly convinced that Kadesh Barnea is to be identified with Wadi Qudeirat, five miles northwest of Ain Qedeis. It is watered by a very strong spring of Ain Qudeirat, and forms a fertile and beautiful valley.

Col. Lawrence discovered a Judean fortress here, and the remains of an agricultural community of the 21st to 19th century is on the hill overlooking the spring. Dr. Nelson Glueck and other authorities feel that Wadi Qudeirat is definitely Kadesh Barnea, which to Israel became "the crossroads of final decision." Israel no doubt made use of both of these oases, since they were only five miles apart.

4396–KEDESH, or Kedesh-Naphtali, was a former Canaanite royal city. Captured by Joshua (Jos 12:22), it afterward became one of the six cities of refuge (Jos 20:7). It was the home of Barak, where he and Deborah gathered the forces from Naphtali and Zebulun for war against Sisera (Jdg 4:6–11). Here Naphtali, Barak, Deborah and Jael were buried. Tiglath-Pileser III captured the city in 734 B.C. and exiled its inhabitants to Assyria (2Ki 15:29). Here Jonathan Maccabeus defeated the Syrian army led by Demetrius (1Macc 11:63).

The site is now called Tell Kades and is partially occupied by a small Arab village located five miles northwest of Lake Huleh on the edge of a ridge overlooking the fertile Kadesh plain. Soundings and surface finds show it to have been occupied in the early and late Bronze Ages.

4397–KHORSABAD, the magnificent capital of Sargon, king of Assyria, is located ten miles north of Nineveh. It began to be excavated in 1842 by Paul Emile Botta, who found a great city of 741 acres, laid out in the form of a one-mile-wide fortified quadrangle with seven gateways and an imposing palace area of 25 acres.

The palace, along with its spacious domestic quarters, its luxurious harem, its three fine temples, and its towering ziggurat were all located on the 25-acre brick-terraced platform elevated forty-five feet above the surrounding area. The palace walls were constructed of large square stones, and varied in thickness from nine and a half to sixteen feet. At one place they were 25 feet thick. Within the palace were large reception halls profusely adorned with inscriptions, sculptures, and low-reliefs representing gods, kings, battle scenes, and religious ceremonies. Elaborately decorated winged bulls, beautifully cast or wrought in bronze, adorned many of the walls, and all principal doorways were flanked with magnificent and impressive human-headed winged bulls weighing from ten to thirty tons each.

"Gateways and reception rooms displayed all the splendor that Assyrian artists were able to give them, and the apartments in the harem were tastefully adorned with frescos, arabesques, and marble statues. All inner floors were either made of tile, or tamped clay, over which fine rugs were once laid. Outer courts and open spaces were paved with highly colored tile or marble blocks.

"Carved on the walls were a seemingly endless succession of sculptured pictures portraying in great detail the daily life, pleasures, appearance, customs, religion and history of the Assyrians. Wall slabs in three of the magnificent palace rooms gave in great detail the account of fifteen years of the mighty king's reign. Battles such as that of Raphia, and the second battle of Karkar were graphically portrayed. Various aspects of the active life of the powerful ruler were given, including his campaign to Palestine and the Mediterranean coast, where he crushed all resistance and brought about the collapse of all the countries except Judah."

They found "so many sculptures, statues, and so great a number of reliefs as to bewilder and even stagger them, yet they worked on with harmony, energy, and devotion during the hot and dusty summer months, and on until October when all traces of the palace walls disappeared."

Victor Place took over the excavations in 1851, and, "discovered fourteen inscribed barrel cylinders with historical records, a regular storage room full of pottery, another full of tiles, and another containing iron implements of every description in such a fine state of preservation by his Arab workmen. He was especially successful in gathering small clay, stone, glass, and metal objects as would throw added light on the everyday life of the people. He unearthed even the water-closets, the bakery and the 'wine cellar' of the king, the latter easily to be identified by a number of pointed jars resting in a double row of small holes in the paved floor, and discharging a strong smell of yeast after the first rain had dissolved their red sediments." Place also discovered "two magnificent human-headed bulls which are without doubt the most impressive products of Assyrian sculpture in existence. These he gave in exchange to Rawlinson, and they now stand at the entrance to the Assyrian transept in the British Museum.

"Place did not make so many startling discoveries of large monuments as had Botta, yet the many smaller objects which he uncovered were exceedingly important. And beyond all this was the fact that his work had made it possible to get a clearer picture of the city of Khorsabad and its founder and mighty ruler, Sargon II, 'the great King, the mighty king . . . the king of Assyria.'

"But who was this Sargon? Heretofore no secular historian had recorded the name and reign of an Assyrian monarch by this name. The only writer who had mentioned Sargon by name was Isaiah, the eloquent prophet, who had parenthetically said:

> In the year that the supreme commander, sent by Sargon king of Assyria, came to Ashdod and attacked and captured it (Isa 20:1).

"But certain learned men, outside the realm of faith in the historicity of the Bible, had said there was no Assyrian king by this name. Yet there, in Sargon's annals, carved deep on the walls of his palace, was his own 'authorized version' of the final siege and capture of Samaria, and the deportation of its people:

> In the first year of my reign . . . the city of Samaria I besieged and captured. 27,290 people from its midst I carried captive. 50 chariots I took there as an addition to my royal force . . . I returned and made more than formerly to dwell. My officers over them as governors I appointed. Tribute and taxes I imposed upon them after the Assyrian manner.

And, further on in his annals, Sargon helps to explain a passage in Isaiah 20 when he described his capture of Ashdod:"

> Azuri, king of Ashdod, also planned in his heart not to pay tribute, and among the kings of his neighborhood disseminated hatred of Assyria. On account of the evil he had done I cut off his lordship over the people of his land. In the anger of my heart, the mass of my army I did not muster. I did not assemble my whole camp. With only my usual bodyguard I marched against Ashdod; I besieged it, and I conquered it. I took as spoil his gods, his wife, his sons, his daughters, his possessions, the treasures of his palace, together with the people of his land.

4398–KIDRON. The Valley of the Kidron rises north of Jerusalem in an insignificant depression known as Wady el Joz. After flowing east for a half mile, it circles and runs south, passing between the eastern wall of Jerusalem and the Garden of Gethsemane. It passes through the King's Vale and the King's Garden, to finally join with the Valley of Hinnom at the well of En Rogel.

Excavations show that as much as seventy to eighty feet of rubbish have accumulated in the valley, and that the bed of the stream has been pushed eastward as much as seventy feet in places. This is not surprising, however, since the rubbish from the city and portions of the walls have been rolled into this valley for centuries.

4399–KIRIATH JEARIM, now called Abu Ghosh, is situated nine miles west of Jerusalem on the road to Tel Aviv and Joppa. It was here that the ark of the covenant remained for twenty years between the time that the Philistines sent it back to Israel and the reign of David, who brought it up to Jerusalem (1Ch 13:5–8).

In 1928 the Benedictine Fathers plowed up flint implements and stone vessels on the site near the Crusader church which stands on the site. R. Newville sank exploratory trenches, which yielded meager returns. During excavations carried out in 1950 and 1967, they found houses with plastered floors and hearths, and twelve human skeletons, two of which were buried beneath the floor.

In 1944 the Benedictine Fathers excavated two tombs and the remains of a large reservoir, ascribed to the Roman Tenth Legion, which had been stationed on the site. The entrance to one of the tombs had a round stone like the one covering the tomb of Christ.

4400–KIRIATH SEPHER, "City of the Scribe," is now identified with Tell Beit Mirsim, eleven miles southwest of Hebron. It once went by the name of Debir.

The mound was partially excavated in four campaigns by Drs. Kyle and Albright (1926–32). It was found that the city was first started about 2200 B.C.; a number of cities arose and fell on the mound. During the eighth century B.C. it seems to have reached its peak of prosperity as a center for a textile dyeing industry. It was finally burned and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C. The seal of Eliakim, dating 597 B.C., was found on this level.

4401–KISH, a suburb of the city of Babylon, and possibly a part of greater Babylon, is one of the world's oldest cities of which we have record. It was an important city from the 4th millennium B.C. to the 4th century A.D. It once extended over an area of about ten square miles. Today it is a series of mounds known as Tell el-Ukheimir, five miles long and two miles wide. It is divided into eastern and western Kish by an ancient river bed, which many regard as the old bed of the Euphrates before it began to shift westward.

Kish was excavated by Oxford University, and the Field Museum of Chicago. The campaign was liberally financed by H. Weld Blundell. Prof. Stephen Langdon, of Oxford, and his colleagues, E. Mackay and M. E. Watelin, directed the excavation. Henry Field and others at times aided in the work.

The excavators worked large crews of men, and carried their diggings down systematically to virgin soil. In doing so they revealed a sequence of life and cultures in ten or more stratifications or occupation levels, of which six were estimated to be more than 5000 years old. The stratum correlated to the period 3000–2900 B.C. was composed entirely of fine sand and clay, one and one-half feet thick and contained no trace of sea shells or of marine life. This layer was probably laid down by a great flood. There were occupied levels both above and below this alluvial deposit.

FIELD MUSEUM, CHICAGO

Clay tablet from Kish.

The discovery of this layer was regarded as visible proof of the great Deluge that figures so largely in the Bible and in Babylonian legend. A prism was discovered that gives the entire list of the Sumerian kings, before and after the Flood, down to 2000 B.C. The earlier reigns were of legendary length, but the later periods correspond fairly well with evidence found in many other excavations.

At Kish excavators found a well-preserved Babylonian temple of about 550 B.C., begun by Nebuchadnezzar and continued, but left unfinished, by Nabonidus. They also found a mother-of-pearl and lapis lazuli adorned palace, from the time of Sargon I (2400 B.C.), various objects showing the art of the Sassanian period, and relics of the Sumerians, including a four-wheeled chariot made of wood and put together with copper nails. Before the chariot were the skeletal remains of the horses which had drawn it.

The excavators found a bone stylus, which for the first time showed how cuneiform characters were produced, along with hoards of cuneiform tablets and other objects of interest. One tablet seems to bear on its face the earliest form of pictographic script yet discovered in Babylonia. Three hundred tablets of a slightly later date show that the occupant's pantheon of gods included only a sky god, an earth god, and a sun god. The sky god was represented as the original god from whom all other gods had descended—eventually about 5000 gods in all. After reading these tablets and considering other evidence found at Kish, Erech, and Shuruppak, Langdon wrote:

In my opinion, the history of the oldest religion of man is a rapid decline from monotheism to extreme polytheism and wide-spread belief in evil spirits. It is in a very true sense the history of the fall of man.

4402–KORAZIN is now identified with the ruins called (in Arabic) Kerazeh, about two miles north of Capernaum. Among the extensive ruins are the remains of a synagogue somewhat similar to, but smaller than, the one at Capernaum. It is constructed of black basalt stone, and liberally ornamented like the Capernaum synagogue, but is far less beautiful. There are sculptured symbols here, some of which are pagan (a Medusa head and a centaur struggling with a lion), but others represent birds and animals, and some depict people gathering and pressing grapes.

In this synagogue the excavators discovered a stone chair, corresponding to Moses' seat mentioned by Jesus in Matthew 23:2. It was a special chair of honor, reserved for the principal teacher or speaker in the synagogues of that day. This one had armrests, a high back, and, on its front, an Aramaic inscription which read: "Remembered for good be Yudan the son of Ishmael who made the portico and the steps at the gate. As his reward may he share with the righteous."

4403–LACHISH (modern Tell ed-Duweir) was an important fortified city which occupied a strategic position in the Shephelah, or lowlands, of Judah, thirty miles southwest of Jerusalem.

The incoming Israelites under Joshua took Lachish on the second day of siege (Jos 10:32), then passed on without burning the city (Jos 11:13). Later, King Rehoboam fortified Lachish and made it "very strong" (2Ch 11:9–12).

During his excavations at Nineveh in 1850 Layard found that of all the forty-six cities conquered by Sennacherib during his famous campaign to Syria and Palestine in 701 B.C., Lachish seems to have been the source of his greatest pride, for on his return to Nineveh, Sennacherib had his artists and sculptors record the taking of the city on his palace walls in thirteen panels, which, when taken together, form one of the most extensive and elaborate battle panoramas ever made.

Mr. J. L. Starkey and his associates directed the excavations at Lachish from 1932 to January 10, 1938, and made many significant discoveries, the most important being twenty-one letters (now known as The Lachish Letters) which they found among the ashes and charcoal in the guard room adjoining the outer gate of the city. These letters were written with "carbon ink by a certain Hoshaiah (Ne 12:32; Jer 42:1; 43:2), a subordinate military officer stationed at an outpost near Jerusalem, to Joash the commanding officer at Lachish. These short messages were written during the last years of Jeremiah (c.588 B.C.) and reflect the troubled period through which the kingdom was passing during Zedekiah's reign just before the fall of Lachish and some two years before the fall of Jerusalem. They were evidently written within a period of a few days or weeks, as is indicated from the similarity of the fragments, five of which fit together as pieces of one vessel."

Letter I contains a list of nine proper names, five of which are found in the Old Testament. Three appear only during the time of Jeremiah. In letter IV Hoshaiah writes:

> And let my lord know that we are watching for the signals of Lachish according to all the indications which my lord hath given, for we cannot see Azekah.

Jeremiah mentions signals (Jer 6:1), and tells how the king of Babylon "was fighting against Jerusalem and the other cities of Judah that were still holding out—Lachish, and Azekah. These were the only fortified cities left in Judah" (Jer 34:7).

Letter VI refers to the words of the princes as "weakening our hands," all of which makes interesting reading when compared with Jeremiah 38:4:

> Then the officials said to the king, "This man should be put to death. He is discouraging the soldiers who are left in this city, as well as all the people, by the things he is saying to them."

"These letters reflect the tense social and political situation of the times when Jeremiah prophesied and was placed in prison. They also furnish direct evidence concerning the tools and ink employed in writing the Hebrew alphabet script used by Baruch."

> Then they asked Baruch, "Tell us, how did you come to write all this? Did Jeremiah dictate it?"
> "Yes," Baruch replied, "he dictated all these words to me, and I wrote them in ink on the scroll" (Jer 36:17–18).

Professor Haupert of Moravian College and Theological Seminary says:

> The real significance of the Lachish letters can hardly be exaggerated. No archaeological discovery to date has had a more direct bearing upon the Old Testament. The scribes who wrote the letters (for there was more than one) wrote with genuine artistry in classical Hebrew, and we have virtually a new section of Old Testament literature: a supplement to Jeremiah.

Dr. Albright says:

> In these letters we find ourselves in exactly the age of Jeremiah with social and political conditions agreeing perfectly with the picture drawn in the book that bears his name.

4404–LAGASH, known in modern times as Tello, lies some 50 miles north of Ur. It was excavated by the French under Ernest de Sarzec, who began in 1877 and continued at intervals until 1900.

Some of the things brought to light by the excavations were: (1) the remarkable stele of Eannatum (2900 B.C.), known as the Stele of the Vultures, which shows the soldiers advancing to battle in a solid phalanx protected by lances and shields, while the vultures are devouring the slain among the enemy forces; (2) the copper statue of Gudea, king of Lagash about 2600 B.C., along with his records inscribed on clay prisms; (3) a magnificent collection of diorite statues of the early governors of Lagash, containing some 40,000 inscribed tablets which contributed much to our knowledge of the early economic history of the country of Sumer, of which Lagash was a strategic center.

4405–LAODICEA, the home of one of the seven churches of Revelation (1:4, 11) was located on the ancient highway leading up from Ephesus through the Maeander and Lycus valleys to the east and on to Syria. Colosse lies ten miles farther east, while Hierapolis is six miles northeast of Laodicea.

The city was founded about 250 B.C. by Antiochus II, who named it after his wife, Laodice, and populated it with Syrians and Jews whom he had transplanted from Babylonia. It was situated on an almost square plateau a hundred feet above the valley, and was surrounded by extensive fertile fields and good grazing grounds. The place soon became famous for its beauty and its wealth, derived largely from sheep, whose glossy black wool was woven into garments and carpets. The city was also a center for banking and other financial operations, conducted for the most part by a prominent and wealthy Jewish circle. The city struck its own coins from the second century B.C. on and eventually became the secular capital of west Phrygia, the "Metropolis of Asia," and in early Christian history the most prominent bishopric in Phrygia.

In the last part of the first century, when the Book of Revelation was written, the Laodicean church was apparently taken with the atmosphere of affluence so prominent in the place, and was reproved because it was rich in material things, but lukewarm in things of the spirit. In Christ's counsel for it to buy from him gold refined in the fire, white clothes, and salve to put on their eyes (Rev 3:18), Sir William Ramsey saw references to Laodicea's wealth, its famous garments, and perhaps to the "Phrygian powder" for diseases of the eyes, which possibly was compounded here.

Under the wars of the Seljuk Turks the city declined, and was abandoned soon after the thirteenth century. The town of Denizli was built near the ruins of Laodicea, known today as Eski Hissar. It is unexcavated, but the lines of its city walls, its two theaters, and its one-thousand-foot-long stadium may be traced.

4406–LYDDA, now called Ludd, is a town of considerable importance which lies eleven miles southeast of Joppa. In Old Testament times it was known as Lod (1Ch 8:12), in New Testament times as the place where Peter healed the paralytic named Aeneas. In Crusader times it became famous as the traditional site of the martyrdom of St. George, the patron saint of England.

The ruins of the older settlements lie buried beneath the present city. Only the impressive ruins of the Crusader Church of St. George remain.

4407–LYSTRA, the place where Paul healed the crippled man, and as a result the people regarded Paul and Barnabas as gods—called Barnabas "Zeus" and Paul "Hermes." Yet later, at the instigation of Jews from Antioch, they stoned Paul and left him for dead.

The identification was uncertain until 1885, when J. R. S. Sterrett discovered an inscribed Roman altar three and a half feet high and a foot thick at a mound some 25 miles southwest of Iconium. On the stone, in Latin, was "L Y S T R A," along with the statement that it had become a Roman colony under Augustus Caesar.

4408–MARESHAH was the home of the prophet Micah and of Eliezer son of Dodavahu, who prophesied the breaking up of Jehoshaphat's ships so that they could not go to Tarshish (2Ch 20:37). Rehoboam fortified Mareshah, and Asa not only strengthened these fortifications, but used them to defeat the Ethiopian forces under Zerah (2Ch 14:12). The city came to an end in 40 B.C. when it was destroyed by the Parthians.

The six-acre circular mound was excavated in 1898–1900 by Bliss and Macalister who uncovered walls, gates, and buildings of the Hellenistic period (333–63 B.C.). This was the level above the one in which the prophet Micah lived. In 1902 J. P. Peters discovered the now famous "Painted Tombs of Marissa," some few hundred feet northeast of Marissa. For beauty and execution of design they excel all other known tombs of Palestine. They were private burial tombs of Sidonian immigrants who lived in Mareshah about the third century B.C.

Professor Andre Parrot began excavation on the 300-acre mound in 1933, and during his many campaigns uncovered a wealth of material depicting life in patriarchal times. He uncovered the royal palace of Zimri-lim, king of Mari, which covered seven acres, and contained more than 250 rooms and courts, in addition to the great audience room, administrative offices, and quarters for visiting officials from other lands. Two of the rooms were school rooms where youngsters were taught reading, writing, and arithmetic in order to train them for life, and especially to become future scribes. In the center of the palace was the king's private chapel, which had three open courts, the innermost of which was 75 feet long, with walls 30 feet high. In this chapel was the statue of Ishtar, the goddess of fertility. Water flowed through the statue and out of a vase which she held in her hand. This was the same goddess whom the Hebrews called "Ashtoreth the goddess of the Sidonians" (1Ki 11:33).

In the royal archives of the king's palace the excavators discovered more than 20,000 tablets. Some 5000 of these were letters to the king from district officers of the state of Mari. Others were diplomatic letters from princes and rulers throughout Mesopotamia and Syria. There were letters from Hammurabi, king of Babylon, to whom Mari fell during the 32nd year of Zimri-lim's reign. In the district officials' letters frequent reference was made to the cities of Haran, Nahor, Serug, Peleg, and the "mound of Terah"—places mentioned in the Old Testament. The personal names of Reu, Terah, Nahor, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Benjamin, and David are so common in these letters that Dr. Albright has said:

> Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob no longer seem isolated figures, much less reflections of later Israelite history; they now appear as true children of their age, bearing the same names, moving about over the same territory, visiting the same towns (especially Haran and Nahor), practicing the same customs as their contemporaries.

4410–MASADA, one of the world's most startling natural fortifications, is a majestic twenty-three acre flat-top mesa, ten miles south of En Gedi and two and one-half miles off the west shore of the Dead Sea. Shaped like a great ship 2,000 feet long and 1,000 feet wide in the middle, it tapers to narrow promontories at the northern and the southern tips. Its sides are composed of almost sheer rock cliffs a thousand feet

Being almost inaccessible, and far removed from the usual travel routes, it was first fortified by "Jonathan the High Priest" as a royal retreat during the second century B.C., when it was named Masada.

In 40 B.C. Herod fled from Jerusalem to Masada with his family to escape from Mattathian Antigonus, who had been made king by the Parthians. Leaving his family, his brother Joseph, and 800 men to defend it against siege, Herod traveled to Rome to seek help. The rock fortress proved its value on this occasion and, after his return from Rome, Herod chose Masada as his place of retreat and refuge in the event of possible attack by Cleopatra of Egypt, or in case the Jewish people should try to depose him and restore the former dynasty to power.

Between the years 36 and 30 B.C. Herod encircled the entire top of the plateau with a great white casemate wall 4,590 feet long, twenty feet high, and 13 feet wide, with three gates, and thirty defense towers. The wall and the towers were coated with white plaster. As his royal abode, he erected the "Western Palace," a very large and wonderfully fine building with throne room, living and reception quarters with luxurious baths, colored mosaic floors, and sumptuous apartments. About his palace and at other places on the mesa were colonnaded porticos, cloisters, walkways, cisterns, groves, gardens, and storerooms for arms and provisions sufficient to supply ten thousand men for many years. "And thus was the citadel fortified by nature and the hands of men." Later, to make his retreat doubly secure, and more pleasant, he moved his architectural activities to Masada's northern precipice, where he erected his three-tiered hanging palace, an architectural wonder of the ancient world.

But Herod was to use Masada only as an occasional winter resort and possibly for a few vacation trips. After Herod's death in 4 B.C., a Roman garrison was stationed at Masada, and this occupation continued until A.D. 66, when a large-scale Jewish revolt broke out all over the land. At this time the Jews made a lightning raid on Masada and displaced the Romans. As fighting continued throughout Palestine, many more zealous Jews came to Masada and strengthened their garrison.

After the fall of Jerusalem under Titus in A.D. 70, the few surviving Jews who had evaded capture made their way across the Judean wilderness to Masada and joined the patriots in their determination to continue the battle for freedom. In the autumn of A.D. 72, Flavius Silva, the Roman general, took his Tenth Legion, its auxiliary troops, and thousands of Jewish prisoners of war, and laid siege to Masada, then defended by Eleazar, leader of the Zealots. For long months the patriots defended themselves, but when the Romans eventually completed an enormous earthen ramp to the top, placed battering rams against the walls, and set fire to the fortification, the defenders saw they could resist no more. Eleazar made a speech in which he set forth the horrors of the fate that awaited them as prisoners of the Romans, and begged them to kill themselves rather than fall into the hands of the enemy. The garrison consented.

Embracing their loved ones, with sword or dagger they dealt the fatal blows. Collecting all their treasures in piles, they fed them to the flames. Next they chose ten men by lots to slay all the rest. When these ten had done the deed, they again cast lots to determine who should kill his nine companions and then himself. In silence, so the enemy would suspect nothing, one of the most touching tragedies in human history took place.

The next day, April 15, 73, when the Romans at last got into the fortress they had besieged for so long, they found alive only two women and five children who had concealed themselves, and a mass of 960 dead bodies. An awful silence took the place of the clamor they had expected.

When the Tenth Legion broke camp and marched back to Jerusalem, a small guard remained at the fortress for some years, after which desolate Masada returned to even further ruin during the following nineteen centuries.

The site was first identified in modern times by Edward Robinson in 1838, and was later visited and described by other explorers. Major interest, however, was focused on Masada in 1953, when S. Guttman traced the serpentine twistings of the "snake path" on the east, located Herod's water system, established the general outline of the buildings, and led study groups of young people on strenuous cross-country hikes to Masada. He urged that large-scale excavations be carried out at this important site.

A careful archaeological survey was done in 1955–56 by a joint Israeli expedition, consisting of archaeologists M. Avi-Yonah, N. Avigad, I. Dunnayevsky, and other volunteers. This was followed by three large-scale seasons of excavations from 1963 to 1965 under the direction of Professor Yegael Yadin, sponsored by the Hebrew University, the Israel Exploration Society, and the Israeli Department of Antiquities and Museums. Private funds from Britain, plus a brief announcement in the Jerusalem Post, and a series of brilliant articles by Patric O'Donovan in the London Observer brought adequate funds, and hundreds of youthful volunteers—Jews and non-Jews from Israel and twenty-eight other countries around the world.

A campsite was chosen on the west, at the foot of the ramp, near the base of the old Roman camp. With the skillful help of the Army's Engineer Corps, ground was leveled and prepared for the base camp. Buildings were constructed for the office and workshops of the expedition and tents put up for permanent staff members and volunteers. When all was made ready, the excavation of one of the world's most important archaeological sites was begun.

Water System. A group of young volunteers climbed along the lower northern slope of the great rock to examine two rows of what looked like dark caves, one series above the other. These proved to be twelve huge square cisterns which were cut in two parallel rows. After these were cleaned it was estimated that each cistern had a capacity of up to 140,000 cubic feet. Together the twelve cisterns could hold 1,400,000 cubic feet of water. On two wadis Herod had constructed dams which diverted rainwater through open channels to the cisterns. Water from these cisterns was carried by servants and donkeys up to another set of cisterns at the top of the plateau.

Wall. The excavators found the entire summit of Masada enclosed, except at the northern tip, with a casemate wall (a double wall with the inner space divided into rooms). Its circumference measured 4,590 feet, which corresponds exactly with the seven stadia of Josephus' description. The wall had 70 rooms, 30 towers, and four elaborate gates.

Herod's Three-tiered "Hanging Palace." At Masada's most northern tip, at its highest point and overhanging the very edge of the precipice, the excavators found King Herod's three-terraced royal villa. His luxury palace enjoyed the coolest climate, the finest natural defense advantages, and the most commanding view of the surrounding countryside.

On the Upper terrace, which served as Herod's living quarters, were four spacious and highly decorated apartment rooms, several hallways, and a semicircular court-balcony extending to the very edge of the cliff. All floors were paved with black and white mosaics arranged in geometric patterns.

The Middle terrace, 60 feet below, was a circular and roofed colonnaded pavilion designed for relaxation and leisurely enjoyment. The view from here is breathtaking.

The Lower terrace, 50 feet below the middle one, consisted of an elaborate apartment, with its rooms and private bath built on a 54-foot square, surrounded by two series of columns that formed a double colonnade. The walls were of imitation marble inlaid in places with precious stones. The magnificent frescoes which adorned the southern wall were so well painted that they have maintained their freshness throughout the past 2,000 years. Here Herod could enjoy his leisure with his companions, refresh himself in the bathhouse, and then banquet and relax against the pillars and decorated walls while taking in the impressive view.

Inner staircases, "hidden and invisible," connected the three terraces. A powerful supporting wall eighty feet high was built on the precipice underneath the lower terrace of the hanging villa.

The Western Palace. In addition to the three-terraced palace villa, Herod constructed a main official ceremonial palace, "the Palace of the King," on the western side of Masada. This, the largest building on the summit, consists of four wings and covers an area of some 36,000 square feet. In it were the royal apartments, built around a large central court and a magnificently decorated reception hall leading into the throne room. There were administrative quarters, sumptuous apartments, guest rooms, luxurious bathrooms with tubs, a cold water pool, service rooms in which was a kitchen with huge cooking stoves large enough to take ten to twelve pots at a time. The storeroom wing of the palace was 210 feet long. Three small richly decorated palaces nearby probably housed members of the royal family. North of these were two rectangular buildings, apparently an administrative center and the residence of high officials.

Bathhouse. South of the Palace villa was a large bathhouse with a commodious court, where people might visit, philosophize, or just idle away the time. The beautifully decorated foreroom was for disrobing. The largest of the rooms was a hot room (caldarium), beneath which was another floor. Between the two floors were more than 200 small pillars supporting the upper floor and forming the firing area where the heat was produced. Adjoining this was the tepid room (tepidarium), and adjoining this the cold room (frigidarium). It was as fine a bath as could be found in the Roman empire.

Storehouses. The general storehouse complex, situated south and east of the bathhouse, consisted of two large rectangular buildings constructed of stone slabs. The east one contained four rooms, and the larger one on the south had eleven surprisingly long narrow rooms. The corn, wine, oil, flour, pulse, and fresh fruits of all kinds—each kept in a separate room in special storage jars—were carefully preserved and were in good condition when the Romans took over. There were wine amphoras, inscribed as having been sent to Herod, King of Judea, in the year 19 B.C. Other storage jars bore Hebrew and Aramaic inscriptions. Many of the Herodian vessels were used by the Jewish defenders of Masada.

The large Apartment building just south of the storerooms had many identical living quarters built around a large central court. Each dwelling unit had a private court and two small rooms and probably housed many of the top administrators.

Other smaller buildings, such as the synagogue and the mikve (ritual bath), were located adjoining the casemate wall on the southeast.

The remains of the Zealots. While Eleazar ben Ya'ir and nearly a thousand Jewish Zealots lived in Masada for seven years, they made limited use of the two large palace buildings, the apartment complex, the storage rooms, the baths, kitchens, the synagogue and other minor buildings. Many, however, lived in the 110 commodious rooms inside the casemate walls and towers and in modest structures which they erected on the open ground for themselves.

On removing the debris from the private bath area on the lower terrace of Herod's pleasure palace, excavators found remains of three skeletons lying on the steps near the cold water pool. One was that of a man about twenty, probably one of the commanders of Masada. Nearby were hundreds of silvered scales of armor, scores of iron arrowheads, fragments of a prayer shawl (talith), and an ostracon inscribed with Hebrew letters. "Also on the steps was the skeleton of a young woman, with her scalp preserved intact because of the extreme dryness of the atmosphere. Her dark hair, beautifully plaited, looked as if it had just been freshly coiffured. Next to it the plaster was stained with what looked like blood. By her side were delicately fashioned lady's leather sandals, styled in the traditional pattern of the period. The third skeleton was that of a child." Yadin said, "There could be no doubt that what our eyes beheld were the remains of some of the defenders of Masada . . . Even the veterans and more cynical among us stood frozen, gazing with awe."

In the middle terrace of the palace villa were found hundreds of arrows in heaps, where they had been piled and intentionally set on fire. Other arrows were found in the western palace and elsewhere on Masada.

Large collections of coins were found in the public buildings of Masada, such as the storehouses, the bathhouse, the ritual baths, and bakeries. Most of these bore a vine-leaf design on one side and a chalice design on the other. The inscription in Hebrew reads,

"For the freedom of Zion." In a bag under the floor of one dwelling were found thirty-eight silver shekels and half-shekels struck in year four of the revolt. The remains of a cloth bag were still adhering to the coins. Nearby, under a thick layer of ashes, a bronze box was found in which were six shekels and six half-shekels.

In the two large groups of storehouses were hundreds of broken storage jars containing remnants of food. Many of the jars bore labels describing their contents in Aramaic or Hebrew. Some bore Hebrew inscriptions indicating the owner's names. Several of the vessels carried the letter Tav, which stood for the Hebrew word Truma ("priestly due"), indicating that the defenders of Masada strictly adhered to such commandments as that of tithing. Many of the dishes from which the defenders ate their meals were made of stone similar to the stoneware found at early Jericho.

In one of the storerooms were stocks of tin and other metals. A few storerooms were completely empty, with no vessels and no sign of fire, which seems to give credence to Josephus' account that certain stores of food were intentionally left to show the Romans that the defenders of Masada died by their own free choice and not through starvation. The present undamaged storerooms are possibly the ones in which the Zealots left the food, later eaten by the Romans.

In the 110 rooms along the casemate wall, and in other homes of the Zealots, excavators found heaps of spent embers containing the remains of clothing, sandals, lamps, combs, and utensils "which told the story of how, perhaps only minutes before the end, each family had collected together its humble belongings and set them on fire . . . These small heaps of embers were perhaps the sights that moved us most during our excavations."

The most exciting find was that of fragments of fourteen parchment scrolls, which included parts of the books of Genesis, Leviticus, Deuteronomy, Psalms, and Ezekiel, which in text and spelling are identical with the traditional Hebrew Bible. Also they found a fragment of the long-lost original Hebrew version of the Book of Jubilees, a copy of the lost original Hebrew version of Ecclesiasticus (The Wisdom of Ben-Sira), and a portion of a scroll identical with one of the Dead Sea Scrolls. The latter seems to indicate that at least some of the Essenes from Qumran took part in the revolt along with the Zealots. Of the some seven hundred ostrica (potsherds bearing inscriptions) found, the most interesting are eleven small fragments, each bearing a different name but all written by the same hand. One bears the name "Ben Yair," which may well be the brave commander. Indeed these ostrica may be the ones drawn by the ten last-surviving men to determine which among them would kill the others before killing himself.

Most of Masada has been made attractively accessible to modern tourists by the installation of a cable car that whisks visitors in minutes from the Dead Sea shore to the top of the plateau. One can enjoy a breathtaking view to the north, west, and south over the surrounding desert scenery of the wilderness of Judea. To the east are the deep blue waters of the Dead Sea, with its strange, gray-white, chalky-marl El Lisan Peninsula, and the mountains of Moab in the distance. Visitors can look down on the various Roman siege works and camps and can stroll through King Herod's palaces and admire his private baths and columned halls, his beautiful marble or mosaic floors, and his multi-colored painted walls. One can sit in the Jewish synagogue where biblical scroll fragments from the first century A.D. were found, and view the fortress' strong walls, gates, and other structures. In imagination visitors can relive the tense and awful time during which the zealous Jewish defenders, locked up on their mountain fortress, looked down to see Roman soldiers, with Jewish slaves captured in Jerusalem in A.D. 70, building the earthen ramp which eventually would become the means of sealing their doom.

One easily comes under the spell of Masada, and can readily understand why it has become one of the major attractions for tourists, a national shrine to Israel, and the place that has drawn the Jewish youth of our generation by the thousands to climb to its summit in solemn pilgrimage. On Masada's heights the recruits of the armored units of the defense forces of modern Israel swear the oath of allegiance with the poignant words: "Masada shall not fall again."

4411–MEDEBA, one of the important cities of Moab, and the traditional home of Ruth and Orpah, was the place where a large mosaic map of the Holy Land was discovered in 1896. The map measured 40 by 60 feet and represented the region from Egypt to Constantinople. The place names are in Greek letters, the sea in deep green, the plains in light brown, and the mountains in dark brown. The Dead Sea, the Jordan River, Jericho, and Jerusalem are well preserved. The large map is now in the floor of the Greek church at Medeba, and is shown to thousands of tourists who visit the city, which is located some three miles east of Mount Nebo.

4412–MEGIDDO, the "chariot city" which guarded the way for the Pass of Megiddo, was excavated in 1903–05 by Dr. G. Schumacher, who cut a cross-section trench through the thirteen-acre mound. The finds of minor importance were quite overshadowed by the discovery of a beautiful jasper seal which read, "Shema, officer of Jeroboam." The seal belonged to the time of Jeroboam I (931–910 B.C.), and this was the signate of one of his officers, possibly governor of the city.

In 1925 Dr. Henry Breasted organized an expedition financed by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Dr. Clarence

S. Fisher directed the work until 1927, and Mr. P. L. O. Guy carried it on until 1934, when Gordon Laud assumed responsibility as director.

Many discoveries were made at Megiddo. Among the first were the fragments of a stele on which were inscribed in hieroglyphics the name Shesauk—the Shishak spoken of in the Bible as having used Megiddo as a base for his successful raid on Palestine (1Ki 14:25, 26). This gives striking realism to the biblical account, and so impressed Dr. Breasted that he said, "Imagine my emotions as I sat there on that mound and read the name of Shishak on this broken monument, and recalled with vivid recollection when as a boy in Sunday school I had read of this very Shishak of Egypt who had attacked Palestine and carried away booty."

On the fourth occupational level of Megiddo—the level of King Solomon's time—the excavators uncovered stable compounds large enough to accommodate 450 chariot horses. These stables were arranged in sections so that each unit contained individual stalls for twenty-four horses. There were twelve stalls on each side, facing each other, and at the head of each stall was a stone manger from which the horse ate hay or grain. Between the rows of stables were aisles or passageways where chariots stood, or through which they were drawn. Nearby were large lots in which the horses were exercised, and adjacent to these were the ruins of living quarters for the grooms or horsemen.

> Solomon had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horses, which he kept in the chariot cities and also with him in Jerusalem (2Ch 9:25).

On the seventh level, in the spring of 1937, a splendid collection of nearly four hundred objects of carved ivory was uncovered in the basement of a palace building dated about 1150 B.C. There were plaques, boxes, game boards, cups, bowls, spoons, combs, beads, rings, figurines, and other items in even greater variety than those found in the excavation at Samaria. In variety and workmanship, this artistic collection was of great significance in relation to the many biblical references to ivory.

4413–MEIRON. In their attempts to suppress Jewish resistance, the Romans destroyed Jerusalem and its temple in A.D. 70, Masada in 73, rebuilt Jerusalem as Aelia Capitolina in 130, and quelled the final revolt under Bar Kochba in 135. After these tragedies the Jewish leaders, along with the majority of the surviving Jewish population, fled from Judea to Galilee. By the end of the second century A.D., Upper Galilee was dotted with Jewish villages. Among the four largest of these was Meiron, located on the eastern foothills of Mount Meiron, the highest mountain in Israel (3600 feet above sea level). Rainfall was plentiful and to the northeast was a vast tract of land where olives, figs, and dates grew at their best.

During the next two centuries the people terraced the land, built canals, streets, and cisterns, and expanded settlements to the crest of the mountain, where eventually they erected the largest synagogue in Galilee. Meanwhile Meiron's sanctity grew by means of a number of famous sages there who studied the Bible in depth. In cooperation with other scholar-teachers, they produced the Palestinian Talmud, which along with the Babylonian Talmud, is the Oral Law, composed of legal discussions concerning details of daily life. Jewish tradition states that it was here that Rabbi Simon ben Yochai compiled the Zohar ("Book of Splendor"), from which Jewish mysticism draws its inspiration. In 360 Meiron was abandoned, for reasons unknown.

Eric and Carol Myers, professors in the Department of Religion at Duke University, excavated at Meiron from 1971 to 1975. On the crest of Mount Meiron they uncovered the great third-century synagogue. Two thirds of the facade of the synagogue, built of dressed stones, was still standing in position up to the height of the lintels. In another area they found a rectangular tower which was still standing to a height of almost 20 feet at some points. In the residential area they uncovered a domestic-industrial building with many rooms, one of which seemed to be an office or waiting room. In an interior room was a stone workbench and a semicircular stone platform with curved stone sides, which seems to have been used for making barrels in connection with Meiron's well-known trade in olives and olive oil. In another room were uncovered 19 large jars, still filled with their original contents of barley, walnuts, and cowpeas—largely intact, but in a carbonized state. In the same room were found a brass bell and two unusually large glass patterns, approximately 14 inches in diameter. In a multichambered tomb west of the synagogue were found nearly 100 disarticulated skeletons. In a tomb of the first century A.D. was a ceramic inkwell, probably buried with a scribe. In another was a large metal key, which someone suggested might have been intended to provide access to the "gates of heaven."

In its finer years Meiron was given added sanctity by the burial here of Rabbi Simon ben Yochai; his son Rabbi Eleazar; Rabbi Akiba; and even rabbis Hillel and Shamai—all celebrated scholars famous for their interpretations of the Mosaic Law and the Talmud.

Once a year, on the anniversary of the death of Rabbi Simon ben Yochai, Meiron becomes a Jewish pilgrimage center second in importance only to Jerusalem.

4414—MEMPHIS, the capital of Egypt in the earliest times, and the greatest of all ancient commercial cities of Egypt, was situated on the west bank of the Nile, fourteen miles south of Cairo. It was founded by Menes, first ruler of united Egypt.

Here Abraham and Sarah and their nephew Lot came almost 4000 years ago. Here Joseph was sold as a slave, and later ruled as prime minister and federal food administrator. It was here that Moses was brought up and became learned in all the wisdom of Egypt; and it was here that he and his brother Aaron stood before Pharaoh and demanded that he let the people of Israel go.

At Memphis "Pharaoh and all his officials and all the Egyptians got up during the night, and there was loud wailing in Egypt, for there was not a house without someone dead" (Ex 12:30).

"As the chief seat of learning, Memphis majored in the worship of Ptah, and the sacred Apis bull. Ptah, according to Egyptian belief, was 'the Mind of the Universe,' who created all gods and men by thinking them into existence. He was especially revered by artists, skilled craftsmen, and men of letters. Osiris was god of the living and the dead. Almost all phases of life here and hereafter were controlled in one way or another by Osiris. For Apis the Sacred Bull, a magnificent temple was constructed which was known as the 'Cathedral' of Egypt. These two great temples—that of Ptah and Apis—were united by a long avenue of sphinxes.

"At the height of its prosperity the main portion of the city measured some eight miles long by four miles wide, and sustained a population of near 500,000.

Memphis came to its final end with the Arab invasion of the 7th century A.D., and many of its fine ruins above ground were used in the construction of the new Arabic city of Fostat, on the east bank of the Nile. The only remains of Memphis "were in the form of ruined structures, granite blocks, broken obelisks, statues, and its alabaster columned streets, which lay buried beneath ten to twenty feet of shifting sands until the latter part of the nineteenth century, when excavators were able to show its layout and to exhibit the many interesting objects discovered after having lain under the desert sands from 1200 to 2000 years.

"The various excavators uncovered the remains of four temples, of Ptah, of Proteus, of Isis, and the temple of Apis, founded by Psammetichus. They found the remains of two palaces, and a fortress that covered two acres and possessed a great court 110 feet square. Later they found the gigantic colossus of Rameses II, and the lesser colossus of the same, and a large and beautiful alabaster sphinx 26 feet long, 14 feet high and weighing 80 tons. In 1928 the writer, while a guest of Reisner, saw them uncover wide, stone-paved streets, bordered by long lines of extremely beautiful alabaster columns. But of all the finds in or near Memphis the great necropolis or cemetery west of the city was the most interesting and revealing.

"Here, along the rim of the desert, well out of the reach of inundation by Nile waters and in keeping with the Egyptian's idea of immortality, is a vast cemetery two miles wide and some sixty miles long, beginning at the Pyramids of Abu Roash in the north and ending with the Lahun Pyramid southeast of the Fayum. Like a gigantic field of death, seventeen miles of this 'silent city of the dead' is extremely crowded with the remains of some forty to fifty millions of animals, men, women, children and pharaohs. Some are merely covered in the sand, some are in carefully dug graves, some are in well-built mastabas, and some are in over seventy pyramids—a fabulous necropolis in which ancient men laid away the bodies of their dead. Perhaps no cemetery in the world is so extensive, and certainly none so famous. How aptly did the prophet Hosea exclaim 'Memphis shall bury them,' (Hosea 9:6) for certainly they have buried on a scale that is unprecedented anywhere in the world."

The ruins of the magnificent cathedral temple of the Apis (Ah-fis) or Sacred Bull were uncovered, and underneath was found an underground avenue, 320 feet long. Later excavations increased the total length to 1120 feet. Arranged along the sides of this avenue were sixty-four large burial chambers. In the center of each was a huge red or black granite sarcophagus 12 feet long, 9 feet high, and 6 feet wide, each weighing nearly 60 tons. In each of these had been buried a sacred bull. But long centuries ago tomb robbers had robbed and violated the tombs.

"In going from chamber to chamber in this amazing city of dead bulls, Mariette found one vault that had escaped the violating hand of the treasure-seeker. There in the mortar was the imprint of the fingers of the mason who had set the last stone during the reign of Rameses II, and there in the dust were the footprints of those who had last trod the floor more than 3000 years ago. There also were the votive offerings dedicated by visitors who had come and gone so many centuries ago, among them an inscribed tablet of Rameses' own son, high priest of Apis and one of the chief dignitaries of the time. It is little wonder that when the great explorer stood in this tomb and saw things as they had remained inviolate for thirty-one eventual centuries, he was overwhelmed and burst into tears.

"The pomp and splendor with which the worship of the bull Apis was celebrated at Memphis and at Thebes accounts for the apostasy of the Israelites in the wilderness, when, having made a molten calf, they said, 'These be thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.' They had been so accustomed to see divine honors paid, even by the mightiest of their taskmasters, to this supposed incarnation of the Deity that at Sinai itself they yielded to the worship they had long observed and 'corrupted themselves, turning aside quickly out of the way which the Lord commanded them.' "

4415–MIZPAH, where Samuel prayed for and judged Israel (1Sa 7:5–6), is traditionally identified with Nebi Samwil, a village on a solitary peak five miles northwest of Jerusalem. It is one of the most imposing sites in central Palestine, but has not been excavated. However, in more recent years attention has been turned to Tell en-Nasbeh, which lies on a rounded limestone hill about eight miles north of Jerusalem on the highway that runs north to Samaria.

Dr. W. F. Bade, aided by the American Schools of Oriental Research of Jerusalem, conducted five campaigns here from 1926 to 1935 and found massive city walls averaging seventeen feet in thickness, and in one place reaching the width of twenty-six feet. This, they concluded, must have been the wall built by Asa, king of Judah, as a defense against the northern kingdom (1Ki 15:22). They found about eighty seal impressions on jar handles with the inscription "belonging to the King," which suggest that they were royal property. Several jar handles with "Mizpah" stamped in Old Hebrew came to light, but the most thrilling discovery was an ancient seal on which was engraved the likeness of a fighting cock and the words "Belonging to Jaazaniah, officer of the King." During the fourth season they found a very fine gate which faced toward Shiloh, the focal point of worship during the earlier days of Samuel.

4416–NAZARETH is the city where Joseph and Mary lived, and the home of Jesus until the announcement of his messiahship at the age of thirty. It is partly secluded in the mountains, halfway between the Mediterranean and the Sea of Galilee, yet it was near the well-traveled highway between Egypt and Mesopotamia. Here Jesus no doubt saw passing caravans of many nationalities.

The Church of the Annunciation, which traditionally marks the site of the Virgin Mary's home, is built on the foundation of a church erected by the Crusaders in the 12th century. Beneath the nave is a chapel in which is the Latin inscription "Here the word was made flesh" (Jn 1:14). Digging continues under the church.

The most authentic site of Nazareth connected with the holy family is the Virgin's Well. It has always been the only source of water in the town. The actual source of the well is a hillside spring almost a mile outside the city, from which a conduit brings water to this roofed-over well. In all probability, Mary came here, carrying the traditional water jar on her head—and, perhaps, at times the child Jesus accompanied her.

4417–NEBO. Mount Nebo, from which Moses viewed the Promised Land, is in all probability the present Jebel Neba which is a prominent spur of the Abarim mountain range forming the Moabite tableland. It is twelve miles east of the mouth of the Jordan River, and three miles west of Medeba. It is over 4000 feet above the Dead Sea and gives an unobstructed and magnificent view of much of Palestine immediately west of the Jordan.

Many pilgrims, since A.D. 394, have mentioned a church being located here. It was called "a small church" by the first pilgrims, but by the sixth century, Peter the Iberian styled it "a very large temple, named after the prophet (Moses) and many Monasteries which are built round it." This enlarged church continued to be mentioned until 1564 when a Portuguese Franciscan monk visited the site and found the buildings on the summit ruined and abandoned. When the author first visited the place in March of 1926, there were no visible signs of a building—only what appeared to be the ruins of a shallow cistern.

The excavations carried on here by the Franciscans since 1933 confirm the accounts of early travelers, who came upon a small church in this location. The church was enlarged during the late fifth century. Apparently it was destroyed by an earthquake in the late sixth century, and rebuilt in 597. It is the ruin of this church which is now seen on Mount Nebo. There are mosaics in the floor of the church, and some splendid pictures of animals and trees in one of the chapels. The extensive ruins of the monastery buildings cluster about the church on the west, north, and south. On a clear day one can stand on the terrace west of the church and see quite clearly the towers on the Mount of Olives at Jerusalem.

4418–NINEVEH, the famed capital of the ancient Assyrian empire, was located 280 miles north of Babylon, on the eastern bank of the Tigris, just across the river from modern Mosul. It was called "the Robber City," because it overran and robbed other countries to enrich itself. It had a colorful, yet tragic history, especially from the ninth century B.C. to the time of its final destruction by a coalition of forces led by the Medes and the Babylonians in 612 B.C.

Henry Austin Layard visited ruined Nineveh in 1845 and found the entire circuit of its walled area to be seven and one-half miles. Within the 1800-acre enclosure were two mounds. The southern mound was one hundred feet high, covered forty acres, and was known by the natives as "Nebi Yunis" (the Prophet Jonah). The north mound was ninety feet high, covered one hundred acres, and was called "Kuyunjik" (the Castle of Nineveh).

Layard cut trenches in the north mound and unearthed a gateway flanked by two winged lions, and a wall on which was inscribed, in cuneiform characters, the name of Sennacherib. Penetrating farther into the city, he uncovered Sennacherib's royal palace, whose approach was lined with gigantic winged bulls. These bore on their bodies the cuneiform inscribed annals of the king. Immense halls 40 feet wide and 180 feet long led to the interior of the palace, of which Layard said:

> In this magnificent edifice I opened no less than seventy-one halls, chambers, and passages, whose walls, almost without exception, had been panelled with slabs of sculptured alabaster recording the wars, the triumphs, and the great deeds of the Assyrian king. By a rough calculation, about 9880 feet, or nearly two miles, of bas-reliefs, with twenty-seven portals, formed by colossal winged bulls and lion-sphinxes, were uncovered in that part alone of the buildings explored during my researches.

The annals of Sennacherib inscribed on the man-headed winged bulls, and on a terra cotta and a baked clay cylinder give a rather complete account of Sennacherib's eight campaigns, "including the capture and destruction of the city of Babylon in 689 B.C., and his great drive down the east coast of the Mediterranean toward Egypt in 701 B.C. Special emphasis is laid on his treatment of the cities of the Philistines, his invasion of Judea, and the siege of Jerusalem, in which Hezekiah and Isaiah were involved. His account agrees with, and in some instances supplements the biblical account given in 2 Kings 18:13–19 and Isaiah 36–37. The siege and capture of Lachish, during the king's campaign in Judah, is graphically pictured on one of these palace walls. Beneath this pictured panel are the words:

> Sennacherib King of the Universe, King of Assyria, sat upon a throne and reviewed the spoil of the city of Lachish.

"Sennacherib gives the number of Palestinian cities he captured, and rather carefully lists the spoil, but merely says that he shut up Hezekiah 'like a caged bird,' and gives no reason for his not having captured Jerusalem, nor does he mention disaster having befallen his army which caused his hasty retreat without having gained decisive victory. The biblical narrative admits the cities captured and the spoil taken, but explains in considerable detail how Sennacherib, while encamped at Lachish, sent a detachment of troops and messengers bearing a letter in which he discounted Judah's strength, ridiculed their confidence in Egypt, and scorned their trust in Jehovah. It tells how this letter was spread before Jehovah, and how King Hezekiah and the prophet Isaiah 'prayed and cried to Heaven' and how that night,"

> The angel of the LORD went out and put to death a hundred and eighty-five thousand men in the Assyrian camp. When the people got up the next morning—there were all the dead bodies! So Sennacherib king of Assyria broke camp and withdrew. He returned to Nineveh and stayed there (2Ki 19:35–36).

The account of Sennacherib's final days is given in 2 Kings 19:36–37, and is confirmed and supplemented by a large six-sided, baked-clay cylinder which Layard and Rassam found in Esarhaddon's palace which they unearthed in the section of south Nineveh, now called Nebi Yunis.

During the spring of 1851, while Layard and Rassam were excavating in a part of the Temple of Nebo, adjoining Sennacherib's palace, they removed the rubbish from two large rooms opening into each other, and found a part of the royal library collected by various kings and dedicated to Nebo, the divine scribe who had "invented the arts and sciences" and understood "all the mysteries connected with literature and the art of writing." These many thousands of clay volumes made a valuable contribution to the British Museum.

In 1853 Harmuzd Rassam continued the excavations at Nineveh, and soon uncovered the palace of King Ashurbanipal, in which was a very large and beautiful bas-relief of the king standing in a chariot, about to start on a hunting expedition, his attendants handing him weapons for the chase. In two adjoining high-vaulted rooms they found the floors stacked high with thousands of priceless clay tablets. These proved to be a large portion of Ashurbanipal's royal library. His teachers had taught him to read and write in several languages. As he says in one of the inscriptions:

> I, Ashur-bani-pal, within the palace, learned the wisdom of Nebo, the entire art of writing on clay tablets of every kind. I made myself master of the various kinds of writing. . . . I read the beautiful clay tablets from Sumer and the Akkadian writing, which is hard to master. I had the joy of reading inscriptions on stone from the time before the flood.

"So great was Ashurbanipal's interest in literature and scholarly pursuits, that on coming to the throne he quickly quelled an uprising in Egypt, conquered Lydia and Persia, then after consolidating his kingdom, gave himself to scholarly pursuits until he became the most powerful and enlightened monarch of his time and one of the world's greatest patrons of literature. He sent learned scribes to Ashur, Babylon, Cuthah, Nippur, Akkad, Erech and other strategic centers throughout his vast empire where they collected and copied clay books of astrology, history, grammar, geography, literature, law, and medicine, together with letters, prayers, poems, hymns, incantations, oracles, dictionaries, chronicles, deeds of sales of land, business contracts and law records, and scores of other subjects of general and specific interest. All these were brought to Ashurbanipal's palace at Nineveh where he not only studied and collated them, but in many cases had fresh clay tablets made on which bilingual copies were inscribed in uniform script and filed away in methodical fashion 'for the instruction of the people of Nineveh.' When complete, his library contained something near 100,000 copies—one of the greatest and most valuable of all ancient times. The great gallery rooms in which the library was found proved to have been the king's private library and picture gallery. And they were only a part of the royal palace of the brilliant king."

George Smith, while working with these tablets in the British Museum, found the larger portion of a tablet which told of the Flood. His eyes rested on the words: "the ship rested on the mountains of Nizir." It thrilled him, and it thrilled Mr. Gladstone, Dean Stanley, and the proprietor of the London Daily Telegraph. They sent him to Nineveh, where by diligent search, he found the other portion of the tablet with its seventeen lines which completed the Chaldean account of the Deluge. Later he also found the creation tablets which, in 1876, he published under the title "Chaldean Account of Genesis."

There were so many resemblances to the biblical story of Noah and the Flood, and so many events duplicated that, to many scholars, the account witnesses that such a disaster did happen. Very little of the Chaldean account of creation coincides with the Genesis account, yet it was only the first of many such stories to be found. Others came nearer the biblical account.

4419–NOB, a "city of priests," was located on a prominence one mile north of Jerusalem. After the capture of the ark and the destruction of Shiloh, the Jewish priests fled here with the ephod and set up quarters dedicated to carrying out the sacred functions of the tabernacle. David came to Nob to see Ahimelech the priest after he had escaped from Saul, and asked for bread. Ahimelech gave him consecrated bread (showbread) and the sword of Goliath and sent him on his way (1Sa 21:1–9). Doeg the Edomite, who was "Saul's head shepherd" (21:7), informed the king of the incident, and at Saul's command exterminated the family of Ahimelech and eighty-five persons who wore the linen ephod (22:19). Nob was Sennacherib's last stop in his advance on Jerusalem. "This day they will halt at Nob; they will shake their fist at the mount of the Daughter of Zion, at the hill of Jerusalem" (Isa 10:32).

4420–NUZI (modern Yorghan Tepe), a mound 150 air miles north of Baghdad, was excavated in 1925–

31 by a joint expedition of the American Schools of Oriental Research in Baghdad, Harvard University, and the University of Pennsylvania Museum. Dr. Edward Chiera was the director. The soundings reached virgin soil, but the level of occupation uncovered was the 15th to 14th centuries B.C. when the city was populated by the Hurrians, the long-lost Horites, Hivites, and Jebusites of the Old Testament.

From the palace and from private villas or wealthy homes they recovered about 20,000 clay tablets which were written by Hurrian scribes in the Babylonian cuneiform language, but with the occasional employment of native Hurrian or Horite words. The tablets consist largely of commercial accounts, contracts, reports, and judicial decisions which reveal the way of life for some leading families for four or five generations. The parallels between the customs and social conditions of these peoples and the patriarchal narratives in Genesis are remarkable in supporting the historicity of this section of the Bible.

The patriarchs came from this general section of the country, and had lived at Haran, (which was predominantly Hurrian, or Horite). They maintained contacts here for generations afterward, and in the absence of laws and customs of their own (for there was, as yet, no Old Testament), they followed those to which they had been accustomed. Notice some of the parallels:

(1) Exchange of Property: All transactions involving the transfer of property were recorded, witnessed, sealed, and proclaimed at the city gate (Ge 23:10–18).

(2) Marriage Contracts included a statement that a handmaid could be presented to the new bride, as was the case with Leah and Rachel (Ge 29:24, 29), and contained a provision obliging a childless wife to provide her husband with a handmaid who would bear children, as Sarai gave Hagar to Abraham (Ge 16:3), and Rachel gave Bilhah to Jacob (Ge 30:3–6).

(3) Adoption was practiced at Nuzi when a childless couple would adopt a son to care for them while they lived, bury them when they died, and be heir to their estate. It was specified that if they ever had a son of their own, then the adopted son took second place. This seems to explain Abraham's adoption of Eliezer as his heir before the birth of Isaac, and the subsequent change when the Lord promised that a son of his own would be born to become his heir (Ge 15:2–4).

(4) Birthright. In Nuzi a contract was found in which one brother gave his brother "three sheep in exchange for his inheritance share" in a plantation, which sounds like Jacob's gift to Esau of "bread and some lentil stew" (Ge 25:30–34). Also, in Nuzi the "blessing" of a dying father in bequeathing property to a son was honored in court where there was a witness to corroborate the words of the father (Ge 27:30–33; 49:8–28).

(5) Inheritance. Nuzi had a law that implied that property and leadership of the family could pass to a daughter's husband, providing the father had handed over his household gods to his son-in-law. Thus, when Laban overtook Jacob and anxiously searched his camp for the household gods, he could not find them for "Rachel had taken the household gods and put them inside her camel's saddle and was sitting on them" (Ge 31:30–35).

4421–OLIVES. The Mount of Olives (Jebel et-Tur) is the mountain on the east side of Jerusalem (Eze 11:23). Only the half-mile-wide Kidron Valley separates the Holy City from the sacred mountain. In reality there are three distinctly-marked, rounded summits: Mount Scopus on the north, the Mount of Offence on the south, and Mount of Olives in the center. The central mountain stands 2,680 feet above sea level, which means that it is about 200 feet higher than the temple area in Jerusalem.

On the central part of the summit are the remains of the so-called Church of the Ascension, the original of which was erected during the fourth century with funds furnished by Emperor Constantine. A short distance west of the summit, and on lower ground, is the Church of the Lord's Prayer, erected in the year 1868 to perpetuate the tradition that here the Lord's prayer was taught to the disciples. In recent years an ancient cemetery has been discovered near the traditional place where Jesus wept over Jerusalem. The tombs have been investigated by P. B. Bagatti, and according to his reckoning the burial place was in use during the first century A.D., and also in the third and fourth century. Some thirty-six ossuaries (burial chests) were found which belonged to the first century. Inscribed on these are such names as Jairus, Simon Bar-Jonah, Mary, Martha, and Siloam. One ossuary bears the name of "Judah the proselyte of Tyre," along with a Christian symbol. Another has a carefully drawn cross, and on still another is combined the Greek letters Iota, Chi, and Beta, which authorities agree could stand for "Jesus Christ King." No one supposes this to be the burial place of Jesus, yet the cemetery probably belongs to an early Jewish Christian community of Jerusalem.

4422–PERGAMUM, the third church addressed by John in Revelation, is some fifteen miles from the Aegean Sea, sixty miles north of Smyrna. The modern town of Bergama (a Turkish corruption of the ancient name) stands on the plain below the hill-site of the ancient city.

Pergamum was the center of four pagan cults (Zeus, Athena, Dionysus, and Esclepius), and the seat of the blasphemous emperor worship. Therefore John speaks of it as the place "where Satan has his throne" and "where Satan lives" (Rev 2:13).

Excavations here in 1878 by the Berlin Museum revealed a spectacular building complex with a beautiful Hellenistic theater at its center. Sacred and royal buildings spread out in a half-circle, which consisted of the great altar, the Athena Shrine, the temple of Trojan and Hadrian, the royal palaces, and many other fine structures. The great altar with its sculptured decorations of the battle of gods and giants was the most important artistic monument brought to light at Pergamum. No one knows if this was "Satan's throne" or if it was in the temple where the emperor was worshiped.

4423–PERSEPOLIS. In 520 B.C., Darius the Great took his architects, artisans, and workmen forty miles south of Pasargadae. On a low, rocky, three-level spur at the base of the Mountain of Mercy, overlooking the lovely Plain of the Waterfowl, he constructed a vast rectangular platform which was to serve as the enduring foundation for his enchanted palace-city of Persepolis. A gigantic stairway led to a great platform. On this platform imaginative architects raised a series of palaces and other buildings, which, after being encircled by graceful walls, formed the heart of one of the most famous cities of antiquity. Here Persian culture and civilization attained its highest level. Monarchs of the Achaemenid Dynasty passed the spring and autumn months here, going to Ecbatana for the summer and to Shushan for winter. It was here that the great annual feasts of the vernal equinox were held, celebrating the Persian new year. Since Esther was Xerxes' (Ahasuerus') queen for thirteen years, she must have lived at Persepolis with her husband for brief intervals.

This mighty city, however, a veritable memorial to Persian culture, was relatively short-lived. In 330 B.C., when Persepolis was less than 200 years old, it was looted and destroyed by burning at the hands of Alexander the Great, purportedly as "a deplorable accident of war." According to ancient historians, however, it was a deliberate act of revenge on Persia for the invasion of Greece and the burning of Athens by Xerxes. In handling the loot from the Persepolis treasury, Alexander is represented by the ancient writer Plutarch as having made use of 10,000 mules and 5,000 camels to transport the booty to Ecbatana.

The ruined city was then abandoned, and lay crumbled and buried, to blend with the sands and soil of the plain until near the middle of the nineteenth century, when orientalists and archaeologists began investigating the mound. It was not until 1931 that scientific excavations began, when Prof. Ernst Herzfeld of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago began work, followed by Erich Schmidt, who worked from 1935 till the outbreak of World War II in 1939.

MARK HUNT

The entrance to the palace at Persepolis, which dates from the time of Darius and Xerxes.

The entire platform was found to have been occupied by royal buildings erected by Darius I (522–486 B.C.), Xerxes (486–465), and Artaxerxes I (465–423). Access was afforded by means of a shallow ramp-like staircase of 110 steps, located at the northwest corner of the terrace. Beyond stood the Gate of Xerxes, whose portals were guarded by two colossal stone bulls.

To the south, on a still higher platform, was the ruined "Apadana," or audience hall, built by Darius and Xerxes. This was reached, on the north and east, by the "grand staircase," one of the most elaborate sculptured stairways yet discovered in Middle Eastern countries. This great audience hall, estimated to accommodate ten thousand people, was of hypostyle construction, its roof being supported by enormous cedar beams from Lebanon. The central hall had 26 solid stone columns, which including bases and capitals were 65 feet high. On three sides were side halls, each containing twelve equally high columns. Of the 72 columns only 13 have survived and are still standing. At the east entrance of this great hall, there is now, in fine sculptured relief, the likeness of Darius I on the throne with Xerxes, the crown prince, standing behind him. Above them is the winged figure of Ahura Mazda, the one great god of Zoroastrian religion and "the author of all good." Darius and his immediate successors were followers of Zoroaster, which is believed to be "a partial explanation for the enlightened policies of the Persian government."

The audience hall provided access to the Tachara, or Palace of Darius, with its relief-adorned walls and its numerous inscriptions, one of which reads:

> Saith Darius the King: This country of Persia Ahura Mazda bestowed upon me . . . and Darius the King does not feel fear of any other.
> Saith Darius the King: May Ahura Mazda bear me aid . . . and protect this country from foe, from famine, and from falsehood, this I pray as a boon from Ahura Mazda. I am Darius, Great King, King of Kings, King of many countries, son of Hystaspes, an Achaemenian . . . who constructed this palace."

The magnificent palace was supplied with running water by means of stone pipes which carried water from the Apadana roof and from the nearby mountains. Drainage was facilitated by a vast system of sewers.

Further south beyond the palace were the queen's apartments, with their central hall and court. East of the Apadana was the "Hall of a Hundred Columns," so called because its magnificent Lebanon cedar roof was supported by a hundred carved and fluted columns. It was second in area and magnificence to no other ancient building except the Temple at Karnak in Egypt. Beyond were numerous other structures, including the royal treasury and a watchman's fort. About all these fine buildings were gardens in which flowers clustered thickly about pools and playing fountains.

In 1951 the Archaeological Institute of Persepolis began excavations outside of the great platform and found the ruins of another palace, a massive stone hall with a porch and additional rooms, together with a great stone reservoir.

Other finds of interest in the mound were thousands f fragments of hard stone vases, a gold foundation ablet of Darius I which bore a trilingual inscription nd inscriptions of Xerxes, husband of Queen Esther. 'hese listed the many nations over which he reigned, ncluding Media, Elam, Armenia, Parthia, Babylon, ssyria, Sardis, and Egypt.

On the slope of the mount of Mercy southeast of 'ersepolis are tombs of two of the last Achaemenid ings. At Naqsh-i-Rustam, four miles from Persepo- is, are the imposing tombs of Darius the Great, Xer- es, Artaxerxes I, and Darius II, carved in the stony mountainside. Only the tomb of Darius the Great has an inscription.

4424–PETRA, known in Bible times as Sela (the rock), is located south and somewhat east of the Dead Sea, in one of the most inaccessible places on earth. It is built in a deep basin, or plain, high in the mountains, surrounded on every side by brilliantly colored granite and sandstone cliffs—a veritable amphitheater-like city, whose chief attraction is perhaps its isolation.

The only entrance to the city is by "the Sik," a narrow, mile-long gorge between towering red granite cliffs. The gorge is in places only a twelve-foot-wide stream-bed, which eventually opens out into a wider valley called Wadi Musa, and this gradually descends into the area occupied by the "rose-red city half as old as time."

The first structure that appears is el-Khazneh (the treasury), a royal temple-tomb carved out of the rock wall, 150 feet high and adorned by many finely carved columns of the Corinthian order. On its apex is a massive, yet artistically designed, urn in which the Arabs said was to be found "Pharaoh's treasures." Within the temple is a moderate size tomb-room which is without ornamentation. No one knows to whom the temple-tomb belonged, but it is regarded as the tomb of a Nabataean king of the Hellenistic period —perhaps King Aretas the Philhellene (87–62 B.C.).

Inside the city, in any direction for almost a mile are forums, theaters, temples, palaces, dwellings, and tombs carved from multicolored Nubian sandstone cliffs towering 200 to 400 feet in the air. One Nabataean temple-like tomb near the entrance has four pyramidal obelisks towering high above its entrance.

high above the city, is a "high place," about 47 feet long by 24 feet wide, and approached by a flight of steps cut in the rock. At the top of the steps, on the high place is an altar nine feet long, six feet wide, and three feet high. On top of the altar is a hollow pan-like area for the fire, and just south of the altar is where the animals were slain for sacrifice. Here the Nabataeans worshiped the god Dushara, whose emblem was a black stone. In 1934 the great high place was excavated by the Melchett Expedition in collaboration with Dr. Albright, and in more recent years further survey and excavation has been going on in Petra.

"Even in its present condition of dilapidated elegance," said Dr. Nelson Glueck, "Petra continues to be an unforgettable monument" to the "creative abilities" of the ancient Edomites, and later to the Nabataeans. These people moved in from Arabia and established a kingdom that lasted for three centuries, until 106 A.D. One of their kings, Aretas IV, is mentioned in 2 Corinthians 11:32.

4425–PHILIPPI owes its name to Philip of Macedon (father of Alexander the Great) who took the city from the Thracians in the fourth century B.C. and gave it his name. It was strategically located on the east-west Egnation Highway between Rome and Asia, and served as a starting point for Alexander the Great when he began his military campaign to conquer the world.

Paul came directly to Philippi after his vision of a man saying "Come over to Macedonia and help us (Ac 16:9)." Here he preached the gospel by a river, was placed in prison, and established his first and most beloved church on the European continent.

Excavations were conducted here from 1914 to 1938 by the French School of Athens. Many sections of the city were uncovered, but special attention was given to the forum (300 by 150 feet), the marketplace, the theater, a library and reading room, and a rectangular podium which served as a place for speakers. Of special interest to Bible students were the foundations of a great arched gateway spanning the Egnation way which led out of the northwestern part of the city. This is believed to be the gateway out of which Paul and his company went on the way to the river-side where they preached the gospel to the prayer group, for about one mile to the west of this gateway is the only real river in the vicinity of Philippi (Ac 16:12–13).

4426–RABBAH (RABBATH-AMMON), capital of the ancient kingdom of the Ammonites, and present capital (Amman) of Jordan, is thought to have been built by the sons of Ammon (Lot's son) who gave it the name of their father (Dt 3:11). It was besieged by Joab for two years before it was taken, and in front of its walls the death of Uriah the Hittite took place at David's indirect command (2Sa 11:16–17).

For centuries Ammon was literally "a field of ruins," and there are still a few Roman ruins in the town, the chief of which is the theater. It was cut into the side of a rock cliff, and could seat about 6,000 people. The seats are now in place, but the platform and orchestra pit are missing. A few columns remain here and there within the present city, and some Roman baths, but the principal remains are on the high Citadel Hill overlooking the present city. These ruins on the surface have been partially excavated, and are of the Roman period, of which a temple is the prize discovery. Nothing has yet been found of the ancient Ammonitish ruins of the time of David, except at the northeast corner, where part of the Iron Age city wall, probably of David's time, was discovered.

4427–RAS SHAMRA. The ancient city of Ugarit, now known as Ras Shamra, was a great commerical and religious center on the coast, forty miles southwest of Antioch, opposite the island of Cyprus.

A chance discovery, made by a Syrian while plowing in his field, attracted attention to the large mound, and excavations were begun by Claude F. A. Schaeffer in 1929 and continued until 1939—then resumed in later years. There were five major occupational levels, but the one dating from the 15th and early 14th centuries B.C. yielded the more important finds.

In a cemetery were found magnificent vases similar to those found in Cretan palaces, large storage jars like those used in Christ's time, "a complete table service 3400 years old, a whole set of weights, ranging from an Egyptian mina (437 grams) down to small fractions of it, a well-preserved bronze figure of the Egyptian hawk god Horus, a bronze figure of a seated god, a splendidly preserved figure of the Phoenician war and weather god Reshef, a golden statue of the Phoenician goddess Astarte, and a stele of Baal, one of the few known representations of this local god.

"At the foot of a cellar stairway, a pile of seventy-four well-preserved weapons and tools was found. These included 'four large bronze swords nearly three feet long, eleven lances of various shapes, twenty-seven flat axes, fourteen large hoes, two pretty daggers with inlaid handles, four sickles, nine chisels and drills, and a graceful tripod with little bells shaped like pomegranates suspended from it.' Had these pieces not been coated with patina, a fine green rust that gathers on ancient copper when exposed to earth or air, they could easily have been mistaken for tools only recently come from the forger."

The most important find, however, was the temple library, located in a building between the temples of Baal and of Dagon. Here were hundreds of tablets which revealed the culture not only of Phoenicia, but of various surrounding countries. Many of the tablets were written in ordinary cuneiform script, but more than 600 tablets were in a script which appeared to be in cuneiform, yet could not be read by the experts. These, in time, proved to be an alphabetical writing composed of thirty cuneiform signs—a new Semitic language closely related to Hebrew and other Semitic dialects spoken in Canaan.

In content, the majority of these tablets were found to be a series of religious texts, in poetic form, embodying extensive materials which described in considerable detail the nature of the Canaanite religious beliefs and practices. From these, we get a fairly complete idea of what the religions of Canaan were like at the time the Hebrews entered, and of the religious influences to which the Hebrews were exposed soon after they settled in the country.

Certain ceremonial rituals, such as the trespass offering, the peace offering, the wave offering, burnt offering, and offering of firstfruits were so similar to those of the Hebrews that some were led to wonder if certain Midianite emigrants may have brought them to Ugarit (Ras Shamra) during the years the Hebrews were wandering in the desert wilderness. In beliefs and practices, however, there were immeasurable differences. At the head of the Canaanite pantheon was El who was the Creator and Father of all, yet in their scheme of things he had a consort, Asherah (Ashtoreth), a fertility goddess, whom Israel consistently denounced in proportion to their loyalty to God and moral righteousness (Jdg 2:12–15; 1Sa 12:10). Their other gods were Baal, Dagon, Reshef, and Hadad, all of whom were represented as being immoral. Unmentionable licentious practices were associated with the worship of these gods—as the Bible infers.

4428–ROME, imperial city of the Roman empire and one of the best-known cities of the world, was founded on the Tiber River in 753 B.C. It soon spread out until it covered seven hills, Capitoline, Palatine, Aventine, Caelian, Esquiline, Viminal, and Quirinal. The Roman Forum lay between the Palatine and Capitoline hills, and was the center of Roman cultural, civic, and commercial interest. The best of its temples, its palaces, its circuses, its baths, its monuments, its amphitheaters, and buildings of State were adjacent to the Forum—all Roman life centered here, and all roads radiated from the golden milestone located in the Forum. Paul, Luke, and Peter and other great Christians must have been in the Forum often. Here Paul may have been tried for his life. But war, earthquake, fire, and time brought ruins to these ancient structures, and the dust of centuries covered them over.

In A.D. 357 Ammianus vividly described Rome's unspoiled magnificence, and fortunately, this description is preserved for posterity. There were excavations in Rome as early as the sixteenth century, and more in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Biondi began in 1817 and De Rosse in 1853. The Pontifical Commission of Sacred Archaeology took up the work and has continued to the present.

A visitor to Rome today can hardly get an idea of the original sumptuousness of the Eternal City, but the Forum and the ruins of its principal buildings, monuments, and chief sites are exposed and easily studied.

The Forum (240 by 690 feet), with all its historic lore, saw the trial and death of Julius Caesar and the oration of Mark Anthony. The Colosseum covers six acres, in which 50 to 60 thousand spectators watched the Christians thrown to the wild beasts. On the Palatine Hill were the palaces of the emperors and the ruined temple of Jupiter. The outline can be seen of the Circus Maximus, where 250,000 people watched the races. The Arch of Titus displays its vivid sculptured relief of Titus and his soldiers bearing the sacred vessels of the temple as they came from Jerusalem. The Arch of Constantine tells of the great event in 316 A.D. when he proclaimed Christianity the official religion of the empire. Scores of other places are of absorbing interest—even an ancient water clock which was marking the hours and days when Paul stayed in Rome.

In 1941, during the excavation at Ostia, Rome's seaport at the mouth of the Tiber, an inscription was found which indicates that when Tiberius began to reign in A.D. 14 Rome had a population of 4,100,000 inhabitants.

church leaders and writers from A.D. 95 to 326, and the many pictures and inscriptions in Christian tombs that indicate Paul and Peter were martyrs, have led many archaeologists and specialists to conclude that these two great apostles did suffer martyrdom in Rome under Nero.

Of all the discoveries in and about Rome, the most interesting to Christians and Jews are the Catacombs which lie along the roadways outside, none more than three miles from the city walls.

The origin of the Catacombs comprises one of the strangest and most mysterious phases of history. To begin with, they were sandpits, used by those seeking sand for building purposes.

Tufa stone, composed of volcanic ash and sand, melted sufficiently to cause the particles to adhere to each other, composes the soil for many miles around Rome. This material was found to be excellent sand for building operations, and many subterranean channels were dug to obtain it.

Then came the conflict between the young church and the ancient Roman empire.

The Roman empire was the most powerful and far-flung empire of Christ's day. The empire generally was tolerant of all religions, but the Christians' refusal to swear allegiance to the emperor brought increasing persecution.

The Christians were charged with being unsocial and odd, and came to be hated and counted as enemies of society. They were simple and modest in dress, strictly moral in their conduct, and would not go to the games and feasts. Some Christians even condemned those who sold fodder for the animals to be sacrificed to pagan gods. The public came to dread them, since the people feared the wrath of the gods when they did not sacrifice to them. If crops failed, if the Tiber River overflowed, if plagues came, the cry was "The Christians to the lions." Yet Christians were kind to all who were in trouble and stayed and nursed the sick during the plague when others fled.

In order to test all men's loyalty, the Roman government required that every one appear at certain public places, and there burn a pinch of incense to the emperor. The Christians considered this emperor worship and would not comply. Government authorities began to seek them out and punish them, often by death.

Christians sought refuge in the secret recesses of the underground tunnels of the sand pits. They extended the tunnels and made rooms, chapels, and burying places. The Catacombs soon became the only safe retreat for Christians.

They lived, worshiped, and were buried there. Their songs, prayers, and worship hallowed the Catacombs, which became a cradle of western Christianity.

The Catacombs were discovered and began to be excavated in the 16th century, and since 1950 have been excavated rather extensively. Our knowledge of these underground cities is incomplete, due to the facts that there are so many of them and that they are so extensive. However, a vast store of knowledge has been accumulated from them.

About six million persons are buried in about sixty Catacombs, fifty-four of which are Christian, and six Jewish. Each of these has a rather obscure entrance, from which a stairway leads down to subterranean tunnels and galleries which, branching off at right angles one to another, create a network of tunnels and streets, with here and there a chapel. Some have as many as four levels, each connected by a stairway. On each of these levels is an immense maze of narrow tunnels—so many that if all the tunneled streets in all the Catacombs were placed end to end they would extend about 587 miles.

Along the walls of these passageways, or at deadend tunnels, Christians are buried in wall tombs, or in cubicles. Each tomb is closed with tiles or a marble slab, on which the name of the deceased appears.

Often the walls and ceilings of the cubicles were adorned with paintings of Bible characters or scenes, such as Moses striking the rock, David, Daniel, the three Hebrew children, Noah, and Jonah—in each case representing a miraculous deliverance by God. In some instances a portrait of the deceased was found. In 1853 DeRossi found one cubicle closed by a marble slab, on which were engraved these words:

Marcus Antonius Rastutus made this sepulchre for himself and his own, who are confident in the Lord.

4429–SAFAD or Zefat, was one of the four "holy cities" of the Jews, and supposedly was the city to which Christ referred when he said, "a city on a hill cannot be hidden" (Mt 5:14). It proudly curls about the top of Mount Safad, sixteen miles northwest of Tiberias and 3400 feet above the Sea of Galilee.

Within the city are narrow streets, flights of steep steps, white-washed houses with extended balconies, and synagogues on which appear mysterious cabalistic signs. About the place are large olive plantations and fruitful vineyards. On a clear day, much of upper and lower Galilee, and the Sea of Galilee may be seen from this tableland city. In the glory days of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah it was called Isafet or Zefat, which means the "place of outlook," since from it a beacon light was lighted to announce the rising of the new moon. The event was first proclaimed in Jerusalem on the Mount of Olives and then relayed from high point to high point until Safad's beacon served as a signal for all northern Palestine.

Safad excites an attitude of reverence in the hearts of Jews. It was one of the refuges of the ancient rabbis after the fall of Jerusalem and the bitter defeat of Bar Kochba at Bittier in A.D. 132. As a scholar's retreat it became the seat of a great Talmudic school, a center of Judaic and cabalistic lore. It is even probable that the celebrated Midrash Ha Zohar, the Book of Splendor (the Bible of the cabala), attributed to Simon ben Yochai, was edited here by a Spanish rabbi about A.D. 160. It was also the residence of Joseph Caro, author of the Ahulchan Aruch, the last codification of the Jewish law. His pupil, Rabbi Jacob Berov, endeavored to reestablish Palestine as the center for rabbinical ordination.

Jewish poetry saw its revival in Safad, where Alkabetz wrote the famous Sabbath eve hymn, "Come my Friend to Meet the Bride," a song of the rebuilding of Zion.

Safad was fortified by the Crusaders in the twelfth century, but taken from them by Saladin in 1188. Later it was retaken by the Templars and held for twenty-six years.

In the sixteenth century Safad became the center of Jewish immigration from Spain and the rendezvous for study of the cabala. Here, in 1578, the rabbis set up the first printing press in Palestine. In 1607, there were reputed to be in Safad 300 rabbis, 18 rabbinical colleges, and 21 synagogues. Because it housed these great rabbinical schools, Safad earned for itself among Jews the high distinction of being one of the four holy cities of Israel.

Jewish mystics were at one time especially prominent at Safad, and in their sacred book, the Zohar, it was stated that the Messiah would appear first in Upper Galilee. Isaac Luria stands out as the giant and genius of them all, and is still the outstanding figure of Safad legend. It was this mystics's dreaming that made possible the messianic movement that had its strange fulfillment in the Shabbathae Zevi, and which also bore fruit in more recent years when the modern dream of the return to Palestine stirred the hearts of Jews.

An earthquake occurred at Safad in 1765, in which most of the inhabitants were killed; but the town was resettled so that by the early nineteenth century it housed 4,000 Jews. Unfortunately, another disastrous earthquake occurred in 1836 and once again took the lives of most of the community. Since this disaster the town has fallen from its proud Jewish pinnacle, and only in recent decades has it begun to flourish again under the Israeli government.

4430–SAMARIA, the capital of the northern kingdom of Israel, was located on a 300 foot high hill, 42 miles north of Jerusalem. The site was excavated in

The ruins of the palace of Ahab and Jezebel at Samaria.

1908–10 by Drs. G. A. Reisner and Clarence S. Fisher for Harvard University, and again in 1931–33 and 1935 by J. W. Crowfoot.

The first significant occupational level (I, II) was that of King Omri, and his son Ahab. Omri had purchased the hill and built his capital (1Ki 16:24). Ahab constructed an even finer palace for his new bride, Jezebel, and himself.

The excavators uncovered the foundations of Omri's palace, and the larger foundations and ruins of the palace of Ahab on the summit of the hill of Samaria. Just inside the north wall of the palace they found several thousand fragments of ivory, "many of which had been ruined by fire. Some thirty or forty of the ivories were recovered in an excellent state of preservation. On some were portrayed the lotus, lions, sphinxes, and the gods Isis and Horus, indicating the strong influences of Egypt on the Israel of this time.

"The collection of ivories included carved pieces of great variety and design both in size and decoration. Some were in the 'round,' some were plaques in low relief, and others were silhouettes or 'pierced work.' Some pieces were cut to receive color inlay, other pieces were overlaid with gold, or inlaid with lapis lazuli. These, the excavators thought, were originally mortised into the throne, into beds, couches, tables, cabinets, and perhaps also in the paneling of the walls and ceiling of the palace. All these discoveries gave substance to the account in the first book of Kings (22:39) which lists the ivory house as one of the great achievements of Ahab—that is, the house he built for himself and his fastidious queen. They also confirmed the preaching of the prophet Amos, who said:

> Woe to you who are complacent in Zion, and to you who feel secure on Mount Samaria. . . . You lie on beds inlaid with ivory and lounge on your couches (Am 6:1, 4).
> The houses adorned with ivory will be destroyed and the mansions will be demolished (Am 3:15).

"At the north end of Ahab's palace courtyard the excavators located a cemented water pool, which they thought might have been the 'pool of Samaria' in which Ahab's blood-stained chariot was washed (1 Kings 22:38). In one of the palace storehouses they recovered the famous 'Ostraca of Samaria,' which consisted of several hundred potsherds inscribed in ink. Sixty-three of them contained fairly legible writing in ancient Hebrew. They are notations concerning payments of taxes in oil and wine sent in by individuals to the storerooms of the royal palace." Some of these stewards had biblical names, such as Ahaz, Sheba, Nimshi, Ahinoam, and Gomer.

4431–SARDIS, one of the seven cities addressed in the Book of Revelation, was the capital of the famed kingdom of Lydia. It was located some fifty miles east of Smyrna, on the south side of the fertile valley of the Hermus, where the river Pactolus comes out of the Tmolus mountains.

Its extensive fruit orchards, its textile industries, its jewelry factories, and its great wealth, derived from the gold mined from the sands of the Pactolus River, made it one of the richest and most powerful inland cities of the ancient world. Here is said to have been minted the world's first coins, and Croesus (Kre'sus), its famous ruler during the 6th century B.C., was so fabulously rich that ever since his time men have said, "as rich as Croesus."

Sardis was captured by Cyrus in 546 B.C., and by Alexander the Great in 334 B.C., then destroyed by an earthquake in 17 B.C. It was rebuilt by the Romans, and converted to Christianity during the first century A.D. It survived until Tamerlane swept over the country in 1402 and almost completely destroyed the place. Only a small village named Sart lies near the site of the ancient city.

Excavations were begun at Sardis by Princeton University under the direction of Prof. H. C. Butler in 1909, and continued for five seasons until interrupted by the first World War. They were resumed in 1958 by Harvard and Cornell University, in cooperation with the American Schools of Oriental Research, under the direction of Professors Haufmann and Detweiler.

The finds thus far have included walls, gates, statues, inscriptions, coins, jewelry, ointment jars, considerable pottery, bronze candlesticks, bronze lion heads, a gymnasium, two cemeteries, the acropolis, and some rather impressive buildings. One of these was a synagogue 60 feet wide and 270 feet long.

The most imposing of these buildings was the temple of Artemis, the goddess who was the symbol of fruitful nature, and the twin sister of Apollo. In this area she was sometimes referred to as Cybele. This temple to her honor was constructed during the 4th century B.C., and must have been a splendid structure, measuring 163 by 327 feet. The "sacred way" leading up to its entrance was flanked by crouching lions.

Many inhabitants of Sardis became Christians during the first century, and a prosperous church grew up there. It was censured, or at least given some very pointed constructive advice, by Jesus Christ through John the revelator—"I know your deeds; you have a reputation of being alive, but you are dead. Wake up! Strengthen what remains" (Rev 3:1–6).

The advice must have been well taken, for the excavators found the sign of the cross engraved many places in the temple, indicating that the Christians had taken over the temple, and had made it a Christian church, as they often did with temples in Egypt and elsewhere.

About the 4th century A.D., the temple-church fell into disuse, and the Christians constructed a small Christian church at the southeast corner of the temple. It was a brick structure, in splendid state of preservation when uncovered. Only its roof was gone. The church was entered from the temple platform, and its altar remained in place.

4432–SHECHEM is located near the modern village of Balatah, north of the highway, in the beautiful valley between Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim.

This was the first place Abraham visited in Palestine (Ge 12:6–7). Jacob and his family came to Shechem and erected an altar and dug a well (Ge 33:18–20). Joseph's brothers pastured their flocks here, and Joseph was buried here (Jos 24:32). Here Joshua gathered the tribes of Israel, Rehoboam was crowned, the united monarchy was divided, and Jeroboam established his royal residence (1Ki 12).

Excavations were first made here by Carl Watzinger (1907–09), then by Ernest Sellin in 1913 and 1934. Since 1956, excavational work has been carried on by the Drew-McCormick Archaeological Expedition under the direction of Dr. G. Ernest Wright, and by others.

Much time, energy, and money have been spent excavating this city, and many young archaeologists have received their training here. Many seasoned archaeologists, such as Dr. O. R. Sellers, Dr. Bull, and others, aided Dr. Wright in the work. Gates, walls, temples, and a wealth of pottery, coins, tools, and other smaller objects have been found, and considerable history, both secular and biblical, has been confirmed.

Excavators found the remains of a large wall from the Middle Bronze Age (Abraham's and Jacob's day), and in this wall a gateway, which in all probability was the one where Hamor and his son Shechem consulted with the leading men of the city on the question of their relations with Jacob and his people (Ge 34:20–24). Inside the city was a massive edifice with walls 15 feet thick, enclosing an area of 33 by 39 feet, inside of which were found two rows of columns which supported the ceiling, and possibly a second story. Its entrance faced the southeast, and apparently had been flanked by two turreted towers. It was constructed in the Late Bronze Age, and was still in existence during the period of the judges. Here, thought the excavators, was surely "the tower of Shechem" which Abimelech had burned with "a thousand men and women" of the city who had taken refuge there (Jdg 9:46–49). Nearby they unearthed a large temple, identified as the temple of Baal-berith.

4433–SHILOH, now called Seilun, is located ten miles north of Bethel "and east of the road that goes from Bethel to Shechem" (Jdg 21:19). It is where Israel set up the tabernacle soon after they entered Canaan. Here the boy Samuel ministered before the Lord and became the first of a long line of Hebrew prophets. "In confirmation of his prophecy, the Philistines defeated Israel about 1050 B.C., captured the Ark of the Covenant, and left the town to sink into insignificance. Finally, fire reduced it to the scene of desolation pictured by Jeremiah," some 450 years later.

> " 'Go now to the place in Shiloh where I first made a dwelling for my Name, and see what I did to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel' " (Jer 7:12).

The Danish excavations at Shiloh in 1922, '26, '29, and '31, under the direction of Dr. Aage Smith, found remains dating from the thirteenth to the eleventh century B.C., but none from the period between 1050 and 300 B.C. This parallels the Bible record that Shiloh was destroyed by the Philistines after the battle of Ebenezer and the capture of the ark (1Sa 4:10–11).

On the northern end of the mound the excavators found a rock-hewn quadrangle 80 by 400 feet, which they felt confident was the site of the ancient tabernacle in which Samuel slept and heard the voice of the Lord calling him. Later, however, it was determined that these building remains belonged to the Byzantine period (A.D. 323–636). The conclusion was then reached that the Christians must have constructed a large church building on what had first been the site of the Hebrew tabernacle and sanctuary. Palestinian scholars concur in saying "all that has been found by the Danes at Shiloh agrees exactly with what is implied in the Old Testament." Future excavations may reveal the exact site and foundations of the tabernacle sanctuary, if, indeed, the Christian structure was not on these very foundations.

4434–SIDON, the first Phoenician city to be founded, has long been known for the beauty of its landscape, the fertility of its plain, and the quality and variety of its fruits. Being old, it has many ruins, only a few of which have been excavated.

In 1855 a number of tombs were discovered, and in some of them were found sarcophagi. One of these was the beautiful, black basalt sarcophagus of Eshmunazar, "king of the Sidonians" during the 5th century B.C. It measured over eight feet in length, and had nine hundred and ninety words inscribed on its lid. The inscription was in Phoenician script and consisted largely of information about him and about the fact that there was no gold in his "funeral couch," therefore a curse upon anyone—king or commoner—who opened it, and lastly that he and his family had erected temples to such gods as Astarte (Ashtoreth), Esmuno (Dagon), and Baal of Sidon. The more famous of these tomb discoveries was the great and beautiful marble sarcophagus on which was sculptured two scenes from the life of Alexander the Great. One scene is a lion hunt in which Alexander takes part, and the other is a battle scene in which the horses, the riders, and the footmen are in semitransparent color—so well done that it does not conceal the shine of the natural marble. Both the sculpture and painting are Greek masterpieces, and the sarcophagus is rated as one of the finest ever discovered. It is called "the great marble Alexander sarcophagus," although it is supposed to have held the body of one of Alexander's high officers, or of a governor or ruler of the city of Sidon.

Sidon's main archaeological interest, however, lies in the fragments of mosaic pavements on the north, its hill of millions of broken murex shells (from which purple dye was extracted) on the southwest, its famous cemetery on the plain southeastward, and its large ruin of a Crusader castle. Ernest Renan, a French scholar, excavated here in 1860, but did little more than "map the city of the dead," uncover ancient coins, and make a few minor discoveries. He suspected that he had come "fifty years too late."

4435–SILOAM. The Pool of Siloam, where Jesus sent the blind man to be healed, was located in the Tyropoeon Valley, at the lower end of Hezekiah's underground conduit (Siloam Tunnel) which brought water into the city from Gibon Spring (Virgin's Fountain). "The gently flowing waters of Shiloah" (Isa 8:6) referred to these waters that flowed through the 1770-foot tunnel and into this pool, called Siloam because it was just across the Kidron Valley from the village of Siloam. The pool was much-used by the people of Jerusalem, who considered it sacred.

The excavations undertaken here in 1896–97 by the Palestine Exploration Fund traced 34 steps down to the pool. The main part of this stairway was built of hard, well-jointed stones laid on a bed of stone chips and lime mortar, but the other portion of the stairs was cut from the natural rock and the treads were "well polished by foot wear." The outline of the ancient pool showed it to be more than twice the size of the present pool.

Excavators also found well-preserved ruins of a doomed church constructed here in the fifth century by Empress Eudocia, and the ruins of a monastery which had been built in the eleventh century. The tower of Siloam, which collapsed and killed eighteen people, was in this general area (Lk 13:4), but no certain traces of it have been found.

4436–SODOM and GOMORRAH. Most authorities regard the ruins of these cities—if, indeed any ruins were left—as submerged under the circled, shallow waters of the Dead Sea, south of the Lisan Peninsula. All local traditions preserved by natives of the country favor this area. Josephus says that the Dead Sea extended from Jericho as far as Zoar (B. J., IV. viii. 4); and the Christian historian, Eusebius, of the fourth century, confirms that statement and adds that a Roman garrison was there. Also the mosaic map found in a Greek church of Medeba, dated from the fifth or sixth century, places Zoar at the southeast corner of the sea.

In 1924 a joint expedition of the Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary and the American Schools of Oriental Research, led by Drs. Albright and Kyle, explored the territory at the south end of the Dead Sea to determine the sites of Sodom, Gomorrah, and Zoar. They found the ruins of a Zoar of the Byzantine and Arabic periods, but believed that the site of the earlier Zoar had been submerged by the continual rising of the Dead Sea.

Jebel Usdum (Mount Sodom), a mountain of crystalline salt, 5 miles long and 300 feet high, along the southwestern shore of the Dead Sea, is so named from the belief that Sodom stood near it.

Of the ruins of Sodom and Gomorrah, Dr. George Adam Smith says:

> Here was laid the scene of the most terrible judgment on human sin. The glare of Sodom and Gomorrah is flung down, the whole length of scriptural history. It is the popular and standard judgment of sin. The story is told in Genesis; it is applied in Deuteronomy, by Amos, by Isaiah, by Jeremiah, by Ezekiel and Zephaniah, and in Lamentations. Our Lord employs it more than once as the figure of the judgment he threatens upon cities where the word is preached in vain, and we feel the flame scorch our own cheeks (Mt 10:15; 11:24; Lk 10:12; 17:29). Paul, Peter, Jude make mention of it. In Revelation the city of sin is spiritually called Sodom. Though the glare of this catastrophe burns still, the ruins it left have disappeared.

4437–SUSA (SHUSHAN), 200 miles east of Babylon, was the capital of ancient Elam (Susiana), and later the winter capital of the Persian kings. It was the scene of many biblical events in the time of Daniel, Nehemiah, Queen Esther and King Ahasuerus (Xerxes).

The French began excavations here in 1852 under the direction of W. K. Loftus, resumed them in 1884 under M. Dieulafoy, and have continued the work under Jacques de Morgan and others. The ruins are in four sections and cover about 4900 acres, therefore they may never be completely excavated.

Dieulafoy, aided by his wife, discovered the palace fortress which the writer of the Book of Esther calls "the citadel of Susa." It covered 123 acres, was raised high above the surrounding city, and was made up of the throne room, the "royal palace," "the harem," along with the inner and outer courts, the palace garden, pylons, stairways, terraces, and a few archways. The throne room was a great hypostyle hall which covered nearly an acre of ground. It had 36 columns—six rows of six each—with capitals carved in the form of bulls kneeling back to back, and by long cedar of Lebanon beams spanning the great distance between the massive columns. "Here came the king when he 'sat on the throne of his kingdom,' and here were held his banquets and state social events such as the prolonged banquet described in the first chapter of the Book of Esther. The floor of the throne room was 'a pavement of red, and blue and white and black marble,' just as it had been described in the Book of Esther. Across this marble floor had walked the beautiful Queen Esther at the risk of her life, as she approached the crimson canopied throne, stopping before the carpet which only the feet of the king were to tread, there to intercede for the lives of her people.

"In front of the great pillared throne room were the palace gardens where walked the king as he pondered the evil deeds of Haman. Nearby were the ruined 'House of the King' and the 'house of the women.' These were separate yet adjacent to each other. Then there was 'the King's gate' where sat Mordecai the Jew. And, in among the debris, Dieulafoy even found a quadrangular prism or dice, on which were engraved the numbers one, two, five and six. With this 'die' or pur they cast lots—"They cast Pur, that is, the lot' is an explanation for the Jews as to how Haman 'cast lots' for fixing a date for the destruction of the Jews.

"It all made so profound an impression upon Dieulafoy that he made a scale model of the great palace in which had been enacted so many of the events in the Book of Esther, and placed it in the Museum of the Louvre in Paris. With these restorations, one can Thus we are aided in restoring the structural surroundings of the palace and in gaining a more exact acquaintance with the many events that took place there, and of seeing the marvelous accuracy of the Book of Esther."

In 1901 de Morgan's men uncovered three fragments of black diorite, "which when fitted together formed an impressive round-topped stele monument seven feet five inches high and proved to be the Laws of Hammurabi. At the top of the monument is a bas-relief showing Shamash the sun god in the act of giving the laws to King Hammurabi. Beneath the carving appears the lengthy code, inscribed in cuneiform script, and comprising some 282 statutes written in 3000 lines. Two hundred forty-eight of the statutes remain in a fairly good state of preservation, whereas from five to seven columns of the text at the bottom of the front side had been erased at some time previous to its discovery. Pere Jean Vincent Scheil, a brilliant French Assyriologist, translated and published the Code within three months. It soon came to be recognized as one of the most important legal documents that has come down to us from antiquity.

"The laws were preceded by a lengthy prologue in which Hammurabi honored the gods of the land and represented himself as a shepherd and 'a devout god-fearing prince' who caused the stele to be engraved and set up in a public place 'that the strong might not oppress the weak,' and that justice might 'prevail in the land.' Hammurabi's laws were for all the people of his realm—for the common man as well as for judges in deciding cases of law. Notice his reassuring appeal in his prologue:

> Let any oppressed man who has a cause come into the presence of the statue of me, the King of justice, and then read carefully my inscribed stele, and give heed to my precious words, and may my stele make the case clear to him; may he understand his cause; may he set his mind at ease.

"In the code that follows there is legislation governing almost every aspect of life's activities, other than that which was religious.

"The discovery of the cylinder was of singular importance to men everywhere, but especially to Bible scholars. First, it was evidence supporting the authenticity of Mosaic law. Critics had held that the art of writing and the science of law were unknown in that early period of history, but here was unquestionable evidence that both were well known many centuries before the time of Moses. Second, there are resemblances, even striking parallels, between some of Hammurabi's statutes and those of Moses in the Book of the Covenant. For example, in citing the law for personal injury, Hammurabi's statute 206 says:

> If a man wound another accidently in a quarrel with a stone or his fist, and oblige him to take his bed, he shall pay for the loss of his time and for the doctor. Moses' law for the same offense reads:

"If men quarrel and one hits the other with a stone or with his fist and he does not die but is confined to bed, the one who struck the blow . . . must pay the injured man for the loss of his time and see that he is completely healed" (Ex 21:18–19).

"The similarity between these and a few other statutes left the way open for certain critical scholars to advance the theory that Moses' laws of the Bible were largely derived from the Code of Hammurabi. After more careful examination, however, scholars in general have abandoned the theory, and are learning from other researches that in ancient times there were codes of law in various countries. Some of these were even older than Hammurabi's stele. The universal conscience within the breast of mankind has long declared to him that there is a right and a wrong, and that justice is the proper standard for humane treatment.

"Mosaic law is far superior to the Code of Hammurabi, or to any of the ancient codes of law, because of its high ethical standards, its stress upon the motive of love, both to God and to man, its demand for more humane treatment of slaves, the greater value placed upon human life, and the higher regard for womanhood. But basically, it is superior because it moves on a high moral and spiritual plane infinitely superior to all other codes. Moses taught the fact of sin within the human life and man's responsibility to God in respect to that sin; a fact that Hammurabi and other lawgivers failed entirely to comprehend. Hammurabi's code was exclusively civil and criminal, while Moses' law was ceremonial, religious, and deeply spiritual—being unique in this respect among law codes of all time."

4438–TAANACH, which lies on the edge of the Plain of Armageddon, midway between Megiddo and Jenin, was excavated in 1901–04 by Prof. Ernst Sellin who traced four levels of the mound. The earliest level dated from about 2500 to 1700 B.C., showing it to have been a city of some importance when Abraham came to Canaan.

After returning from Egypt, the Hebrews eventually took over Taanach (Jdg 1:27), and it was one of their supply cities during the reigns of David and Solomon (1Ki 4:12). Apparently Solomon placed some of his horses and chariots here, attested by the fact that excavators found lines of stone posts with tie holes, later identified as horse stables—similar to those found at Megiddo, Gezer, Hazor, and other strategic cities of Palestine. Taanach is listed on the Ammon temple walls at Thebes as one of the cities raided by King Shishak (Sheshonk I) during his invasion of Palestine in 922 B.C.

4439–TADMOR, called Palmyra by the Romans, is on the Syrian desert, in a fertile oasis 120 miles northeast of Damascus. It was built, or more probably rebuilt, by King Solomon as an outpost for trade and defense (2Ch 8:4), and in time became famed as a wealthy customhouse through which most of the caravans from Mesopotamia passed and paid their fees.

The city reached the height of its wealth, splendor, and power under King Odenathus (A.D. 255–67) and his wife and successor, Queen Zenobia. The story of how Rome was tempted by Tadmor's spectacular wealth, and of how she fought for the city but was unable to take it until in A.D. 273, is one of the most colorful in history.

More than a mile of its magnificent ruins above ground have astonished visitors during the past century. The more prominent of these were remnants of walls, a colonnade of rose-white limestone columns, an aqueduct, and its famous temple of the Sun.

4440–TAHPANHES, now called Tell Defneh, lies in the Egyptian delta, near Lake Manzaleh, nine miles west of the Suez Canal. After the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar appointed Gedaliah governor over the remnant of Judah. Shortly thereafter he was assassinated. Fearing reprisal by Nebuchadnezzar, Johanan, a surviving leader of the people, fled with the survivors of the massacre, including Jeremiah, to Tahpanhes (Jer 40:5; 41:1–3; 43:5, 7). Soon afterward an oracle of the Lord, predicting Egypt's overthrow, came through the prophet at Tahpanhes (Jer 43:8–11).

Critical scholars long denied that this prophecy of Jeremiah and similar ones pronounced by the prophet Ezekiel (29:19; 30:10) were ever fulfilled, since no secular historical records of an invasion of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar were known of. This situation changed with the discovery of a fragmentary cuneiform tablet, now in the British Museum, which states that Nebuchadnezzar indeed carried out a military campaign against Egypt in the thirty-seventh year of his reign, 568 B.C. Although the greater part of the tablet is lost and thus the record of the outcome of this campaign, there can be no doubt that Nebuchadnezzar's military venture was successful, fulfilling the prophet's predictions.

Tahpanhes, which played a role in Jeremiah's prophecy, was excavated by Flinders Petrie in 1886 in the mound called by the local Arabs The Palace of the Jew's Daughter. He discovered a platform complex in front of the ruin of a large garrison-like castle, which he took to be the ruins of "Pharaoh's House." Nearby, three cuneiform inscriptions of Nebuchadnezzar were found by Arabs, but the actual stones which Jeremiah hid have not yet been discovered.

4441–THEBES, the capital of Upper Egypt, is located about 418 miles south of the present city of Cairo. The Egyptians knew the place as No-Amon, or the city of Amon, because to them it was primarily the center of the worship of Amon, together with Mut the mother goddess, and Khonus the god of the moon. These three gods formed the Theban triad, and the power of Amon increased as he came to be identified with the ancient sun god Ra under the name of Amon-Ra, the king of the gods.

To the ancient world, Thebes was the symbol of splendor, and today it constitutes the greatest and most extensive set of ruins known.

Thebes, like ancient Babylon, was divided by a great river, the Nile. On the east side of the river lay the metropolitan city—the land of the living. Here on a broad and fertile plain were miles of streets thronged with people and chariots. These thoroughfares were lined with homes corresponding to the status of the family. There were villas of the nobles and palaces of the kings, each enclosed within walled gardens. There were business houses and transportation buildings near the wharves, into which came merchandise from Asia, Greece, and the Aegean Sea. But the temples towered above all else, and the grandest of these were the temple of Amon and the temple of Luxor. These were connected by a paved avenue seventy-six feet wide and a mile and a quarter long, known as The Avenue of the Sphinxes. On either side were palms, and beautiful gardens of flowers and shrubs, but the immediate border of the avenue was lined with almost one thousand human- and ram-headed sphinxes—nearly five hundred on each side.

The temple of Amon (known today as the temple of Karnak) was 338 feet wide and 1200 feet long—the largest ever built. It covered 200 acres and was enclosed by a stone wall said to have been 80 feet high.

The temple of Luxor, located at the southern end of the Avenue of Sphinxes, was dedicated to Amon, Mut, and Khonsu. Its entrance is formed by a thick-based pylon wall 80 feet high and 200 feet wide, the face of which is covered with "animated battle scenes" depicting war in ancient times. The overall length of the temple was 852 feet, and in the extreme southern area was the holy of holies, where they carried on the strange and often mystic ritual that characterized the worship of Amon, Mut, Khonsu, and other gods.

Western Thebes, which lay on the opposite bank of the Nile, was, for the most part, the City of the Dead. As in life the majority of people dwelt in eastern Thebes, so in death they were ferried westward across the Nile, where their bodies were prepared and laid away in graves, mastabas, pyramids, and hillside tombs. For three miles the park-like area unrolled like a great carpet to the approaches of the abrupt Libyan cliffs, which rose to a height of several hundred feet and were honeycombed for many miles with the tombs of the nobles and private citizens of many centuries. In two places the city of the dead overflowed through the narrow mountain passes into the secluded Valley of the Tombs of the Queens on the south, and the Valley of the Tombs of the Kings on the north. Here, for some two centuries, archaeologists have been uncovering tombs and rock-hewn chambers deep in the cliffs. The shortest one found has been 53 feet, while the tunnel leading to the tomb of Seti I extends into the mountainside for 470 feet. It has many rooms, the walls of which are crowded with impressive painted and sculptured scenes.

Of all the tombs of the kings (pharaohs) which have been found, however, that of King Tut (Tutankhamen) proved to be the richest and most rewarding. His burial quarters were a suite of four rooms. Two of these were crowded with chariots, fine furniture, curious looking boxes, artistically painted chests, and inlaid coffers filled with fine linens and silks and innumerable changes of every kind of rich clothing known to the royalty of that day. One elaborately decorated robe had nearly fifty thousand beads, and the entire surfaces of the sandals worn by the sentinels at the doorway were covered with pure gold decorations. Carter spent three weeks of painstaking effort inspecting, reconditioning, and caring for the many objects found in only one of these beautifully painted wooden chests, the outside of which he said "far surpassed anything of the kind that Egypt had produced." There were many chests of gems and jewels, fine bronze work, plaques of pearl, and gold almost everywhere.

The third room was the "treasure room," whose doorway was guarded by an ebony and gold figure of the jackal god, Anubis, crouched on top of a beautiful shrine. Behind him were boxes, shrines, model boats, another chariot, and a tier of wooden coffers, studded with gold and inlaid with faience. The treasure trove of this room was a large shrine-shaped chest mounted on a wooden sled. It was surmounted by a cornice of sacred cobras, inlaid with gold, and guarded at each of the four corners by a goddess whose outstretched arms enveloped the shrine in an attitude of protective care. When this was dismantled, there was found a smaller sled covered with a linen pall. Beneath this was a chest of transparent alabaster. Within this beautiful chest were four miniature inlaid gold coffins which contained the viscera of the king. This canopic shrine not only represented the highest attainment of the art of the Egyptian goldsmith and jeweler, but was a reminder of the ornate ark of the covenant made more than a century before at Mount Sinai by Moses and the Hebrew artisans.

The tomb room was still more beautiful. In it were four shrines, one within the other, each "similar in design and even more brilliant in workmanship." When Carter unsealed and drew back the bolts of the last door, he saw "an immense yellow quartzite sarcophagus, intact, just as the pious hands had left it." It was covered with religious inscriptions and pictures, and topped with a beautiful rose-granite lid. In low-relief at the four corners of the sarcophagus stood the four goddesses, Isis, Nephthys, Neith, and Selket, who spread protecting arms and wings "as if to ward off" any intruder attempting to disturb the sleeping king within. Under the 2500 pound lid and a linen shroud, was a magnificent golden effigy of the young king, filling the whole interior of the sarcophagus. The arms were crossed on the breast, and the hands held the golden flail and scepter (rod and staff), both adorned with lapis lazuli. Around the royal symbols on the forehead was a small wreath of flowers, the last farewell offering of the widowed young queen to her husband. This magnificent coffin enclosed a second, also mummiform and of equal beauty with the first. Within the second was a third and last, of solid gold and adorned with jewels. This mummiform casket weighed some 1800 pounds and its monetary value is almost undeterminable.

Under the last lid was the mummy of the king. Over his face was a gold portrait of the king, and about his mummified body were 143 objects—mostly gold or precious jewels.

4442–THESSALONICA, the second city in Europe to hear the preaching of Paul, and probably the first church to receive a letter from him, is now called Salonica. Situated on the great northern military highway from Italy to the east (known as the Egnation way), it was a strategic commercial and military center in Paul's day.

Luke tells us, in the original Greek version of Acts 17:6, 8, that the magistrates or officials of the city were called politarchs. For many years critical scholars pointed out that this term or title was not found in other Greek literature, and therefore Luke had made a mistake in using it.

Later, however, the title was found inscribed on various ruins in Thessalonica, the most prominent of which was on the arch of Vardar Gate, which spanned the Egnation Way, at the west entrance of the city. The inscription runs in part as follows:

> In the time of Politarchs, Sosipatros, son of Cleopatra, and Lucius Pontius Secundus Publius Flavius Sabinus, Demetrius, son of Faustus, Demetrius of Nicopolis, Zoilos, son of Parmenio, and Meniscus Gaius Agilleius Poteitus. . . .
> It named the six city officials who were head of the "peoples assembly."

Paul and Luke doubtlessly passed through this gateway and noted the inscription. Luke wrote correctly of the magistrates—calling them by a title apparently used only in that section of the country.

The arch was torn down during a riot in 1876, after which the inscription was acquired by the British and it is now in the British Museum.

4443–TIRZAH, now identified with a large mound known as Tell el Farah, lies seven miles northeast of Nablus. Sometime after the division of the monarchy, Jeroboam made this city the capital of his kingdom (1Ki 14:17), but after his death it suffered from many years of turbulent history. Omri besieged and captured it in 884 B.C. and reigned there for six years before he moved his capital to Samaria.

Pere de Vaux, of the Dominican Biblical School of Jerusalem, excavated there for several seasons after 1949, and found four periods corresponding with the biblical history of Tirzah. Period I (that of level III in the tell) came to a sudden end about the time Omri captured the place. During the period of Omri the house plans included courtyards and were quite substantial. Each represented the house of an Israelite family. Large administration buildings were shown to have been begun but not completed. This the excavator thought represented the city at the time Omri abandoned the place and moved his capital to Samaria.

The next city level belongs to the time of Amos and Hosea. There is a wide contrast in the houses—many were poor, while others bore the marks of being rich and ostentatious. Amos said of this generation, "You trample on the poor and force him to give you grain. Therefore, though you have built stone mansions, you will not live in them; though you have planted lush vineyards, you will not drink their wine" (Am 5:11). Hosea said, "Israel has forgotten his Maker and built palaces; Judah has fortified many towns. But I will send fire upon their cities that will consume their fortresses" (Hos 8:14).

This destruction the excavator dated 723 B.C., when Tirzah was captured and the town dismantled by the Assyrians. Another town arose on its ruins, but the inhabitants never again knew the same level of prosperity.

4444–TROAS, the city where, in a night vision, Paul saw the man of Macedonia saying, "Come over to Macedonia and help us" (Act 16:8–11), lies just a short way southwest of the ancient Troy of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey.

The ruins of Troas have been plundered for building purposes, but considerable remains of the walls, the theater, the temple, and the gymnasium are left. These give evidence of the city's importance, but nothing has been found to indicate where Paul had his vision.

4445–TYRE, the most famous seaport of ancient Bible lands, was located twenty miles south of Sidon, on an island three quarters of a mile from the mainland. It had two harbors, one on the north and one on the south, and its walls were exceedingly high, especially on the landward side.

Here artisans made bronze, silver, and other artistic wares, and here was manufactured the purple dye that made Tyre famous. Its merchants trafficked with the many lands of the Mediterranean and even with the far away British Isles. Tyre became a "city of renown, peopled by men of the sea" (Eze 26:17).

Kings and military men from many countries laid siege to Tyre, but were unable to take the city until, in 333 B.C., Alexander the Great besieged and took it after seven months. But Tyre rose slowly again and became a center of trade in Roman times. In recent centuries, however, the place has been small. Its harbors are strewn with ruins and are little more than "a place to spread fishnets" (Eze 26:14).

Taylor uncovered portions of a great temple-tower or ziggurat (the Mountain of Heaven) which ascended in three stages to a height of 70 feet. In each of its four corners was a niche in which were inscribed cylinders, or cornerstone records, giving the name of the city, its founder, and those who had rebuilt the ziggurat from time to time. In the rubbish-piled room of a nearby temple was a hoard of cuneiform tablets, in one of which King Nabonidus (556–536 B.C.) told of the building and repairing of the great ziggurat from time to time. There is also a prayer to Nannar, the moon god, for himself and for his eldest son, Belshazzar, that he would be "kept from sin" and "be satisfied with the abundance of life." These and other inscriptions confirm the biblical account of Belshazzar.

Hall cleared the southwest face of the mighty ziggurat and exposed more of the temple area.

Woolley completed the excavations around the great ziggurat and temples in the sacred area, then continued until he had laid bare four square miles of the city of Abraham's time. He found extensive quays, many commercial buildings, and numerous two-story homes with courts, fountains, fireplaces, and sanitary systems. Chapels for worship were scattered throughout the residential area, as well as school buildings with clay books—showing that they had taught reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar, and history. A large archive of temple records was found, which revealed that religion, including the temple services, was supported by gifts of the people and by commerce.

Sensational discoveries were made in the cemeteries. The royal tombs contained a wealth of objects made of gold, silver, lapis lazuli, and other less precious materials. In some tombs there were as many as 60 to 80 skeletal remains of escorts, guards, musicians, and retainers who had marched into the extensive death pit and died sacrificial deaths that they might accompany their king or queen into the afterlife.

The most significant find for Bible students was an eight foot water-laid stratum of clean clay and sand, with signs of occupation above and below—showing "a definite break in the continuity of the local culture." Of this the excavator said, "No ordinary rising of the rivers would leave behind it anything approaching the bulk of this clay bank . . . the flood which deposited it must have been of a great magnitude unparalleled in local history . . . There could be no doubt that the flood was the Flood of Sumerian history and legend—the Flood on which is based the story of Noah."

4447–ZAREPHATH, later known as Serepta, lies eight miles south of Sidon, on a small but attractive plain close to the shore. Its name means "melting houses," which indicates it was a place of furnaces—a chief center for the glass works of Phoenicia.

Its ruins, such as broken columns, slag heaps, and scattered fragments of ruined buildings, extend for a mile or more along the shore. It must have been a rather flourishing city in its glory, but now its human habitation has gone. A new village called Serepta lies two miles inland under the shelter of the hills.

4448–ZION. Mount Zion was the lower eastern hill of Jerusalem known as Ophel (2Ch 27:3; 33:14). Later, when Mount Moriah became the temple hill and the ark of the covenant was brought from the city of David to the temple, the name was transferred (1Ki 8:1; 2Ch 5:2). This became the Zion—the most significant of all sacred places to the prophets and others of those centuries. Of it Isaiah said:

Then the LORD will create over all of Mount Zion and over those who assemble there a cloud of smoke by day and a glow of flaming fire by night; over all the glory will be a canopy (Isa 4:5).

And Jeremiah said:

There will be a day when watchmen cry out on the hills of Ephraim, "Come, let us go up to Zion, to the LORD our God" (Jer 31:6).

And of Mount Zion, Zechariah says:

This is what the LORD Almighty says: "I am very jealous for Zion; I am burning with jealousy for her."

This is what the LORD says: "I will return to Zion and dwell in Jerusalem. Then Jerusalem will be called the City of Truth, and the mountain of the LORD Almighty will be called the Holy Mountain" (Zec 8:2–3).

The book of Jubilees also referred to the hill of Moriah, where the temple stood, as Mount Zion (Jub 4:26; 18:13).

In certain biblical writings, Zion is the equivalent of Jerusalem, the religious capital of the people of God. (Isa 28:16; Ro 9:33).

4449–ZOAN, which the Bible mentions as having been built seven years after Hebron (Nu 13:22), was a royal Egyptian store city, located 18 miles southeast of Damietta, near the mouth of the eastern branch of the Nile River. The Greeks called it Tanis, and apparently it was called Avaris by the Hyksos kings, who made it their capital until it was captured by Amosis I in 1580 B.C.

The site of Zoan is now called San el-Hagar, and was excavated by Mariette in 1860, Petrie in 1884, and by P. Montet in 1929. They found many statues, some sphinxes, and the extensive ruins of a very large temple. In this temple was a stele which bore the name of Rameses II (1290–1224 B.C.). He had enlarged and beautified the temple and the city, but, in keeping with his usual grandiose claims, he said that he "built" the place and called it Per-Rameses (House of Rameses). Here also was found a granite colossus which Rameses had made of himself. From mesurements of the broken fragments, Dr. Petrie calculated that the statue was 92 feet high—the highest and largest ever known to have been made of an individual.

4450–ZORAH, the home of Samson the strong man (Jdg 13:2, 25; 16:31), is now called Sur'ah, and is located 15 miles west of Jerusalem on a lofty hill north of the Valley of Sorek.

The Muslims have a strong, stone-built shrine here to the memory of Samson. It is usually spoken of as "the home of Samson." Nearby is a remarkable rock altar, built as the Hebrews would build an altar in the time of the judges. Many authorities believe that this could well be the altar where Manoah presented a burnt offering, and from which the angel ascended "toward heaven" (Jdg 13:19–20).

4451—HE´BREW CAL´EN-DAR, THE.

In Scripture (until the captivity at least) dates are often fixed by a reference to the seasons, and to agriculture, because the Hebrew year was divided according to natural phenomena exclusively. It combined therefore the solar and lunar year. The months began with the new moon, but the first month was fixed (after the Exodus and by the necessities of the Passover) by the ripening of the first corn (barley). Watchmen announced to the priests at Jerusalem the first appearance of the new moon (Jer 31:6), which, being duly attested, was proclaimed by a blast of trumpets, and beacon fires. (N. B. Three years, from two at least of the northern, central and southern districts of Palestine, were required for the determination of the Passover month). The lunar month averaging 29½ days, a year of 12 months of 30 and 29 days alternately naturally resulted; but this involved a variation of 11 and 22 days alternately in 18 out of 19 years. To reconcile this lunar year with the year of the seasons, a 13th month must be inserted about once in three years. This the Jews probably intercalated before the first month; i.e., in what would seem a backward season, for they now call it Veadar, or the 2nd Adar; but it is not mentioned in the Bible. Thus their practice approximated roughly to the Metonic cycle (adopted by the modern Jews about A. D. 360), in which a year of 13 months is inserted in seven (intercalary) out of a cycle of 19 years. In the subjoined Calendar, it is assumed, as usual, that the first month of the Hebrew ecclesiastical year, Abib or Nisan, answers nearly to half March and half April; the earliest possible commencement of the lunar year being on our March 5th.

Concordance

The Revised Concordance and how it may be used in Topical Study with the Thompson Chain-Reference® Bible Helps

To facilitate the combined use of the various features in this Bible, many of the main topics in the concordance are cross-referenced to the Comprehensive Bible Helps by topic numbers. These references, in parentheses following the main entries, are to the appropriate sections in the Helps.

The most common use of a concordance is that of finding a certain verse or passage in the Bible by looking up one of its key words. A concordance is not ideal for topical study, however, since it lists only the actual words used in Scripture. Some very important terms for Christians—such as Bible and the Trinity—do not even occur in Scripture, although the truths they represent are central in the teaching of Scripture. These and many other such words could never be found in a concordance, but are readily found in the General Index—along with many cross-references to related words and topics. Many promises in the Bible do not have the word promise in them and would be impossible to find with a concordance. The General Index, however, not only directs you to virtually all of God's promises, but divides them into over forty categories.

Always use the concordance in conjunction with the General Index. If you want to study a subject comprehensively, you have the double advantage of the concordance and the other helps. For example, "Christ" has a large number of references in the concordance. The Index of Chain Topics has many additional references—with most of the Scripture verses printed out in full. If you want to study only a particular part of Christ's nature or teaching or work, you may check under the many subtopics given alphabetically in the General Index.

The General Index also gives help in how to study. Under the heading "Bible," for instance, you are referred to the Thompson features that give help in its systematic and thorough study—Analyses of Books of the Bible, The Origin and Growth of the English Bible, Condensed Outlines of the Bible, Periods of Bible History, and others.

This concordance, the Index of Chain Topics, and the General Index, used together, can greatly enrich your study and appreciation of God's Word.

INTRODUCTION TO THE NIV CONCORDANCE

The NIV Concordance, created by John R. Kohlenberger III and Edward W. Goodrick, has been developed specifically for use with the New International Version. Like all concordances, it is a special index which contains an alphabetical listing of words used in the Bible text. By looking up key words, readers can find verses and passages for which they remember a word or two but not their location.

This concordance contains 2,000 word entries, with some 13,000 Scripture references. Each word entry is followed by the Scripture references in which that particular word is found, as well as by a brief excerpt from the surrounding context. The first letter of the entry word is italicized to conserve space and to allow for a longer context excerpt. Variant spellings due to number and tense and compound forms follow the entry in parentheses, and direct the reader to check other forms of that word in locating a passage.

This concordance contains a number of "block entries," which highlight some of the key events and characteristics in the lives of certain Bible figures. The descriptive phrases replace the brief context surrounding each occurrence of the name. In those instances where more than one Bible character has the same name, that name is placed under one block entry, and each person is given a number (1), (2), etc. Insignificant names are not included.

Word or block entries marked with an asterisk (*) list every verse in the Bible in which the word appears.

It is the prayer of its authors that this concordance will be used to introduce readers to the full scope of God's truth in every book of the Bible.

Division IV. Points of Interest in Old Testament and New Testament Jerusalem, Maps 9 & 10

Division V. Land Features including Mountains, Hills, Valleys, Islands, Deserts, Wildernesses, etc.

Division VI. Water Features including Oceans, Seas, Lakes, Rivers, Brooks, Springs, Wadis, etc.

NOTE.—Figures preceding a hyphen denote the map numbers; the figure or figures and letter following the same hyphen indicate the space on the map or maps where the place, town, city, region, mountain, etc. is located. The archaeological sites on maps 1 and 2 have the number of the article in the "ARCHAEOLOGICAL SUPPLEMENT" given so that you can turn back and read what Dr. Owen has written about the place after you have located it on the map. For example the town of Accho is listed along with the more recent name of "Ptolemais" in brackets followed by the number in the "SUPPLEMENT". Thus: Accho (Ptolemais) 4324, 1–A2, 4, 6, 8–B2, 5–C2, 7–E2.

NOTE.—Present day or modern names on most maps are listed in brackets following the Biblical or ancient names.

The following abbreviations are used in the Scripture Index: L. for Lake, Mt. for Mountain, T. for Tell or Mound, W. for Wadi or Brook, R. for River, Kh for ruin. A ? after a city or place indicates that the location is still uncertain.

Places listed in Capital Letters are Tribes, Regions, Countries, Deserts and Continents.
